VOLUMN XXII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1945 — NUMBER 1

January 14th Opens Drive Infantile Paralysis

At this time of year the Foundation for Infantile Paralysis begins their drive for funds to carry on this important organization. The vital work of the National Foundation and of its chapters are supported solely through voluntary contributions. The National Foundation and the American people realize that only through these contributions can final and complete victory over this dreaded disease be achieved.

In 1944 the United States experienced its second worst epidemic. Many of these thousands of patients will require treatment for months, some even for years, and it is not only the cases of last year who must receive aid. There remains the vast total of victims of former years.

No preventive or cure has yet been found—there is only treatment. Adequate treatment and care of the infantile paralysis patient is costly—too expensive for the average family. It requires an average of $1,800 to give a year's care and modern methods of treatment to one patient alone. The average cost per case for only a day's treatment is more than the average wage. This disease strikes in this wealthy home, that tenement, farm homes, war production centers, children of our fighting men, small and large towns.

The local chapter of the National Foundation receives 50 percent of the funds raised and will offer its assistance to the agency, hospital, clinic or private physician to render such services as it can. If the patient is not known to be under medical care, again the chapter will offer its assistance in attempting to place all cripples of all ages under medical supervision. The chapter will render financial aid to the patient where needed for surgical, nursing, hospital or other care.

The Chilton County Chapter, supported by the people of this area are pledged to give thought and time to this appeal. This is your opportunity to help others, not only here in Chilton County, but in other parts of the country where treatment is needed for polio patients.

Chairman for Chilton County—Mrs. W. H. Klinner; Co-Chairman — Mrs. N. S. Johnson; Treasurer—Mr. A. N. Latrell.

Co-Chairmen: Mrs. Leo Langston, Jemison; Mrs. Anna Phalin, Thorsby; Mrs. Q. C. Meroney, Verbena; Miss Blossom Crumpton, Maplesville; Miss Elsie Schurter, Stanton; Mrs. E. G. Caldwell, Fletcher; Miss Mary Henderson, Mt. Creek; Mrs. J. G. Newton, Mitchell Dam; Miss Ruth Primm, Lay Dam; Mrs. Amye C. LeCroy, Isabella Community.

ARCHERS CHAPEL

The regular preaching service will be held this next Sunday afternoon, January 7th, at 2:30 o'clock. Plans will be made for the next community meeting.

F. O. Barnett Died Of Exposure

Fonzy Oscar Barnett, age 53, was found dead Sunday near his home in the northern part of the county. He had been dead for probably three weeks. He was found by George Headley a neighbor, while walking through the woods. Coroner J. Mell Martin stated that his verdict was "death from exposure".

Funeral services were held Monday with burial at Rocky Mount Cemetery by the side of his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Barnett. J. Mell Martin & Sons were in charge.

HERBERT KLINNER GOES TO FURNITURE MARKET

Herbert Klinner, who operates Furniture Stores in Talladega, Tuscaloosa, Wetumpka and Clanton, has gone to the Chicago markets to buy furniture. Mrs. Klinner is accompanying him on the trip this year.

QUICK FREEZE PLANT FORMAL OPENING

The Clanton Quick Freeze Plant will celebrate their formal opening week after next. The county papers will carry next week advs. of congratulations and well wishes for this newest of Chilton County interprises. If you are interested in expressing your wishes for the success of this Chilton County Intitution get in touch with Hollis Jackson, or either of your County newspapers.

CHILTON COUNTY DIVISION AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR CONTROL OF CANCER ORGANIZED

The Kiwanis Club was host in December to three prominent leaders in the control of cancer: Mrs. Sophia L. Jones, Mrs. Ray Meade and Dr. E. M. Moore. Mrs. Jones, County Commander of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, said the local organization was ready to take up the fight against cancer.

The aims of the American Society for the Control of Cancer were outlined by Mrs. Ray Meade of Birmingham, State Commander. The State, District and County divisions of the national organizations are working in close cooperation with medical associations and departments of public health. Everyone should know a few simple facts concerning the diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

In Alabama last year, the State Legislature made a special appropriation for cancer control. Cancer clinics, providing free diagnosis and treatment for those unable to pay, have been established in Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile, Anniston and Selma.

In Chilton County Mrs. Jones finds that the people are eager to help in the control of cancer. The local papers have assured their support in the publicity program. Dr. E. M. Moore, County Health Officer, pledged the closest cooperation of the department of health. The Kiwanis Club endorsed the work 100%. Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer, well-acquainted in the county, has consented to be treasurer. Committees to assist in promoting the work will be named in the near future.

A great advancement of cancer control in Chilton County under the able leadership of the County Commander and cooperating agencies, was predicted by Mrs. Meade, State Commander.

NEW YEAR DAY PASSES QUIETLY IN CLANTON

Unsettled weather marked the coming in of 1945 in Clanton. Things in general were very quiet. Local Highway Patrolmen caught a stolen automobile on the Selma Highway in the afternoon. The automobile was stolen in Birmingham two or three hours earlier. The driver was arrested and returned there. No fires were reported, no drunks were arrested, no traffic violations were reported. As mentioned before, New Year's Day in Clanton was very quiet.

WHERE THEY ARE AND HOW THEY ARE

LOCAL MARINE WOUNDED IN ACTION ON GUAM

Marine Corporal William M. Woodfin, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Woodfin, 105 Third Avenue, was wounded while leading his squad against the Japs on Guam.

The enemy was sighted moving down a jungle trail along the coastline and Woodfin ordered his men to hold their fire until the Japs were only 20 yards away. Then, he stepped to the edge of the trail and directed the ambush maneuver which destroyed the entire group of Japs. During the battle, he was hit by a Jap bullet.

It didn't stop the Marine immediately.

"For a few seconds after I was hit, I felt scared and excited," he said. "But I got hold of myself finally and sent a fire team around to flank the Japs on the right. They finished off the job. Then I was carried out on a stretcher made of dungaree jackets and a couple of poles."

Cpl. Woodfin, who is being treated for his wound at a Pacific base Naval hospital, also fought in the Bougainville campaign with a unit of the Third Marine Division. Before entering the service, he was employed by the E. T. Haas and Co., of Bedford, Ore. He attended Chilton County High School.

SGT. CHARLES M. GRIFFIN

Sgt. Charles M. Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Griffin of the Isabella community, and who is now somewhere in Germany, belongs to a Division that has made a remarkable record in this war. The Old Hickory Division has fought from the beaches of Normandy all across France and help establish a bridgehead in the fatherland. It would take columns to tell of the feats of this "outfit" and we are not permitted the space here, but suffice it to say their record is one of the best and the part played by the 30th Division in the war will go down in history.

THOMAS FRANKLIN S 1-C

A nice letter comes from Thomas Franklin, S 1-C, who is stationed aboard the Frank Adair Monroe. We better not tell you where he is because of the censors, but he says that he is doing fine and wants his friends to write to him. His address: Thomas Franklin S 1-C, Frank Adair Monroe, in care Fleet P. O., New Orleans, La.

First Lieutenant George E. Kyser, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Kyser of Camden, Alabama, has won the Air Medal for "meritorious achievement" during Eight Air Force bombing attacks on military and industrial targets in Nazi Germany.

Lt. Kyser is a graduate of Isabella High School, and was a student in Vanderbilt University before entering the AAF in September, 1941. His wife, Mrs. Marjorie Mae Kyser, lives at Rome, Ga.

Tommie Lou Sexton, formerly of Marbury, Ala., is now in the WAVES, stationed at Pensacola, Fla. Tommie Lou had many friends here in Clanton and I am sure they all miss her terribly, but wish her much success in the Service of her country.

Friends who wish to write to her, may do so at this address: Tommie L. Sexton, S 1-C (Y) Bldg. 1213 NAAS Barin Field, NATB, Pensacola, Fla.

S-Sgt. Jack King, whose parents now reside at Sylacauga, Ala., arrived here last week from three years in Italy.

Sgt. King, who formerly lived in Clanton, will be with his parents in Sylacauga and friends here for twenty-one days before returning to duty.

Although it was just a few days late, we were happy to get a nice Christmas greeting from S-Sgt. Stew-

Death Takes Mrs. J. R. Jones

Mrs. Duma Jones, age 49, died Tuesday morning at her home on Selma Road. Funeral services were held Wednesday from the Clanton Baptist Church, conducted by Rev. Roswell Owens. J. Mell Martin & Sons were in charge.

Pallbearers were: Lester and Otis Jones, Paul Williamson, Grady Heflin, M. L. White and Dick Bean.

Surviving are the husband, J. R. Jones of Clanton; two sisters, Mrs. Lena Turner and Mrs. Dovie Esco of Birmingham; one brother, E. M. Varden of Birmingham; mother, Mrs. Mattie Varden, of Clanton.

A. REEDIE TAYLOR IN CHICAGO

Reedie Taylor, operator of the Chicago Sales Company, has gone to Chicago to do his Spring buying. Mr. Taylor also operates a store in La-Fayette, Ala.

STUDY CLUB TO MEET WITH MRS. ROBERTS

Mrs. Norman L. Roberts will be hostess to the Study Club next Friday afternoon, January 5th, at 3:00 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

A well-planned closet where children can take care of their toys as well as clothes will help to teach them habits of neatness.

art E. Armstrong, who is in Camp Swift, Texas, with the 1563rd Engineer Depot Co.

Sgt. Armstrong's greeting almost made me wish that I had been in the Army. It read like a menu: "Merry Christmas, Roast Turkey with Country Dressing, Giblet Gravy, Cranberry Sauce, Snowflak Potatoes, Fresh Peas, Candies, Sweets, Sweet Pickles, Olives, Iced Celery, Lettuce and Sliced Tomatoes, Mince Pie, Layer Cake, Ice Cream, Mixed Nuts, Fruits, Assorted Candy, Hot Rolls, Butter, Coffee, Fruitade."

That doesn't sound like a bad Christmas dinner at all to me, and I sincerely hope that everyone of the Servicemen had just as nice a dinner as Sgt. Armstrong.

RECEIVES PURPLE HEART

Cpl. Claudie R. Glenn, Jr., has been given the Purple Heart, which he sent to his wife, Mrs. Frances Smith Glenn.

The Medal was awarded to Cpl. Glenn for wounds received in action in France.

He has now recovered from wounds and returned to duty with the Infantry somewhere in France.

WOUNDED IN ACTION

Among the U. S. Army Personnel wounded in action in the Central Pacific Area, released for Publication January 4, is Pfc. Leon Noah, whose mother, Mrs. Eliza Noah resides at her residence on Route 5, Clanton.

Wounded in the European Area was Pvt. Walter L. Duncan, whose father, William P. Dunnam, lives on Route One, Verbena, Ala.

Sgt. James Duke Heflin of Camp Sibert, Gadsden, received his promotion from Pfc. last week and visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Grady Heflin, over the week end.

Griel Popwell and Donald Roberts of the U. S. Navy have been spending a few days here with parents and friends.

Noel Morgan left this week for the U. S. Navy and will be stationed at Great Lakes, Ill., for his "boot" training.

S-Sgt. J. Hershell Penton, who has served thirteen months in the Italian Theatre of operations with B-26 Marauder Group, completed sixty-five missions and returned here to visit his family, Mrs. Delene McDowell Penton, and their six-months-old daughter, Linda.

Sgt. Penton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Penton of Clanton Route 3.

High School Parent-Teachers Association Meets

The parent-teachers association of the high school will meet Tuesday evening, January 9th, at 7:30 o'clock. This meeting is being held at night so the fathers of the high school students may attend. Each father who is a patron of the high school, or any one interested in the education of our boys and girls, is cordially invited to be present at this meeting.

An interesting program is being planned which is to include some numbers by the high school glee club, and the home economics girls are planning to serve refreshments after the meeting.

If you have a child in the high school this year the members of the parent-teachers association urge you to attend this one meeting if you do not attend another one this year.—Mrs. J. E. Gowan, President.

U. S. ARMED FORCES REACH ALL-TIME HIGH

This country's armed forces have increased to 11,900,000 since 1940. Of that number 8,100,000 were in the Army; the remainder in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guards.

The figures, compiled as of November 1, were presented recently to a Senate committee and given today in a report of War Mobilization Director Byrnes.

Byrnes cited them in emphasizing the "remarkable job in mobilization" since 1940. At that time the military strength was 700,000.

The 11,900,000 was a net estimate after deducting 1,500,000 for discharged and killed.

TRAIN WRECK IN UTAH COOK 50 LIVES

Swelled by a train wreck in Utah which took about 50 lives, the New Year's death toll Monday was at least 168 for the three-day week end.

The train wreck occurred Sunday morning when a second section of a westbound Southern Pacific train rammed the rear of the first section of the Limited near Ogden, Utah.

Traffic accidents led in the cause of holiday deaths, accounting for 57 lives. Thirty-five persons, including five children and three adults in Columbus, Ind., died in fires. Miscellaneous causes resulted in 26 other deaths.

Two hundred and forty-two were killed during the New Year's holiday last year, 150 from traffic causes.

JANUARY 15TH LAST DAY FOR FILING AMENDED DECLARATION

Dr. Henry J. Willingham, Collector of Internal Revenue, reminded taxpayers in this district today that January 15 is the deadline for filing original or amended 1944 Declarations of Estimated Tax and for paying installments on previously-filed declarations for 1944.

Nearly all farmers are required to file original 1944 declarations by January 15. Most other taxpayers who were required to file 1944 declarations did so last April, but those who underestimated their tax by more than 20 per cent should file amended declarations to avoid the penalty for substantial underestimates. January 15th, likewise, is the last day for paying all installments due on 1944 declarations.

Dr. Willingham also called attention to the new provision of law which permits a taxpayer to file his annual income tax return for 1944 and pay the tax due on the return by January 15, instead of filing or paying "estimated tax" otherwise due at that time. Taxpayers availing themselves of this special provision will be saved the double duty of filing and paying "estimated tax" on January 15 and filing and paying on the annual return March 15. March 15 remains the regular deadline for filing 1944 annual returns and 1945 Declarations of Estimated Tax.

Gold or silver-trimmed dishes should be washed with mild soap. Strong soaps, ammonia, or washing soda will destroy metal trim.

Fan—What's horse sense?

Jockey—It's what keeps a horse from betting on people!

Burglar Falls Asleep At Bedside of Victim

SEATTLE, WASH.—D. L. McLeod awoke at 2 a. m. with the feeling that something was amiss. It was, too, $25 gone from his wallet. As he turned on the light for a more thorough investigation, there was the burglar only a few feet away, sound asleep. But the burglar was a light sleeper. He made a hurried retreat —still with the $25.

Blinded in Fight, He Lands Safely

Air Pilot, Wounded in Eyes, Brings Plane Home.

EIGHTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS. — A flak burst caught Mustang Pilot Lieut. Lyle M. Wright of Buffalo, N. Y., over Germany, wounded him in the shoulder and sprayed glass fragments in his eyes.

He could see dimly above him but was unable to turn his eyes in any other direction.

He radioed his companions on the mission:

"I've been hit in the eyes and can see only upwards. I'm going to hit the silk."

Lieut. Bill Stickton, 24, of Orion, Ill., pilot of another Mustang, went to his rescue.

"Don't jump," Stockton radioed back. "Wait until I get in position above you. You can fly back on me."

With eyes on the sky, Wright followed Stockton's overhead plane back across the channel to an English base. Stockton coached him on the landing.

Wright's plane came in fast on the narrow strip of the runway, touched the surface and bounced and then settled as his sensitive fingers brought it to a safe stop.

It was found that Wright's canopy was jammed so tightly by the flak that he would have been unable to bail out anyway.

Wright's wife, Mrs. Edna Wright, was notified by the war department September 21 that he had been injured seriously September 9.

The sight of one of Wright's eyes was jeopardized for a while, but his other injuries were slight.

'Voice' Told Him to Slay, Killer of Wife Relates

NEW YORK. — Lewis Wolfe, diminutive 37-year-old Canadian who killed his pretty, red-haired wife to fill a Biblical pact, told recently of a strong voice that whispered in his ear, telling him to slay her because she had sinned.

Wolfe, who plucked at his face nervously with his left hand, the wrist bandaged where he attempted to commit suicide in his jail cell by slashing it with his broken spectacles, was overcome by the telling of his story.

His wife, a former dancer who came to his home in Palestine first as governess for his two children, dared him to carry out their prenuptial pact that gave the offended mate the right to take the life of one who broke their vow of fidelity, he said.

Wolfe said he tried to sleep then tried to read.

"I read our favorite Psalms. Then something snapped in my right temple. A strong voice spoke in my left ear. It said, 'Kill her. Pick up that black shoe and strike her once. Strike her twice. Strike her again and again.'"

Wolfe killed his wife with repeated blows on the head with a heavy cleated shoe. Then, Wolfe said, he called police and told them what he had done.

$152,000,000 of Civilian Goods Production O. K'd

WASHINGTON. — The War Production board announced that it had authorized $152,441,000 worth of civilian production in 772 manufacturing plants having labor and machinery not needed for war work.

Included are $10,735,000 worth of vacuum cleaners, $35,971,000 worth of bed springs and inner spring mattresses, and $15,537,000 worth of household aluminum ware to be made over the next 12 months.

Consumers' durable goods accounted for more than two-thirds of the total volume of products approved. Among the items are $874,000 worth of lawn mowers, $655,000 worth of typewriters, $1,629,000 worth of electric irons in addition to production previously approved, a few bicycles, silverware, furniture, electric lamps, office supplies, church goods, fountain pens, mechanical pencils, jewelry and sporting goods.

United States Army Will Open Schools in Europe

PARIS. — The U. S. army is going to open service high schools and universities in France and England when the war in Europe ends so that soldiers may resume their education as soon as possible, it was announced recently.

Seventy-five thousand teachers will be rounded up from the army. Arrangements are being made with schools and colleges in the United States to honor army school credits.

Courses are being arranged in conjunction with the University of Paris and thousands on completion of army studies will be eligible to attend the Sorbonne.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

IT'S the real Deanna Durbin whom you'll see in "Can't Help Singing"; the picture's in technicolor, so Deanna's hair is golden, not the darker shade created for her black and white films. But the star will have to vie with the landscape, for this super-Western was made against the spectacularly beautiful scenery of Utah. The turquoise blue Navajo lake could offer competition to any actress. Deanna rated the best in music, too; her songs were written by Jerome Kern, author of the music for "Show Boat" and many other hits, and the lyrics are by E. Y. Harburg, who turned out the verses for the songs in "Bloomer Girl," New York's newest musical hit.

During the first eight weeks of "To Have and Have Not," at a New York theater, 350,000 persons paid to see the Humphrey Bogart-Lauren Bacall opus. The Bogart admirers swarmed in by thousands, many others came to see the new starlet.

Johnny Coy and Miriam Franklin rehearsed for three and a half months for the dance they do in "Duffy's Tavern"—two weeks longer than it took Fred Astaire and Marjorie Reynolds to prepare their routines for "Holiday Inn." Incidentally Johnny, recently signed by Paramount, is being hailed as a combination of Astaire and Gene Kelly, because of his performance in "Out of This World."

John Cromwell has a reputation as a director who brings out hidden talent and develops stars; he's the man who made Bette Davis a star in "Of Human Bondage." In "Since You Went Away" several newcomers give outstanding performances. Now along comes "The Enchanted Cottage"—see it and keep an eye on Eden Nicholas, Martha Holliday, Virginia Belmont, Nancy Marlow, Robert Clarke, Bill Williams and Carl Kent. Maybe you'll be in on the development of a new star.

Wally Cassell, playing a lighthearted G.I. whom the girls go for in "G.I. Joe," the Ernie Pyle picture, owes his screen career to Mickey Rooney. Rooney saw him in a Los Angeles cafe, got him a screen test and a contract with Metro.

"Brother Al" Helfer, former Mutual Broadcasting System sports announcer and honorably discharged lieutenant commander of the navy, has the latest Cinderella story to tell. While strolling through the corridor of New York's 20th Century-Fox office to audition as a commentator, he was spotted by a talent scout. Result, a technicolor screen test and a long-term contract for the handsome, six-foot five Al. But don't look for him on the screen under that name—it'll probably be changed before he faces the cameras.

Larry Stevens, the 21-year-old lad who replaced Dennis Day as singer on the Jack Benny program, is extra pleased about that contract because now he can marry his high school sweetheart, Barbara Williams, Universal contract player.

You'd think Dick Haymes would be content, what with his "Everything for the Boys" air show over NBC and his starring role opposite Betty Grable in 20th Century-Fox's "Diamond Horseshoe." But now he's studying short-story writing!

ODDS AND ENDS—Danny Kaye is now starring on his own air show on CBS. . . . We're told that Cornelia Otis Skinner and Roland Young may come back in a radio series like their "William and Mary." . . . Archduke Felix of Austria told Joan Fontaine that the best movie he'd seen was "Going My Way." . . . Judy Canova is now appearing on a new series over NBC. . . . There's still popular demand for another Phil Baker show with Beetle and Bottle; Beetle is Ward (Stage Door Canteen) Wilson, and Bottle is Harry (It Pays to Be Ignorant) McNaughton. . . . There's no need to identify Phil (Take It or Leave It) Baker.

Jolly Duck for Toy Or Lawn Ornament

THIS wheelbarrow is easy to make from scraps of lumber. The wheel is cut out of wood and held in place with a bolt. You may be able to salvage a metal wheel from some discarded toy. The ducks are cut out of plywood with a jig saw or by hand with a coping saw. You may like to outline the ducks onto the wood and take it to your nearest woodworker to be cut. They are then nailed to the sides of the wheelbarrow and the fun of painting and stenciling begins. You just trace the pattern on the wood and follow the color chart to get that wise expression in their big black eyes and the life-like yellow bills and feet.

NOTE—Pattern 258 gives an actual-size cutting and painting pattern for the large wheelbarrow ducks and for smaller ducks to be used for lawn ornaments or applique designs. Large diagrams showing how to cut and assemble the wheelbarrow and a complete list of materials required are included. Ask for pattern 258 and enclose 15 cents with name and address, direct to:

A Double Life

By ELEANOR WALSH
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Features.

WHEN Corinna Hastings, librarian of Postville, looked up from the desk one morning and saw Mrs. Angela Murdock sailing toward her angrily, she was reasonably certain something was amiss. She mustered a feeble smile and said an unconvincing "Good Morning."

"For me, Miss Hastings," snapped Mrs. Murdock, "this has been a very unpleasant morning." She tapped her finger on the desk. "I," she said, "have just read 'The Flaming Soul.'"

"Oh!" Into that syllable Corinna tried to put good cheer, friendship, everything that was amiable. But Mrs. Murdock's expression did not change.

"And what I should be interested to hear," the lady went on, "is just why that particular book was put in this library. This is," she declaimed, "an institution which endeavors to provide suitable reading matter for the young. I can only regard 'The Flaming Soul' as a work that will definitely be harmful."

"I am terribly sorry," Corinna apologized. "I'm afraid I haven't read the book." This was perfectly true. She had only glanced with some interest at the description of its contents on the paper jacket. "I heard from several people that it was quite good," she offered weakly. "And on the strength of that I ordered it."

"You're quite right, Miss Hastings." There was no mistaking the menace in Mrs. Murdock's tone. "It was brought to my attention by Miss Keller, and I believe Mrs. Spellman mentioned it to her. Both were shocked. Miss Keller brought it to me this morning and I considered it my duty to read the whole thing. I wanted to see what was being placed in the hands of our young people."

"I don't know what to say," said Corinna.

"I've called a meeting of the Library Board at my house this evening at eight. I suggest you attend. Meanwhile, I'll leave this copy here, and you can make yourself familiar with its contents. You'll be asked for an explanation of your conduct."

Corinna groaned when the lady left. It was bad enough to face any member of the board singly, but together—horrors! For a few minutes she thought of cutting loose, resigning her position, going to New York. But this incident hardly seemed to warrant any such action. Not yet, anyway. And her family would hate to see her go. There was another reason for staying, too, and his name was Jack. No, there was nothing to do but face the music and hope it wouldn't be too unpleasant. She smiled. She could picture the three women reading with gasps of pleasurable horror, and then preventing others from enjoying the same privilege. The book itself she placed behind the desk until she learned what its fate was to be.

The board meeting was as she had expected, only worse. Mrs. Murdock still acted like a volcano undecided whether to erupt or hold its fire. Mrs. Spellman maintained a dignified silence, preferring to signify disapproval by a series of indignant snorts. Miss Keller flushed when the title was mentioned and let it be understood that she had martyred herself by reading it. "It was an experience," she said, "that I should have preferred to miss."

"Certainly," Mrs. Murdock said. "I, for one, felt I wanted to fumigate my mind after I had finished it." Corinna waited till she was spoken to.

"The point is," Mrs. Spellman said finally, "what are we going to do with the volume? It was your duty, Miss Hastings, to know something of it before sending an order."

Corinna spoke so contritely, thanking the ladies for discovering the nature of the book before it had a chance to harm young readers, that the women were softened. "But of course it must be removed from the library at once," Mrs. Murdock said more pleasantly. "I think we must insist upon that."

The others murmured, "Of course." And Corinna agreed.

"That brings up another question," said Miss Keller. "It was bought with public funds allowed for the library. Have we the right to confiscate it without paying? I think not. I am willing to give what it cost simply to keep it off the shelves." She told Corinna that she would call for it in the morning, and pay at that time.

"I think we need say no more," Mrs. Murdock told Corinna. This suited Corinna. She thanked them and left.

In her room, after the rest of the family had retired, she opened a drawer and pulled a letter from its hiding place. With a smile she reread it.

"Dear Miss Hastings:" (it began)

"You will be pleased to know that it seems as if your novel, 'The Flaming Soul,' will sell like a house afire. Already we are justified in another printing. What name do you wish us to use on your first check? We will issue it with a financial statement as soon as possible, and meanwhile we trust you are hard at work on your next—"

Corinna smiled more brightly. She was

Sugar Substitutes Come Into Limelight After the Holidays

Pears and other fruit may be stewed or baked with very little additional sugar because the fruit is so sweet in itself. Fruit desserts are kind to low-on-sugar budgets.

Sugar-Shy Sweets

Have the holidays exhausted your supply of sugar and sweets? Today's collection of recipes is especially planned for the low sugar budget, for strange though it may seem, there are many foods which can be fixed with a minimum of sugar.

Try packaged mixes, dried fruits, candied fruits, and the sugar substitutes if the sugar canister is getting empty. There are many packaged fillings which will relieve sugar from being used in pie and cake fillings, and these come in a variety of flavors.

Substitute as many of the fresh fruits for dessert as possible, and if they are baked, sweeten with maple or corn syrup. If your favorite cookie recipes call for one cup of sugar, use ¾ of a cup. They will be just as good, if a little less sweet:

Marble Molasses Cake.
½ cup butter or substitute
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs beaten
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup milk
2 teaspoons allspice
3 tablespoons molasses

Have all ingredients at room temperature. Measure out flour, sugar, salt and butter in bowl. Beat for 2 minutes. Add eggs and milk and beat for another two minutes. Take out one-third of batter and mix with molasses and allspice. Drop by spoonfuls into greased loaf pan, alternating light and dark mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for 1 hour. Serve plain or frosted.

Angel Cake.
1½ cups light corn syrup
5 egg whites
5 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup sifted flour
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt

Boil syrup until it forms a soft ball when tested in cold water. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry, pour syrup over them slowly, continue beating. Add lemon juice and vanilla. Beat this mixture until it holds its shape. Fold in egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored. Fold in sifted dry ingredients. Bake in large ungreased tube pan in a slow oven (300 deg.) until well browned and done, about 60 minutes. Invert on rack until cake loosens. Ice with following:

Lynn Says:

Sugar-Savers: When stewing fresh or dried fruits or making fruit sauces, add sugar or syrup just a few minutes before cooking is finished. Don't forget to add a pinch of salt to the fruit while it cooks. Both these little tricks will help make the fruit seem sweeter without using up a great deal of sugar.

Dried fruits are rich in sweetening and may be made into fruit whips without any sugar. Simply stew the fruit, cook and put through a sieve. Beat two egg whites until stiff and use ½ cup of dark corn syrup beaten into them. The amount of fruit puree required for this amount of egg white-syrup mixture is ¾ cup.

Since powdered sugar is more readily obtained than the granulated type, use it in icings. Powdered sugar is especially good when mixed in the proportion of one cup to a three-ounce package of cream cheese and flavored with orange juice.

*Ginger Pudding
*Recipe given.

Sugarless Icing.
1 egg white, unbeaten
½ cup light corn syrup
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Combine all ingredients in top of double boiler. Beat with a rotary beater until thick enough to stand in peaks. Spread on cake.

A delightful spicy pudding can easily be made from sugar substitutes, and these are guaranteed to satisfy the family:

Ginger Pudding.
(Serves 8)
1 cup hot coffee
2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup molasses
1 well-beaten egg
½ cup sugar
2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon each cloves, nutmeg, ginger

Pour coffee over shortening and stir until melted. Add molasses and mix thoroughly. Add egg and beat. Add sifted dry ingredients, mixing until smooth. Pour into wax - lined square pan and bake in moderate oven (350 deg.) for 30 minutes. Spread with the following:

Orange Topping.
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
2 tablespoons orange juice

Mix all ingredients and sprinkle on top of pudding. Return to oven which has had heat turned off, for about 10 minutes.

Orange Fig Whip.
(Serves 6)
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup broken fig-filled cookies
1 cup orange sections
½ cup broken nutmeats

Whip milk and fold in cookies. Add orange sections and nut meats then chill thoroughly. Pile lightly into sherbert glasses and serve.

Use an unbaked crumb filling for pie to save fat. Filling can be made of prepared pudding mixes to save sugar.

Cookies, too, may be made with a pleasing combination of a sugar substitute and only a small amount of sugar:

Peanut Cookies.
1 cup shortening
½ cup sugar
½ cup honey
1¾ cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup milk
2 cups quick-cooking oats
1 cup chopped seedless raisins
1 cup chopped peanuts

Cream shortening, add sugar and honey. Beat and add sifted dry ingredients, alternately with milk. Add oats, raisins and nuts. Drop by spoonfuls onto a greased cookie sheet and bake for 15 minutes in a pre-heated (375 degree) moderate oven.

Pecan Crispies.
1 cup shortening
1½ cup sifted flour
½ cup confectioners' sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups pecans, chopped

Cream shortening, add sugar and vanilla. Add pecans and flour. Make rolls about 2½ inches long and ½ inch wide. Place on cookie sheet and bake 15 to 20 minutes at 325 degrees. When baked, roll in powdered sugar and cool on wire rack.

Bacon fat and salt pork drippings add to the flavor of kale, turnips and legumes.

Pin perfume-soaked dabs of cotton to the hems of garments to lend a subtle fragrance to body and clothes.

When ripping clothing with a two-edged razor blade, cut a slit in a cork and put it on one side of the blade to protect your hands from being cut.

As far as possible all windows in a house should have a similar appearance from the outside; if the draperies hang straight, sheer curtains used with them should also hang straight.

In the kitchen where but little space is available, place the trays from under the gas burners atop of the burners. A good place to stack the soiled dishes before washing them.

Soft, figure-acknowledging jerseys and crepes are favorites this year. They should be laid away when not in use and not hung from hangers or hooks, because even their own weight will distort them.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

FOLKS & THINGS THROUGH 1944 .By BEN

JANUARY—

New Year's Day in Clanton passed without ceremony or fanfare. No celebrations of any kind marked the event nor, so far as we know, did any bell ringing or horn blowing take place at midnight. It was another night and another day. Folks are too serious these days to take their celebrating very lightly. Their one aim is in getting a war won and peace resto.ed.

Bill Minor, the sage of the Yellow Front Store, when asked what he would do if a man called him a dirty liar, answered quite solemnly, "How big a man?"

Did you hear about the negro boy from Frog Level who wrote his mammy and pappy that he was getting a long fine and having the time of his life, but couldn't tell them where he was. After reading the letter two or three times, his mammy said, "Might a knowed that nigger would go and git hisself lost."

Members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club are still talking about the enjoyable meeting they had last Thursday night at the Home Ec Room at the High School. R. C. Williams made the Club a present of the hind quarter of a deer, to be served at the weekly meeting. Donald Blackketter, Pat Smith and Hollis Jackson went down to the school about six o'clock and proceeded to cook the deer meat. As the members arrived, each was put to work, setting table, etc. Everyone had a job and when all was ready they started their meeting—after having served themselves. When the business was through and incidently the deer too, Rev. O. C. Lloyd was appointed chairman of the dish washing committee. He immediately appointed the whole Club as his assistants and all got up and washed and dried the dishes. Last Thursday night's meeting was a big success and one that will live a long time in the memory of the members.

FEBRUARY—

Be sure to come by the office this week and help us hold our head. No, it isn't a hangover. Folks & Things won Third place as best column published in weekly newspapers in the State. This honor was bestowed upon us last week at the mid-winter meeting of the Alabama Press Association, at Birmingham. For this honor we are really proud, even though we didn't get to attend. Brother "Buck" was home on a three-day pass and we kinda wanted to stick around here.

Needless to say the whole thing made us very, very happy.

What's this we hear about Pat Smith resigning his position as County Agent and going back to Geneva County. What's Geneva County got that Chilton County hasn't got. Pat Smith has really done a good job. He will be sorely missed in Clanton. Both in the Civic life as well as the business life of the town. And too, Fay will be missed. She has given freely of her time and talent in worthwhile undertakings. We hate to give up the Pat Smiths.

You could go on, and on, and on, congratulating the committee, who, with chairman Pattillo, put on the air show and auction in town and at Gragg Field Saturday, and still not overdo the thing. Everything worked out fine, even though a strong wind was blowing and it was as cold as the nose of an Eskimo dog. More automobiles and more people than we have seen in and around Clanton in a long, long time, gathered at Gragg Field to watch the paratroopers—we must have sat there from ten 'til tired. The only reason we didn't go home when it was over, we couldn't. Sardines have a nice roomy can compared to the way we were jammed in between miles of cars to the front and back of us. But what we started to say when we got caught in the crowd was: In spite of the high wind, no one was hurt. A very large crowd also gathered in town later and bought War Bonds and got nice presents for their patriotism.

J. T. King, Ed Propst, Bill Minor and John Mullins went to their Draft Board last week and volunteered for service in the armed forces. They left Monday morning for Fort McClellan for their physical and as we go to press we hear that John Durwood Mullins and Ed Prospt were accepted; J. T. King was turned down and about Bill Minor we haven't heard how he came out with the Medical Staff. By-the-way several dozens more of our "boys" went over at the same time — and for the same thing.

MARCH—

A letter comes today from Clark Headley. He's in India. Says that obsene language being forbidden in the U. S. Mails, he will be unable to tell us of his love for India. He suggests that we just let the Indians keep India, and as for him, he'll take the Coosa River and Hatchett Creek about this time of year, and fight it out down there with the crappies.

J. M. Culp brought an egg into the News office the other week that was a hu-hu. It was nine inches around the long way and seven inches the short way. Mr. Culp says that it was the work of a White Rock who was just trying to do her bit for her country. You know, some of us could take a lesson from that old hen. Not lay an egg, of course, but do something BIG for our Uncle Sam. Like donating to the Red Cross Drive and helping the county meet it's quota.

Lt. Cecil Blow has received a promotion. We received a notice today from India where he is stationed and here is what it says:

"Somewhere in India,—Cecil Blow 28, of Clanton, Ala., received notification one day this month that he had been promoted to a first lieutenant, and the next day he celebrated by going out and getting himself one Japanese aircraft "damaged" in action over Burma. Blow, whose wife lives at Clanton, was commissioned at Luke Field, Ariz., on February 6, 1943. He is a veteran of many missions with a fighter-bomber squadron "somewhere in India."

We told Cecil when he left to be sure and get one for us, and we hope that this one was it. We hope that this Jap's Rising Sun has set and Lt. Blow did the setting.

This talk about Clanton not being the pretty town it used to be, along the highway, we do not like. A traveler was heard to say this week that this was the dirtiest town that he had seen since he left the Tennessee line. Clanton has been known throughout th State and South for many years, as being the most progressive town here-abouts, and remarks like the one we heard, are not flattering. Can't our property owners do something about this situation? You know, pretty soon, a dirty rumor like that might be taken literally, and then where would we be? Like some characters right in the middle of a dirty story, wouldn't we?

APRIL—

This you will not believe, but 'tis true. A Chinese in a northern state lost his ration book. He applied for another from his ration board. His name was Moe Dam Fun. We'll bet Moe Dam Fun had No Dam Fun getting another.

Looks like Jim Simpson's misleading propaganda is going to back-fire in his face. The voters today are too smart to be hood-winked by a lot of false statements against his opponent. Looks like his platform, "This Is Where I Stand," should have been—"This Is Where I Lay," or is it "Lie."

Heard down the street the other day a fellow kidding one of our merchants about a Simpson poster in his window. He told the merchant that he would ruin his business with a picture like that in his window. Said the merchant "It don't matter, I ain't doing any business anyway."

The wife and I celebrated our 18th anniversary last Saturday. Try as we would we could not find a list of wedding anniversarys anywhere that called for nice presents on that anniversary. However, we did find that the twentieth is China and the twenty-fifth is silver. Time ain't long as it has been.

MAY—

Kimmie Easterling, who drives the City Truck, has found a dog. A big black dog, with long shaggy hair. He found him last Thursday afternoon and took him home with him. He wants the owner to have him and says that he can get him by calling at the City Well. (Come to think of it—hope we haven't misled you by referring to said dog as "him," cause we don't know whether him's a her or her's a him).

One of Clanton's widest awake young business men is Leo Thompson. Leo in the past, like the rest of us, has had a hard time keeping labor at the Clanton Laundry & Dry Cleaning Company to maintain 100 per cent pre-war service, but he has done a good job. Leo has contributed of his time and money to the many charities and to the various and sundry drives connected with the winning of a war. He is public minded, honest and sincere in all his dealings. We do not as a rule throw roses around carelessly but do think that Leo Thompson is one of Clanton's No. 1 citizens, and is an asset to his town and his county.

James (Gabby) Tiffin left Tuesday night for Memphis where he will join the Chattanooga Baseball team. They are playing a series there with the Crackers. Gabby received a telegram Tuesday morning from Manager A. C. (Scrappy) Moore that his services were desired at once. Gabby tells us that catchers are hard to get and the ones that the Lookouts have are in the dugout from injuries. He played a while with the Barons you know, but was retired for a catcher with more experience. Gabby says it may be for the season and it may be just until the injured players get well — you can't tell about this baseball.

It was customary in a certain church for the congregation to repeat the Twenty-third Psalm in unison. One devout lady's notion of joining in was to keep about a dozen words ahead all the way through, and to speak in a voice which was sure to be heard.

A stranger dropped in one Sunday and after the service he inquired of the person sitting next to him: "Who was that lady who was already by the still waters while the rest of us were lying down in green pastures?"

JUNE—

Let us compliment the City of Clanton and it's officers on the job of creating a Bus Stop here after the one at Thorsby burned last Thursday afternoon. Before you could say, scat, work had started here, clearing a place for the large Greyhound buses to stop and make their fifteen minute waits. The Taxies that once lined the side street by the Bus Station were moved and the street was cleared for buses. A Taxi Stand was marked off in front of the Bus Station for the taxies and M. R. Lancaster made arrangements for 24-hour service that is required by the bus passengers. All in all, it was a'swell job, and one that required instant action.

Drove to Birmingham Monday with brother "Buck." He is contemplating spending a while in Europe on a sight seeing tour. Of course Uncle Sam is going to pay all necessary expenses. He expects to have quite a time. According to what he tells us he hopes to contact several representatives of the German Government while there —and in the best places. This was probably his last trip home in a long time. We enjoyed his stay imensely. The wife, Mary Robinson Tucker and little daughter, Mary Kate, will come back to Clanton to reside for the duration. We wish "Buck" God speed and happy landing. And also a safe return.

We talked to Mr. Pattillo Friday afternoon before he left on a trip to the northern part of the county. He needed two or three boys badly to go with him to put up War Bond posters in windows in that part of the county. They could not be found. We believe he finally had to go without any help what-so-ever and do the best he could to get these posters displayed. This isn't fair. Mr. Pattillo as Chairman of the County Committee, has a big job on his hands. It is one that you would not like to have under any circumstances. The least thing that any of us could do would be to lend our assistance. Contact Mr. Pattillo and find out if there is anyway that you can help in this campaign. We are sure that it would be appreciated immensely. And too, it is just as much your job as it is Mr. Pattillo's.

Little Marjorie wanted to send her teacher a greeting card at graduation time, so mother said she could pick one out that day and send it. Upon returning home that afternoon the mother inquired if she found a nice card for her teacher. She replied, "We found the cutest card; it had a picture of a little stork and a little baby on it, and it said, "Congratulations."

Well, the glorious Fourth has arrived again. It's next Tuesday. Some of the merchants were trying to get all the stores to Close Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, (not always) and take one long holiday, but we think a few of the fellows balked and decided that three days were just a bit too many. Anyhow, those merchants so minded, should go ahead and close for the three days if that is the way they feel about it, and let the ones who prefer working, do so. As for us, we don't see how we will ever get the glorious Fourth.

JULY—

Clanton Horse Show officials and members are planning a real Horse Show on August 30th, this year. It will be a bigger and better show than they held last year, and you know what that will mean. Three times as much cash is going in prizes alone. The committees are certainly leaving nothing undone to make it a big success. We predicted last year that it would grow into an annual affair and not only is that coming true, but a "Bigger annual affair."

Announcement made this month by Hollis Jackson states that the Clanton Quick Freeze Plant is nearing completion and will be in operation by September. Mr. Jackson, former vocational agriculture teacher, will be manager of the plant.

Seems that this Mayor's race promises to develop into an interesting affair. Since last week Leo Thompson has informed us that he definitely will be a candidate. Ex-Mayor C. Fenn Jones is sure to be in there pitching, and several dark horses have been mentioned for the time it is sure to melt down to a two man race, and we expect those two to be Jones and Thompson.

Our good friend, Mrs. Caster, at Goodyear Service Store, is quite proud of the one-thousand dollar War Bond that her company bought to help Chilton County in the Fifth War Loan Drive. She should be proud. Her store is a credit to the county and certainly shows it's willingness to cooperate in all things.

AUGUST—

Pat Hamilton, manager at E. L. Klinner Furniture Company tells this one. A negro that he has had dealings with went to Montgomery last week to buy a used automobile. After deciding on the car and fixing the papers he had the Used Car Company call Pat to O.K. his credit rating. Pat gave him a good recommendation and by and by the negro got back to Clanton and came around to thank Pat for his aid in the transaction. Pat told him: "That all right, George, but did you get a good automobile?" "Yas suh, boss," responded the negro, "I sho' did. It's got four brand new sympathetic tires on it."

Hear a lot of sentiment in favor of the stores closing on Wednesday afternoons the year around. Sounds like a good idea to us and looks like the powers that be" would make a poll of the store owners and managers and get their reaction to such an idea. Goodness knows the clerks and "bosses" too, as for that matter, are entitled to that one half-day each week to relax and do as they like. We believe it improves the quality of the help the other five and a half days in the week.

This is told on one of our would-be after dinner speakers; He arose in confusion after dinner and murmured stumblingly: "M-m-my f-f-friends when I came here tonight only God and myself knew what I was going to say to you—and now only God knows.

Wonder if folks are getting more careless or the automobiles are just falling apart from old age. Within the past few days there has been half dozen wrecks on the street in front of the News office. Fortunately, none have been serious.

SEPTEMBER—

And while we're about it, let's wish the best of success in his administration as Mayor of Clanton, to Leo Thompson, or is it "hiz zonuer" Leo Thompson? Everyone should get behind our young Mayor elect and aid him in every way toward making the next four year administration one of cooperation and progress.

Jim Folsom stopped in to see us Saturday afternoon. He was on his way back to Cullman. We believe "Big Jim" gets more popular as the days go by. He is an easy mixer, makes friends and keeps them. Things being as they are, the next Governor of Alabama will have to beat "Big Jim" Folsom.

Clanton welcomes the George Jesters back. George and Elizabeth Jester are a popular young couple and one that Clanton could ill afford to lose. Well, anyway, they are back now and we hope for good. They haven't bought yet, but we do not think that either has any idea of giving up until they do.

The wife and I took a flying vacation last week end pop-calling on old friends over Central and North-Central Alabama. One of our most enjoyable stops was at the Southern Democrat, piloted by Rice Howard, at Oneonta. Rice, like all of us, had more than he could possibly do, but was doing the best he could with very little help. However, Rice is more fortunate than most of us with the labor problem.

OCTOBER—

Clanton loses in the death of Mrs. M. A. Gore a true Christian spirit which is attested by the many friends we have heard express themselves of their personal loss n her passing. We extend our deepest sympathy to the family.

Mrs. A. B. Foshee was awakened early the other morning by rifle fire. She sat up in bed and listened. In a moment, there it was again. A distinct report of a rifle. And too, this time it sounded closer than the first. Before she could investigate, another and another report sounded in the still morning air. She went to her back door to see if the Japs had invaded Clanton during the night and there was Lt. Guy Higgins, standing in her back yard shooting bantam chickens, with a .22 rifle. However, they were his mother's bantams. She couldn't keep them at home so she told Guy to go out and kill them and she would make him a chicken pie.

We have witnessed carelessness in many forms but the lady who was feeding her youngsters bananas last Saturday morning and throwing the peelings on the sidewalk right in the heart of town, deserves a citation of some sort for being the most thoughtless person alive. We think just dessert would have been for her to have stepped back on one of the peels.

"Who signed Magna Charta, Robert?" asked a teacher of one of her class when she was reviewing them before the County School Board. "Don't know, twas't me teacher," replied the youth. The teacher was about to call on another pupil when one of the Board spoke up and said, "Call that boy back. I don't like his looks. I believe he did do it."

NOVEMBER—

This is too good not to tell on Gene Gore, our Plumber. Course this is just the way we heard it and could be a little exaggerated: Gene and his helper went to a lady's house to see about some plumbing. The lady said, "My goodness, I called for a plumber last July." To which Gene replied, "Sorry lady, we got the wrong house; it's the party who called last April we're looking for."

A gentleman is a man who is clean inside and outside, who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor, who can lose without squealing, who can win without bragging, considerate to women, children and old people, to cheat and too sensible to loaf, who who is too brave to lie, too generous takes his share of the world's goods and let's other people take theirs.

We're glad that Rev. Lloyd and Mrs. Lloyd have been returned to Clanton for another year. They are two lovely people and we wish them every success in their work here, the coming year.

DECEMBER—

With deepest regret we learn of the death of Judge L. H. Reynolds. He had lived his three-score years and 10 and then more and every one of them active and alive and accomplishing things. This the family can find solace in, even though they grieve. To the family go our heart-felt sympathy; their loss is great, but really, Chilton County's loss is greater. "The Judge" will be missed by thousands of friends throughout the county, the State and the Nation. He will be long remembered in the heart of all who knew him.

Congressman Pete Jarman was in the County last week shaking hands with friends. He paid the News a popcall and we enjoyed talking to him very much. Pete is looking and feeling fine but says he has so much territory to cover and such little time to cover it, he feels bad about not getting to see all the folks he would like too. He is popular in Chilton County and he could stay here a week, we believe, and not get to see all his friends.

Folks & Things is receiving quite a few Christmas cards from overseas, and they are the most appreciated of any we have received. We think it is a wonderful thing when those boys can think of sending Christmas cards, living as they do; mostly in the mud and rain, weary and blue and homesick all the time, still anxious to have friends on this side know they wish them a very Merry Christmas — and some writers say our boys will come back lawless and reckless, would-be gangsters of tomorrow—hooey.

Speaking of success stories, how's the one about our own Dick Arnold? Dick came back to Clanton week before last as Superintendent of Alabama Mills where he started twelve years ago as near the bottom as is possible, unless the janitor has an assistant. We congratulate Dick, highly and wish for him every success in his new place, and have no doubt about his ability to fill it.

CLEMENTS - HOWARD ARE WED

Mr. and Mrs. John Clements of Blountstown, Fla., announce the marriage of their daughter, Myrtle LeVerne, to Lieut. Wilburn E. Howard of Verbena. Rev. R. W. Acree performed the ceremony in the Baptist parsonage at Blountstown, December 2th, at 2 o'clock, among relatives and a few intimate friends. The young couple will resde at Avon Park, Fla., where Lieut. Howard is now stationed.

Laying flocks made up entirely of good, healthy pullets raised on clean ground and kept entirely away from older poultry are most likely to live and lay best.

SENATOR HILL SEES BRIGHT OPPORTUNITY FOR POSTWAR INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT IN STATE ALABAMA

When the last war ended we had in Alabama the Muscle Shoals plants which were declared surplus. These plants were kicked around for years. There were attempts made to scrap them. Eventually these so-called surplus Muscle Shoals plants became the corner-stone from which has grown the great TVA. What a change these so-called surplus plants have made in the life of Alabama and the South.

We will end the present war with a gigantic amount of what is called surplus — some one hundred billion dollars' worth of plants, machinery and goods. To people who need work, who need the goods and products, which factory and machinery can produce, it must seem a pity that anyone can think of this bonanza as surplus. Our problem is to change the term, to use surplus,—not waste it. To us in the South all this property has special significance because in the so-called surplus are hundreds and thousands of machine tools, power-driven servants of all kinds, which will perform all manner of mechanical jobs. We have the power down here—we must get and use the machinery.

When we see what has happened during the present war in Russia and China, the way they have moved whole plants thousands of miles across the country, we can get an idea of how easily, with our wonderful transportation system, we can move these machine tools from wherever they are and place them for use here in Alabama.

The so-called surplus machine tools offer us a new way of homesteading. Our returning soldiers can come back to a future far better than the old grant of forty acres and a mule. Small business, independently owned, can grow if we take advantage of our opportunities. We in Alabama can be ready to set up our boys and our war-workers so that they will have the opportunity to utilize their skills and make the things required for our own use from our own resources. This is the chance we have needed for a long time, and when we have succeeded our young people will no longer emigrate out of Alabama because of lack of opportunity.

Out of the crop of destruction of the war, let us find in this abundance of machinery the seeds for a new strength and new prosperity for Alabama.

MOUNTAIN SPRINGS CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The Christmas party was enjoyed by young and old. The beautiful tree was attractively decorated. The children were greatly excited by Santa Claus, played by Otis Giles. There were Christmas carols and hymns; recitations by Peggy Littlefield, Odell Giles, Junior Easterling, Leon Moats, Elaine Moats and songs by Peggy Littlefield and Odell Giles. Mrs. Cora Moats and Mrs. Christine Moats did the decorating.

"How Santa Claus Came to Be," was presented by Thorsby young people: Loretta Peterson, Herman Higgins. Clark Blickensderfer. Eloise Piper, Don Primm, Charlene Williams and Margaret Haun.

TAKE YOUR FERTILIZER NOW

War Food Administration WARNS . . .
"NOW OR NEVER FOR 1945"

There's a crisis in the making!

If stocks pile up in fertilizer plants and agents' warehouses, the stream of supply will choke up. They must move fast or the lack of man-power will cause a paralyzing shortage.

Take the Chilean Nitrate situation for example. To supply the quantity needed for 1945 crops, many cargoes must be unloaded each month at each port, then moved out by train and truck for immediate allocation. It must move out of agents' hands as fast as it moves in. If not, the choke-up starts and works back to the ports, even back to the ships.

Already there's a threatened shortage of nitrogen, due to sharply increased war needs. Unless you help smash the bottle-neck by taking your nitrate as soon as it is offered, the shortage will become acute. Thousands of tons will pile up at U.S. ports or on the docks in Chile. The only place Chilean Nitrate does you any good is on your crops. Get yours now . . . while you can.

Storage Tips
Pile all materials on dry boards in barn or shed.
Pile materials separately.
Keep piles close together.
Destroy the bags when you use the contents.

Buy Your Fertilizer NOW . . . Take It NOW . . . Store it Till It's Needed

Natural CHILEAN NITRATE of SODA

Death And Debris All That Remain In Conquered Territory Writes Former News Employee

Germany, Dec. 9, 1944.

Dear Ben:

First, may I wish you and the whole family the very best of Christmas and lots of good fortune during the coming year. I only wish that I, along with the other boys, could be there to help you make this a Christmas to top them all.

I can't say where I am, Ben. I have no doubt that you know already, as the information has gone out over the radio and into the home papers. Censors have rules to follow and I couldn't hope to get any information by.

Ben, I don't think the folks back home, as a rule, have any idea of what is going on over here. When they read in the morning papers that our Army has taken another town, they say, "Well, it won't be long now as I see they have taken x." What they don't realize and can't grasp is the terrific cost of taking that town. They don't know the price we are paying in blood and material for every foot of ground we take. I wish that there was some way to make them understand. If they did then such childish didoes as hoarding cigarettes would not be. Isn't there some way you can help to wake them up?

The Germans aren't giving up. They are fighting for every foot of ground and defending every building. Every city we take becomes a city of the dead. A few straggling civilians, either too old or too young to fight, amid a mass of gutted, charred ruins of homes and factories. I have yet to see a house or building undamaged by shell fire.

How is business holding out, Ben? My paper is slow to reach me now that the Christmas mail is coming in. However, when I do get a copy I devour every line, even to the want ads. I see you were advertising for help. Did you get it?

Dad writes that Buck is in Holland. Send me his address, won't you? I might run into him.

Give my regards to the family and to the office force.

Write whenever you can find time, for nothing means so much as a letter from home.

Lots and lots of luck to you and the C.C.N.

Your friend,

JOHN V.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Tighten Home Front Controls As War Enters Critical Stage; 112,728 Japs Killed on Leyte

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Liberated from work in German factory in Alsace, Ukrainian girls lift Lt. J. B. Keeley of Houston, Tex., to shoulders.

PACIFIC:
Score Again

Two months after U. S. troops stormed ashore on Leyte island in the Philippines, that enemy stronghold fell, with the total of 112,728 Japanese killed and only 493 captured, again indicating the fanaticism of the foe's stand.

Striking at the level eastern side of Leyte, General MacArthur's forces soon rolled the Japanese back to the mountainous western portion, then struck at the heart of their defenses there by driving southward down the Ormoc corridor. The enemy's fate was sealed when the U. S. 77th division landed below Ormoc and then thrust up the corridor to meet the advancing doughboys.

Besides suffering huge casualties, the Leyte campaign cost the enemy 2,748 planes, 27 warships and 41 troop transports. U. S. troop casualties were put at 2,623 dead, 8,422 wounded and 172 missing.

HOME FRONT:
Tighten Controls

With the nation now locked in one of the most critical stages of the war, the government moved on a broad front to assure the effective prosecution of the conflict.

1. In a dramatic step, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes called upon the country's 80 race tracks employing 40,000 people to suspend future meetings, and also directed draft boards to reexamine the physical status of all professional athletes previously classified 4-F.

Although the turfmen's ready compliance with Byrnes' appeal provided an additional labor pool for the nation's hard pressed war industry, it was indicated that the closure of the tracks was prompted just as much by workers' absenteeism to attend the races from nearby plants.

Review of the 4-F standing of professional athletes threatened the wartime future of commercial sport, since numerous younger performers already have been lost to the services and a scattering of 4-F's and vets are helping hold many such enterprises together.

2. In another move to assure full-est utilization of manpower and materials, the War Production board was authorized to withdraw any priorities or allocations of materials to plants found violating War Manpower commission ceilings on their employment or regulations dealing with the hiring of help.

At the same time, the WMC itself was given authority to enforce its regulations pointed toward the most effective distribution of labor for war production.

3. With civilian supplies of many items reported at the lowest point since the war began, OPA restored control over major food products to assure equitable distribution.

In meats, rationing was reestablished on grade D beef, better cuts of veal, bacon, pork shoulders, spareribs, beef and veal liver and items in tin or glass, but each individual's stamp allocation was boosted from 30 to 50 points in January.

Also placed back on rationing were such canned vegetables as peas, corn, green and wax beans, asparagus and spinach.

In tightening up on sugar allotments, individual quotas of five pounds were stretched from 10 weeks to three months, and all canning certificates, except No. 34, were cancelled. Red point value of butter was boosted from 20 to 24 per pound.

RURAL HOUSING

Possibility of the availability of federal funds for construction of rural low-rent housing as a postwar project was seen in the Federal Public Housing authority's action in calling upon Rural Housing authorities to submit applications for allotments.

Under the prewar low-rent program only a limited amount of rural housing was built, only 515 farm houses being constructed, although nearly 8,000 others were under loan contract at that time.

EUROPE:
Yanks Stiffen

In what Allied headquarters said was a brilliant operation, conceived by Adolf Hitler but worked out by Field Marshal Von Rundstedt, the great German winter offensive ground onward, moving slower after the first surprising rush with the steady organization of the U. S. defense.

As the enemy's attack developed, he threw one arm northwestward toward Namur, in what was described as an effort to cut off all Allied forces in Belgium and Holland, and he flung another arm southwestward toward Sedan, historic gateway to France and scene of the great Nazi break-through of 1940.

Although Von Rundstedt employed two whole armies of about 300,000 men, and was said to have another 90,000 men in reserve, German progress appreciably slowed after the first great push carried them around Stavelot and Bastogne. Reacting to the enemy drive, U. S. forces vigorously counter-attacked the tips of the advancing westward spearheads, and smashed into the sides of the big German bulge in Belgium to the north and little Luxembourg to the south.

While the Germans concentrated on the U. S. First army front, they sent patrol after patrol into British lines to the north in Holland, searching for weaknesses that might invite an attempt to roll Montgomery's forces up against the Americans.

As the German offensive progressed, it was favored by continued bad flying weather, with the murky skies preventing full sustained use of the mighty Allied aerial fleets. Taking advantage of every break in the overcast, however, hundreds of U. S. and British heavy bombers hammered German communication lines behind the front, while swarms of fighters, seeping through tough opposition, swooped low to plaster the enemy's moving troop and supply columns.

Russ Advance

While the battle raged in the west, Russian forces continued their drive in Hungary, ringing the once picturesque, now smouldering, capital of Budapest, and biting deeply into Czechoslovakia farther to the north. As the Russian drive developed, they stood about 90 miles from Vienna, before which German labor forces reputedly were hastily erecting fortifications.

In Greece, civil warfare between the Leftist ELAS and Rightist and British troops raged as Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden flew to Athens in a dramatic effort to draw the opposing forces together in a compromise government to restore order.

Churchill's personal flight to Athens underlined Great Britain's interest in stabilizing the situation in a country standing on the threshold of the Suez canal and the Mediterranean sea, lifeline of the British empire.

On Nation's Hero Roll

To Captain Arthur D. Lawson of Marion, Md., went the Silver Star for exceptional bravery. In Normandy, France, he was advancing with his company through a very heavy artillery barrage. Though hit by shrapnel and requiring medical aid, he carried on, determined to do his duty. When the unit was forced to withdraw, he and several other casualties were left in enemy territory. In spite of painful wounds, he made his way back to friendly lines after having first aided others to safety.

MEAT PROSPECTS:
Less Pigs

Originally scheduled to tumble to approximately 128 pounds in 1945, civilian meat production may drop even further if farmers persist in their intentions to cut their spring pig production down 7 per cent, instead of raising it 2 per cent as suggested by the War Food administration.

The department of agriculture's revelation of farmers' intentions as of December 1 came as it was reported that the recent huge grain harvests assured the country of bumper feed supplies through 1945. Of all stocks, only barley may run short, what with the 352,000,000 bushel supply 76,000,000 bushels below the last year, but such a deficit will more than be made up by the record 3,128,000,000 bushels of corn.

Since some of the farmers listed short feed supplies in their areas as one of the reasons for their reduction in spring pig production, efficient distribution of existing supplies may result in alteration of their plans. Other reasons given for cutting output were marketing difficulties and dissatisfaction with prices.

Postwar Army

Declaring that the U. S. probably would be the first object of aggressors in any new war, the army called for one year of training for youths to prepare them properly for the rigors of conflict.

In advocating a force of trained reserves, the army ruled out the alternative of a standing military organization and national guard big enough to meet the initial attack of any enemy as wholly impracticable and too expensive.

Under the army's program, balanced units of air, ground and service forces would be built up, to assure well-rounded offensive or defensive operations following mobilization.

In calling for one year of strict military training, the army took issue with those advocating supplementary instructions for trainees in other fields.

TIRES:
Cut Output

Because of the necessity of diverting manpower and facilities to the manufacture of military tires, the War Production board ordered the output of passenger tires slashed by 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 during the first quarter of 1945, thus blasting many "A" card holders' hopes of receiving new cords through the year.

As a result of WPB's action, "A" card holders were faced with the prospect of riding on their old tires throughout 1945, or having worn cords recapped.

At the same time, "B" and "C" card holders were warned that their share of supplies also would be cut, and they were told to recap, conserve tires and participate in car pools if they expect to keep their vehicles on the road during 1945.

Except for light and heavy-heavy off highway truck tires, production of commercial truck cords for 1945 will be increased, WPB said.

POSTWAR BUSINESS:
Transport Orders

Anticipated expenditures of the railroads and intercity bus lines to fill demands laid over from wartime should provide the basis for substantial employment in the postwar period, it is believed.

Of the two, the railroads are expected to make the heaviest expenditures, with prospects that they will not only lay out $1,220,000,000 for normal yearly improvements, but an additional $300,000,000 annually until they catch up with wartime arrearages.

In reviewing needs, industry spokesmen said that orders for freight cars should approximate the 1941 total of 118,000, and over 2,000 passenger cars yearly also may be purchased. With thousands of locomotives over 25 years old in use scheduled for the scrap pile, replacement needs will be great. In addition, new rail and other track equipment will have to be installed to supplant material subjected to heavy wartime wear.

In using their large wartime earnings to retire debt and build up cash and other reserves, the railroads have improved their investment position in the postwar period.

Although the intercity bus industry's postwar outlays will not match the railroads', of course, they will be heavy since no less than 6,000 busses costing $90,000,000 will be needed to replace old equipment and less appealing victory models and also meet an anticipated business boost.

At the same time, thousands of workers will be needed to rehabilitate equipment worth keeping, industry spokesmen said.

HOME CANNING

In nearly 25 million households during the past year home canners were busy, and their efforts resulted in an estimated 3 billion, 400 million quarts of canned food. Estimates from a small survey recently completed by the USDA show the total supply of food canned at home seems to be about equally divided between fruits and vegetables. Similar figures for previous years are not available, but a private poll indicates a 15 per cent decrease from last year.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C.

As the New Year approaches, Washington is preparing to experience the results of two titanic struggles which will chart the course followed by this nation and the world in the decades ahead.

One contest will be witnessed on the floors of congress. The other in some unnamed spot where President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, Marshal Stalin and perhaps General De Gaulle will sit down and try to agree on details of the framework of an international organization for the maintenance of peace.

The election was supposed to have settled the old issue of "isolationism versus internationalism" but those terms were far too indefinite to delimit any lasting decisions and since November our allies have been strewing land-mines of doubt along the way, causing many cases of non-interventionist jitters in congress.

There will be debate in the senate flavored with remarks, the tenor of those which criticized the British course in Greece.

As to the battle behind closed doors, you can imagine that the American viewpoint will need all the support the President can rally behind it, to overcome the tendency of Messrs. Churchill, Stalin and De Gaulle to fall into all the old bad habits of their happy power politics days.

In order to understand the differences which have already arisen between those who support British armed intervention in Greece and those who support the state department's action in protesting against it, it is necessary to take a look behind the scenes and see what these forces are which are bound to shape the new governments of Europe as they are re-born after the period of democratic hibernation during Nazi-Fascist occupation or control.

U. S. Favors Self Rule

In the first place, there is a powerful, liberal-oriented ground swell to be discerned everywhere if we look for it. It is the belief that, eventually, this force will dominate, which has prompted the American "hands-off" policy. Uncle Sam merely says: "Let the people of the various countries choose the form of government they want. Those who want democracy enough will get it if there is no outside interference."

That is one thing to bear in mind. Another is that this ground swell, as I call it, is the result of many different factors — not merely hunger and discontent or faith and enlightenment; not only inspiration or desperation, but aspiration as well, aspiration toward the natural historical and evolutionary goals of progress which are a part of man's eternal struggle for liberty.

The reaction against Nazi tyranny and the successful resistance to German control in the form of the underground, generated certain forces toward freedom and independence. The underground made its own laws, gave opportunity for the coalescence and strengthening of all democratic movements. It was natural when the Germans were driven out that these forces refused to bow to representatives of any regime, no mattter how beneficent, if it had about it even the slightest odor of sanctified feudalism.

It is necessary to get this premise firmly fixed in our minds or else fall into the error of writing off every revolutionary movement as "communist," including some certainly no whit less virtuous than our own in 1776.

It is well to study the France of today in this connection, and interesting to note the comment which appeared in the French press at the time of the first revolts in Belgium and later in Greece where Allied support was given the government in power. The "Franc-Tireur," whose name indicates the "underground" flavor of its opinion, explains why, so far, France has had no such internal trouble.

"It has been our great good fortune," it says, "to have a man to protect our honor and prepare the liberation, who had such character and personality that he is universally accepted, acclaimed and followed by the entire nation as our leading member of the resistance."

The last seven words are the important ones — "as our leading member of the resistance." In other words, De Gaulle was able to lead his fellow countrymen into liberation without chaos because he had the approval of the most active and most militantly democratic elements of the underground.

New Spirit In Greece

Papandreou, premier of Greece during the revolt, with all his virtues, was no De Gaulle in that respect.

I was reliably informed that Papandreou had expressed firm anti-monarchic sentiments, that he is, as he says, a democrat and a socialist, that he had a clean record through the occupation. But—and what a "but" there is, judged by such standards as I imagine "Franc-Tireur" would hold up — Papandreou was selected by the King with British consent. The motives back of his election may have been honest enough and practical enough from the standpoint of the old order. Here was a man with a good record who, it would seem, could reconcile the royalists and the leftists. But that formula itself violates the very principles of the new order, and when the left-wingers began to feel that the cabinet was monarchist and British-made, they withdrew and their followers refused to give up their weapons.

All armed groups in Greece not absorbed officially by the army were ordered to turn in their arms. The police, of course, did not turn in their arms and they were the same police who had helped the prewar Metaxas dictatorship, and later the Germans, "keep order." The "sacred battalion," a group composed chiefly of former Greek officers who fought bravely beside the Allies al lthrough the African campaign (and were charged with containing a strong monarchist element) was not disbanded but became a part of the army.

Translate the above into terms of the French attitude and see how impossible acceptance of a Greek government such as that could be to groups thinking as the French resistance groups think.

There is every reason to believe that the leftist movement in Greece and elsewhere in Europe, even where the majority of their leaders may be led by communists (as was not the case in Greece) is actually at heart a drive against tyranny and toward democracy.

Here again it might be wise to examine some of the opinion expressed by Frenchmen now backing the De Gaulle provisional government which is a product of the forces similar to those operating in other liberated countries.

The leading editorial in the December issue of "Free France," that attractive and informative magazine published in New York by the French provisional government, gives the reasons for the change of attitude toward the French communists as follows:

1. The French communist party joined the resistance movement and later gave its allegiance to De Gaulle's national committee.

2. The comintern was dissolved.

3. The communists rendered invaluable aid to the resistance movement.

4. The striking collaboration of all French patriots in the underground struggle removed many prejudices, including the suspicion of "communists sans patrie" (a political group with loyalty to no fatherland).

The editors of Free France cautiously state that it is too early to answer the important question: Have the French communists accepted democracy as it is understood by the western democracies? Nevertheless, they note for the record that so far "the communists helped to draw up the National Resistance council program of March, 1944, tacitly accepting the democratic principle" and "the abolition of private property is not listed among the immediate demands of the communist party."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The popular size tire for bombers is the 56-inch, the making of which takes as much time as the building of seven large truck tires. And an active bomber may need an entire new set of tires each month.

Statisticians have developed the fact that the rubber used by the U. S. in the war up to date averages about 145 pounds per man in uniform. In World War I rubber consumption represented about 32 pounds per man.

DOAN'S PILLS

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The scene story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat flying. He appeals to several Generals and is finally given an opportunity to get into the fight. He flies a bomber into India, but on arrival is made a ferry pilot and this does not suit him. After paying a visit to Gen. Chennault he gets a Kittyhawk and soon becomes a "one man air force" in the skies over Burma. Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group but still keeps knocking down Jap planes. His "Old Exterminator" is badly mauled and he gets a new P-40E.

CHAPTER XXIII

It had been only recently when Haynes had been taken from his thirteen four-engine bombers on the way to blast Tokyo, that he had been assigned to transports. The Japs must have known just how to get under his skin, but in the end I think the knowledge worked against them.

Now he was getting back at them by having thousands of little leaflets printed in several languages, especially in Japanese. They read:

COMPLIMENTS OF THE OLD BROKEN-DOWN TRANSPORT PILOT

He used to drop some of these on every bombing mission he led. He'd go out and tie some to each bomb; put them in the bomb bay so that they fell out when the doors were opened; even throw them out over the Japanese-occupied cities that he blasted. I knew now that he was getting a new supply ready for Hongkong.

Towards the end of October came the word we had so long been waiting for. Victoria harbor was filled with Japanese shipping. In deepest secret we got ready to go.

Our ships would leave from Kunming, but we would of course use the intermediate bases in the Kweilin-Hengyang section, 500 miles to the East. Hongkong, you will recall, is about 325 miles Southeast of Kweilin. It is protected by surrounding enemy fighter fields at Canton and Kowloon. Our objectives would be the shipping in the harbor, the shipping at the docks in Kowloon, and the ships at the drydocks in Hongkong.

Early on the morning of October 25 our twelve bombers took off from Yunnan for Kweilin, and shortly afterwards Hill, Alison, Holloway and I led the fighters off. We were all to infiltrate into Kweilin, a few ships at a time, so as not to alert the coast of eastern China.

For two weeks I had worried about this attack. I thought it would come any day, and because of the tension I couldn't sleep.

When I learned that word hadn't come, I'd spend another sleepless night. I got the doctor to give me something to make me sleep and I had a headache the next day. I knew "my wind was up," as the British say—but why in hell didn't we go on and get the attack over with!

But now I was on the way. I could see the shark-mouths of the P-40's all around, and the whole thing was easy—just what I had wanted all the time. We sat down at Kweilin at one-minute intervals at eight o'clock. The bombers were soon in, and the Chinese were busy servicing the field full of ships. They were the happiest people I had ever seen. They'd point towards Japan and point down with their thumbs and say, "Bu-hao."

All of us were proud to be going. But as I looked at those seven P-40's escorting ten bombers, I could not help feeling apologetic for that greatest country in the world that we were representing. Oh, God, if the day could soon come when we could go against this enemy with a thousand bombers, even a hundred bombers!

Maybe the small fighter force that we had made us lucky ones who were privileged to go resolve all the more that we would make up in quality what we lacked in quantity. Personally I felt like a veteran football player who has been on the bench and has now been called into the big game. Nearly a year before, when Hongkong had fallen to the Japanese attacks from the Asiatic mainland of Kowloon, I had sworn that I would see the first bombs hit the Crown Colony. I had no idea then that I would lead the fighters, that I would shoot down Japanese fighters in the raid, that we would be intercepted by a superior force of the enemy, but that in less than three minutes after the interception there would be only the ships of the U. S. Army Air Force over Victoria harbor.

Now I had the familiar "wind up" feeling that precedes combat. The palms of my hands perspired freely. As I wiped them on the legs of my trousers I saw that the sweat was like mud; it had mixed with the red dust of Kweilin Field through which we had taken off.

Our altitude kept increasing to 20,000 feet, while down below at seventeen thousand were the medium bombers in javelin formation: two Vee's of three, and the last element a diamond of four. We passed one of the river junction check-points that enabled me to compute our ground speed. In fifty minutes I could see the glint of the sun on the Pacific Ocean. As I saw the bomber formation again, I felt proud of the crews of those perfectly spaced ships. This really was like a football game: the bombers were carrying the ball while we in the pea-shooters ran the interference.

I imagined General Haynes, down there in the lead bomber, grinning as he thought of dropping a few hundred more of his leaflet souvenirs to the Japs, "Compliments of the old broken-down transport pilot"—along with at least sixty 500-pound bombs. Big "Butch" Morgan, the best bombardier in the Air Force, had probably wormed his huge bulk through the tunnel into the nose of Haynes' bomber and was even now intensely interested in his pet bomb-sight.

Now I could even smell the freshness of the Pacific. The sky had never been so blue. The beauty of the day and the beauty of those weapons flying so smoothly under us made me forget the scratching of the oxygen mask on my sunburned neck. It was a joy to look back and see the six shark-mouths on the other P-40's grinning at me. Some day, I thought, Jap mothers were going to frighten their children by referring to them and reminding the brats of Nippon that their fathers had more than likely had that view of an American P-40 for a last memory.

As we got closer to the target, we split our formation of fighters automatically. Tex Hill, Hampshire, and Sher stayed with me; Marks took the other three on the opposite flank of the bombers. The country below had become lower in elevation but was green and still hilly. Over the radio, as we reached a point North of Macao, came the jabbering of Japanese voices on our frequency, and we knew from its ominous sound that they were warning of our attack.

I tensed a little and looked about for enemy planes. Far to my left I could see the three rivers meeting at Canton, could see two fields from which I knew Zeros were taking off to intercept us. We had bypassed Canton purposely by thirty miles. I saw the bombers changing course: we were around Canton now, and were going to steer straight for the North of Kowloon peninsula. The blue Pacific looked friendly, reminding me of the southern California coast. The old, familiar fog banks that should have been covering San Clemente and Catalina were shrouding instead the Ladrones Islands, with only their hilltops visible, sticking out from the fog on the China Sea.

We were turning over Macao, where the Clippers used to land. To the South I could see another Jap field, Sanchau Island. Now to the right was Hongkong Island, shaped like a kidney and mountainous, just about nine miles long and three or four miles across. I could make out the indentations of the romantic-sounding bays whose names I knew —Sandy, Telegraph, Kellet, and Repulse. There were points of land jutting towards the mainland—Quarry Point, with its Naval Drydock, and Shek Tong Tsui, the point over which we would fight our aerial battle. Reaching towards the island like a finger was Kowloon peninsula, separated from it by the blue waters of Victoria harbor. Near the end of the spit of land closest to Hongkong, I saw the large modern Peninsular Hotel. All of us knew that Japanese Generals and staff officers slept there with their women.

I crossed around and over General Haynes and his formation, watching vigilantly. Far below I saw dust on Kai Tak airdrome, and knew that enemy ships were taking off to attack us. My throat felt dry and I had trouble swallowing; I turned my gun switch off and on nervously.

Now I saw the bomb-bay doors opening, and I couldn't keep the tears of excitement from burning my eyes. Anti-aircraft was beginning to dot the sky with black and white puffs. As I dove almost to the level of the bombers, I could feel the ack-ack rock my fighter ship. I kept S-ing to watch for the enemy fighters that must be coming.

I saw the yellow bombs begin to fall in long strings, imposed on the dark green of the world below. They got smaller and smaller as the noses pointed slowly down. Remembering my movie camera, I tried to take pictures of the explosions. The bombs seemed to take years to fall, and I began to think they were all duds. The ack-ack burst closer as the Japs got the range while we went straight in. I know I was never more excited in all my life. I yelled, "Okay, Hirohito—we have lots more where those came from!" I kept looking behind and under us for the bombs to burst.

And then I saw the first white explosion—right on the docks of Kowloon. After that they came so fast you couldn't count them. I let my camera run as the explosions turned from white to black—there were oil-fires now. I could see the flash of the anti-aircraft guns from the North shore of Hongkong Island, as we continued across Victoria harbor. I risked another look at the target; it was covered with smoke from one end to the other. Then I got my eyes back to searching for enemy interceptors.

Why in hell didn't the bombers turn for home? They had dropped the damn bombs, but they were still going on endlessly towards that point of Shek Tong Tsui. All of us were keyed up. But then the long javelin of B-25's began to turn to the right. Mission accomplished — now they had the down-hill run to base, and I began to get that old feeling of relief. Then, somehow, I felt cheated. Where were the enemy fighters? I raised my camera, sighted again, and took the formation as it swung over the burning docks.

Then, as I glanced about, I saw them, silhouette after silhouette, climbing terribly steeply towards the bombers. I know now that they had got there from Kai Tak below in four minutes; they had made the sixteen thousand feet in that short time. I felt my camera drop to my lap, hit my knee, then drop to the metal floor of the fighter. I was fumbling now for the "mike" button on the throttle; then I was calling: "Bandits ahead — Zeroooooos! At eleven o'clock." Fumbling again for the throttle quadrant, shoving everything as far forward as I could, I marvelled at the steepness of the climb the enemy ships were maintaining. I called: "Zeros at twelve o'clock," to designate their direction clock-fashion from us. I heard Tex Hill reply: "Hell, I see 'em." I could hear the jabber of the Japs still trying to block our frequency.

I was diving now, aiming for the lead Zero, turning my gunsight on and off, a little nervously checking again and again to see that the gun-switch was at "on." I jerked the belly-tank release and felt the undersling fifty-gallon bamboo tank drop off. We rolled to our backs to gain speed for the attack and went hell-bent for the Zeros. I kept the first Zero right in the lighted sight and began to fire from over a thousand yards, for he was too close to the bombers. Orange tracers were coming from the B-25's, too.

Five hundred yards before I got to the Zero, I saw another P-40 bearing the number 151 speed in and take it. That was Tex Hill. He followed the Zero as it tried to turn sharply into the bombers and shot it down. Tex spun from his tight turn as the Jap burst into flames. I took the next Zero—they seemed to be all over the sky now. I went so close that I could see the pilot's head through the glass canopy and the little tail-wheel that was not retracted, and I knew it was a Navy Zero—the little wheel was built for the arresting-gear of a carrier. My tracers entered the cockpit and smoke poured back, hiding the canopy, and I went by.

As I turned to take another ship below me, I saw four airplanes falling in flames towards the waters of Victoria harbor. I half rolled again and skidded in my dive to shake any Zero that might be on my tail. I saw another P-40 shooting at a Jap, but there was a Zero right on his tail. I dove for this one. He grew in my sights, and as my tracers crossed in front of him he turned into me. I shot him down as his ship seemed to stand still in the vertical bank. The ship was three or four hundred yards from me, and it fell towards the water for a time that seemed ages. An explosion came, and there was only black smoke; then I could see the ship again, falling, turning in a slow spin, down—down—down.

I shot at everything I saw. Sometimes it was just a short burst as the Jap went in for our bombers. Sometimes I fired at one that was turning, and as I'd keep reefing back on my stick, my ship would spin, and I'd recover far below. I shot down another ship that didn't see me. I got it with one short burst from directly astern, a no-deflection shot. In this attack I could see the Japanese ship vibrate as my burst of six fifty-calibre guns hit it. First it just shook, then one wing went up. I saw the canopy shot completely off; then I went across it. Turning back in a dive to keep my speed, I watched the enemy ship, as it dove straight down, stream flames for a distance the length of the airplane behind.

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 2:13-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest.—Genesis 28:15.

Matthew is the Gospel of the King and His kingdom. It stresses the fulfillment of prophecy in the coming of Christ, the King. After His rejection, it tells us of the Church, "the kingdom in mystery," and of the death of Christ for our sins, His resurrection for our justification, and His glorious coming again.

This then is an important book which we study for the next three months. Teacher and student alike should be enthusiastic and expectant.

The genealogy of the King, and the story of His coming to earth as the babe of Bethlehem (both important matters), are covered in chapter 1. In our lesson we find Him as a little child. Observe how man received Him, and how God cared for Him. Without assigning definite verses to our points we note that:

I. Men Received or Rejected Jesus.

It has always been so. Men, then as now, were either for Him or against Him. The world or today is far different from that of the first century, but the difference is all on the outside. Almost breath-taking have been the developments of modern science, but these have not changed the heart of man. He still fears and hates and fights and sins.

His attitude toward Christ is unchanged. There are still only two classes of people in the world—those who have received Christ and are saved, and those who have rejected Him and are lost.

1. Men Are Against Christ.

How do men show their rejection of God's Son? Just as they did at His birth, by:

a. Fear. Herod was afraid lest the coming of this One should result in the loss of his ill-gotten gains. His anger and fear made all Jerusalem afraid.

b. Indifference. When the Wise Men asked where Christ was to be born, the priests and scribes knew exactly where to find the facts in the Holy Scriptures, but having done so, they relapsed into utter indifference. They had no interest in the fulfillment of the prophecy.

c. Hatred. Herod poured out the violence of his heart by killing the first-born. He was the first of many who have raged against the Christ in futile anger.

d. Sorrow. The tears of the mothers of Jerusalem but foreshadowed the weeping and wailing which characterizes Christ-rejection both in time and eternity.

2. Men Are For Christ.

Thanks be to God, there were those in that day who were for Christ and, like those who follow Him today, they showed:

a. Spirituality. Men have marveled that the Magi knew of the birth of Christ. They must have studied the prophecies of the Word and been responsive to the teaching and moving of the Holy Spirit. Can we say as much for ourselves?

b. Interest. Not content to know and to marvel, they shamed the priests of Israel by their persistent interest in this great thing which had come to pass.

c. Love. They brought themselves in worship and they brought rich gifts from their treasures. You can give without loving, but you cannot love without giving.

d. Action. They came. They persisted until they found the Christ. Then they listened to God and protected His Son by not returning to Herod.

II. God Protected and Prepared Jesus.

The ruin which sin had brought into the world could only be met by redemption which Christ had come to bring. Some men had already shown their hatred for Jesus and their rejection of Him. But God still ruled, and for the sake of those who received Him (and would receive Him in all the centuries since), He kept the Child Jesus from harm. We find Him:

1. Protecting Jesus. Men may hate and seek to destroy God's Son. Satan may inspire them with ingenuity and cunning. But see how the Eternal One spoke to Joseph in dreams, how He prepared a place of refuge in Egypt and ultimately in Nazareth, where the boy Jesus might increase in wisdom and stature and favor with God and man.

2. Preparing Jesus. God knew of the days of public ministry which were ahead, and above all, of that day when on Golgotha's hill Christ was, in His own body, to prepare salvation for you and for me. God is never taken by surprise. He moves forward to the completion of His plan with the stately tread of eternity.

He took Jesus to Egypt. He brought Him again to Nazareth. In it all He was preparing His Son for the days of ministry which were ahead. All this was in fulfillment of prophecy (see vv. 15, 17). God's Word is always sure.

STAFF SERGEANT JOHN SCHUSTER, infantryman from Stelton, New Jersey

"'Hit the ditch, boys; here come the Jerries.' Like the rest of the men I dove for the nearest hedgerow in a Normandy field on the road to St. Lo. The low-flying planes dumped their bombs along the road. Only one missed, and that one hit near me. I was badly wounded by the shell fragments and the next thing I knew I was in an evacuation hospital and an Army nurse was giving me blood plasma. If it hadn't been for that I'd have been a goner. I'm an old hand at plasma for I've had it twenty times. Now they're giving me whole-blood transfusions. There were Army nurses with me all the time and, tired as many of them were, they'd spend their off-duty time with us wounded men, helping to bring us back to where we thought things were really worth fighting for. We need all the nurses we can get. If you can, join the Army Nurse Corps."

THORSBY PASTOR MOVED TO BIRMINGHAM

Rev. J. O. Dailey, pastor of the Baptist church in Thorsby, moved to Birmingham Tuesday morning. He will serve the East Thomas Baptist church.

Bro. Dailey is very friendly and has been popular in the community. While working with the Thorsby Church during his ministry of twenty months, seventy-seven members have been received, over a thousand dollars have been paid on the pastorium and seven hundred dollars on the state debt.

In his last message Bro. Dailey said: "We feel that it has been a privilege to have prayed with you about your problems, witnessed many of your conversions, to have led many of you into the waters of baptism with our Lord, to have united several in marriage, and to have wept with you as we placed loved ones in the city of the dead. May each of us unite our hearts in prayer that the Holy Spirit will lead this church to the man the Lord has for its pastor."

Rev. Dailey was born in Centreville, Bibb County, Alabama. He was a student in the University of Alabama and is a graduate of Baptist Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

JUDGE L. H. REYNOLDS

Not often in Alabama has there been a political figure which dominated a county as completely and as long as Chilton County politics was dominated by Judge Lewis H. Reynolds, whose death has occurred at Clanton in his 81st year. From 1904 until 1934, with the exception of a single term, Judge Reynolds served as probate judge of Chilton County. It is an accomplishment for any Republican to be elected probate judge in Alabama any county for one term. To have held such an office for more than a quarter of a century stamped Judge Reynolds as a man of unusual qualities.

Perhaps the secret of his political success was that he was not such a hide-bound partisan that he failed to face realities. He knew all the time that Democrats to right of him, Democrats to left of him, volleyed and thundered. At any rate, some of the warmest friends Judge Reynolds had in Alabama were Democrats, and for nearly half a century he was almost as welcome a caller at the governor's office in Montgomery as would be any Democrat. He got along with people. Governor Comer regarded him as a particular friend, as did Bill Brandon. His ability to get along with Democrats did not set well with many of the other Republicans of the state, so that Judge Reynolds was not the powerful figure in Republican patronage matters in Alabama that others regarded him as a discordant element and as one who might conceivably buck over the traces when the slates were being prepared. But looking back over the years, there is no doubt that Judge Reynolds was the type that does more than the implacable regulars who hew to the party line regardless of where the chips fall, to win Democratic esteem and respect for Republicans as worthy political foes in Alabama. — Alabama Journal (Montgomery).

THORSBY UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The first "Go-To-Church Day" will be held on this coming Sunday. It will be repeated on the first Sunday of each month. The plan was developed "to encourage those who have cars to bring a full load to church; to assemble in one service as many members and friends as possible; to emphasize the importance of worship and the church; and to testify to the belief that disciples of Jesus should go out and bring their neighbors to the spiritual feast."

On Wednesday, January 10th, at 6:30 p.m., the church supper and annual business meeting will be held in the dining room of Thorsby Institute. Reports will be made by each of the departments, new officers will be elected, and plans for a community and social action program initiated.

NOTICE TO ALL STRAWBERRY GROWERS

To every strawberry grower or prospective grower in the Clanton territory, we insist that you attend the annual meeting a the courthouse Saturday, January 6th, 1945, at 10:00 a. m. Officers for the year will be elected and the policies for 1945 and future years charted.

We believe that strawberries are one of our best money crops to depend on for family-sized farmers when planted and handled by the individual help at home.

The present officers are anxious and more than willing to do everything possible to help build and maintain a good acreage in this, the best family income crop we have ever had.

Please come and let's continue to build on our most successful crop association.

All Census Facts Are Strictly Confidential

Alabama farmers and their families are asured by State agricultural leaders and Bureau of Census workers that information given census takers will be strictly confidential and cannot be used for any purpose except for the census.

Every census employee is under oath not to divulge any information obtained from farmers, even to members of his or her own family," advise agricultural and census leaders of the state.

Farmers can render a real service to their country by giving the census takers full information on all of their farming activities.

Census workers will start taking the census on January 8th and will complete the job just as fast as possible. At regular intervals since 1840, a complete agricultural census has been taken. All the facts fathered have been kept strictly confidential just as will the facts gathered in the forthcoming census.

ROGER BABSON SAYS GOOD EDUCATION NECESSARY TO GOOD BUSINESS

Roger Babson in his column January 7 commented upon the fact that "Good Business is Dependent Upon Good Education." He said, "We want a higher standard of living; but we cannot raise the standard of living without first raising the character, health, and intelligence of the people. Good business must be preceded by good education. One is the hatchet and the other is the handle; one is the lock and the other is the key. They are inseparable. Bad business and unemployment always results from a temporary weakness in our educational system."

The citizens of Chilton County want to see the youth of the county grow up to strong, healthy, intelligent people. The parents and the schools have a real responsibility in seeing that children go to school and that they work toward developing their minds and bodies

BAPTIST W. M. S. MET MONDAY

Members of the Clanton First Baptist Church W.M.S. met at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock to study the year books for 1945.

The meeting was presided over by the President, Mrs. Houston Nivens, who was also president last year, giving her duties and each officer in turn gave his duties.

All who were present helped in discussing the work for the coming year and expressed themselves as to what they hoped to accomplished this year.

The meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Roswell Owens.

Mrs. Sophie Jones Named Chairman Of Local A. C. S.

Mrs. Sophie Jones, Chilton County commander of the Field Army of the American Cancer Society, has been asked by Mrs. Ray Meade, the Field Army's State Commander to participate in a contest in which war bonds having a total redemption value of $150 will be awarded county commanders doing unusually good cancer education work between January 1 and May 31.

"County commanders are urged to keep scrapbooks of articles published in their local papers about the work of the Field Army, and these will be submitted to a board of judges at the end of the contest," said Mrs. Meade in announcing the contest. "The scrapbooks of commanders in counties in which there are daily papers will be judged separately from those containing articles published in counties in which there are no daily papers, and separate prizes will be rewarded. The scrapbook which, in the opinion of the judges, shows the best work by a county commander in each classification will be adjudged winner of a $50 war bond, while the scrapbook adjudged second-best in each classification will win a $25 war bond. The quality of the work, as well as the number of articles published, will be considered.

Mrs. Meade has sent to all county commanders a discussion of the principles of newspaper writing prepared by Professor John Luskin, head of the Department of Journalism of the University of Alabama.

Cancer Control Campaign Subject At P.-T. A. Meeting

A large number heard Mr. H. N. Yeager of the faculty speak on the cancer control campaign at the Father's Night meeting of the Chilton County High School P.-T. A., Tuesday evening, January 9th.

Every year in America 160,000 die of cancer, stated Mr. Yeager in describing the urgent need for a public informed and ready to fight this great killer of men, women and children. Early detection and scientific treatment of cancer saves lives. There are only three known ways of treating cancer sucessfully, with surgery, X-rays and radium.

Leaflets from the American Society for the Control of Cancer were distributed. For further information, contact Mrs. Sophia L. Jones, County Commander. Give the spring campaign for the control of cancer cooperation and support, was the closing appeal made by Mr. Yeager.

Mrs. W. H. Klinner County Chairman In Polio Drive

Mrs. W. H. Klinner of Clanton has been named County Campaign Director of the annual fund appeal and March of Dimes to be conducted January 14-31 in celebration of the President's Birthday by The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, it was announced by Mr. George A Mattison, Jr., Birmingham, Ala., State Appeal Chairman. Other prominent citizens all over the county have volunteered to help Mrs. Klinner in this nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis.

Mrs. Klinner is commenting on the need to reinforce our lines of defense against this insidious enemy of childhood, Mrs. Klinner stated, "The 1944 epidemic of infantile paralysis was the second worse outbreak of the disease in its history in the United States. Fortunately, we were on the alert and well prepared to meet that attack in all parts of the nation. More than a million dollars—or ten million dimes—contributed by the American people, were spent by your National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to provide the best of modern care and treatment for all victims of the epidemic. Since no one knows where, or how hard, polio may strike in 1495, we must again be ready to meet the attack when we it may come. Participation in the annual March of Dimes Appeal is our assurance that no victim of infantile paralysis will go uncared for regardless of age, race, creed or color

GLASSCOCK URGE FARMERS COOPERATE IN FARM CENSUS

Every Chilton County farmer is urged by County Agent, M. R. Glasscock, to feel free to give census takers full information on their farming activities.

"We can assure every farmer in the county that all the information will be strictly confidential and will not be used in assessing taxes, or in any other way except for the census," says Mr. Glasscock. "We are advised that it is a violation of federal laws for census takers to divulge any information obtained from farmers, even to members of their own families."

Study Club Hears Book Review

The Study Club held its first meeting of 1945 on January 5th with Mrs Norman L. Roberts as hostess.

The meeting opened with the Club Collect. Mrs. J. P. Hayes, president, presiding. A short business session followed. Mrs. Hayes called upon the Club to respond 100 percent to the infantile paralysis drive.

Mrs Omar Reynolds, program leader for the afternoon, in her gracious manner, and with beautifully chosen words, presented the guest speaker. Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin, who reviewed Dixon Wester's, "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home." She treated the subject from the angle of the soldier as he crossed the bridge from war to peace. It was a summary based on the record of the Revolution, the Civil War and World War I and included victories and defeats of these wars and of soldier-citizen service. Miss Griffin handled her subject in a masterful fashion that held her audiences rapt attention

A delightful salad plate was served by the hostess and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH AT THORSBY

Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark, commander of all Allied forces in Italy, points out former German positions on Gothic line to delegation of visiting congressmen.

EUROPE:
Bulge Shrinks

With 26 of the U. S.' 44 divisions reported in action against the German bulge in Belgium, Nazi Field Marshal Von Rundstedt's great winter blow appeared blunted, with field dispatches indicating that he was pulling his lines back.

But four miles from the Meuse river and 23 miles from Sedan at the peak of their offensive, the German lines shrank sharply as Lieut. Gen. George Patton's 3rd army swung up from the Saar to attack from the south and Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' 1st army recovered its balance to slash in from the north.

Von Rundstedt's withdrawal movement was favored by the rugged terrain, for, in surprising the 1st army on December 16, he chose the rough and hilly Ardennes countryside.

As Von Rundstedt tried to pull in his forces under the heavy pressure of the 3rd and 1st armies, he sent out swarms of Nazi planes to blast at airdromes behind the lines in an attempt to prevent the superior Allied air arm from raking his moving columns. Even so, zooming U. S. fighter-bombers and bombers ripped up enemy armor and trucks.

With U. S. pressure on the Saar relieved by the switch of Lieut. Gen. Patton's forces, the Germans went on the offensive against Lieut. Gen. Alexander Patch's 7th army on the southwestern end of the front, scoring small gains against stiff Yank resistance.

Ruin of a City

As both sides disregarded a plea from Pope Pius XII to withdraw from the city and spare residents the horror of bombardment, house-to-house fighting reduced the once beautiful Hungarian capital of Budapest to a shambles, with fanatical Axis troops resisting Russ advances.

Budapest's streets reverberated with gunfire, as self-propelled artillery and tanks rumbled down thoroughfares, swung sharply around corners, and opened point-blank fire on opposing units. Sharpshooters from cellars, Axis troops linked themselves up by breaking holes through adjoining walls.

Hitler Talks

Declaring ". . . in this war the German people cannot be brought to their knees by strength of arms nor will there again be a 9th of November, 1918 . . ." a subdued but defiant Adolf Hitler told a suffering Reich on New Year's day that the end of the war will not come before 1946, unless by a Nazi victory.

Said the fuehrer: ". . . Except for the Jews, nobody in the Allied camp knows for what he is fighting. But the aims for which we are fighting are clear to all of us. It is the survival of the German people, it is our fatherland, it is our 2,000 year culture, it is the children and grandchildren of our people . . ."

Referring to the attempt on his life last summer, Hitler said: ". . . The 20th of July brought about at the front sad military consequences . . . Nevertheless the day has become a turning point in Germany's destiny because the attempt to annihilate the German people's social state by a plot hatched at the most bitter struggle has failed . . . and I am in a position to assure you that this was the last attempt of its kind . . ."

'Forgotten Front'

With all attention focused on the great battles being fought in western Europe, Italy, it seems, is the "forgotten front" of the present world war.

Despite the overshadowing of the Italian sector, it is still one of the most bitterest of the war, with Allied gains measured in yards and at a heavy cost of men against a fanatical foe cleverly dug into the mountainous terrain, and giving ground only after painful approaches to his position.

FOOD STOCKS:
At Pre-War Levels

Although not as high as in similar periods since 1942, food stocks through the first three months of 1945 should be sufficient to provide civilians with supplies equal to the prewar levels, the U. S. department of agriculture reported.

Potatoes and butter supplies will be below prewar figures, the USDA said, with meat, lard and fresh vegetables about average, while stocks of fluid whole milk, non-fat dairy products, eggs, fish, margarine, cereals, dry peas and citrus fruits should assure high consumption.

Although at prewar levels, supplies of meat during the first three months of 1945 will be substantially below corresponding wartime periods, USDA said, with low inventories, declining production and military requirements cutting into stocks.

LIVING COSTS:
Small Gain

Effectiveness of the nation's price control in combatting inflation is reflected in the fact that although national income rose to 155 billion dollars in 1944 and there was a sharp reduction in the stocks of consumers goods prices only increased 2 per cent, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins declared.

Frances Perkins

Because of substantial boosts in 1941 and 1942, however, when a rising business activity brought up the general level of depression prices, retail costs have increased 28½ per cent since the outbreak of war, Miss Perkins said.

"Even though the price rise is less than half as great as during the First World war," Miss Perkins stated, "an advance of nearly 30 per cent is dangerous. The rise in cost to families with very low incomes has been greater . . . because of the disappearance of low-priced merchandise and because of the rise in food prices. . . ."

PACIFIC:
U. S. Goals

Even as U. S. aerial forces stepped up their attacks on enemy shipping and installations in the Philippine islands preparatory to the pursuit of the American offensive in that last great bastion guarding the Asiatic mainland, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz told a Pearl Harbor press conference that it would be necessary to occupy Japan to win the war.

"I think that the only safe plan is to assume we must invade their homeland and line up our forces accordingly," the admiral said.

With American advances in the Pacific, Admiral Nimitz indicated, Jap war industry was faced with strangulation through increased attack on its supply lines bearing raw materials from southern Asiatic conquests and through bombardment of factory areas.

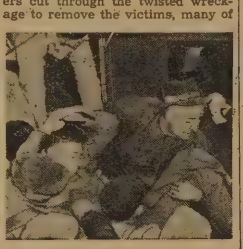
To step up such bombardments, Admiral Nimitz repeated that one of the major U. S. objectives was a landing on the Chinese coast to establish air bases for hitting the enemy's homeland.

MISCELLANY

Again, shipbuilding leads all heavy industry in the earnings of its workers. The prevailing average hourly wage rate in the industry being about $1.33, while weekly earnings in a recent month were $63.68 on an average work week of 47.6 hours. Payrolls for the year in private shipyards will approximate $4,000,000,000 shared by workers in almost every state.

U. S. SPENDING:
At Peak

With the government spending 89 billion dollars on the war alone, total U. S. expenditures reached 97 billion dollars in 1944 to establish an all-time record, preliminary figures showed. This compared with the outlay of less than 10 billion dollars in 1939.



In addition to spending more than at any other time in the nation's history, the government also collected more at 45 billion dollars and borrowed more at 62 billion dollars. For the first time, three war loan drives were held in one year.

Deducting the amount collected from that spent, the government wound up the year with a deficit of 52 billion dollars, to bring the total national debt up to 232 billion dollars. The 1944 figure of 52 billion dollars, however, was about 1½ billion dollars less than the deficit in 1943.

TRAIN WRECK:
48 Killed

Slowed up by a freight train stalled by mechanical trouble, the Southern Pacific railroad's Pacific Limited with 300 persons aboard was creeping through the early morning over the Salt Lake marshes near Ogden, Utah, when a 20-car mail and express train roaring behind crashed into its rear, throwing coaches along the 40-foot causeway like jumbled links in a chain.

Late counts showed 48 persons killed and 81 injured as rescue workers cut through the twisted wreckage to remove the victims, many of whom were service personnel en route to duty after spending holiday furloughs.

Because of the shallow marshlands below the causeway, automobiles could not be driven to the scene, complicating rescue operations, and injured were removed by train for treatment.

NAZI AGENTS:
Seized by FBI

Trained in the use of high explosives, photography and radio operation in Germany and Holland, two Nazi saboteurs were nailed by FBI agents in the New York district before being able to do any damage.

Landed by submarine off the coast of Maine with $60,000 in U. S. currency, forged birth and draft certificates and secret inks, the two saboteurs were making the rounds of New York night spots in an effort to pick up information to radio to Germany at the time they were nabbed.

According to the FBI, one of the saboteurs was a former U. S. navy seaman named William Curtis Colepaugh, alias William C. Caldwell, who was discharged from service early in 1943 because of suspicions he held pro-German sympathies.

Arrest of the two saboteurs brought to ten the number captured by FBI agents after landings from submarines, eight having been caught previously after alighting in Florida, with six of them subsequently executed.

MANPOWER BARREL:
To Scrape Bottom

Uncle Sam will have to scrape the bottom of the barrel for manpower to meet production and military requirements in 1945, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes told a New Year's press conference, declaring that Selective Service "work-or-fight" orders, employment ceilings and restrictions on civilian output may not be sufficient to meet all labor needs.

With the army increasing its call for replacements and thus further draining the manpower pool, Byrnes said the drafting of the nation's 4,000,000 4-F's for industry or non-combat military duty would help maintain war production and release more active servicemen for fighting. Because the largest remaining source of young men is in agriculture, he said, the basis for farm deferments may have to be reviewed.

Terming government seizure inadequate, Byrnes asked for a strengthening of the War Labor board's authority to enforce its decisions on both capital and labor, so as to prevent the loss of production through work disturbances.

MEDICAL MARVEL

Weighing but 1½ pounds at birth, tiny Elizabeth Ann Reyman, born in San Diego, Calif., has grown to 3 pounds, 6 ounces within 65 days in one of the strangest cases in medical annals.

Confined to an incubator where physicians intend to keep her until she weighs 5 pounds, little Elizabeth has been relatively strong and able to kick about freely from birth, though only one out of a 100 babies a little over her weight have a chance of living at delivery.

Maldistribution Factor In Europe's Food Crisis

Shattered Communication Lines Hamper Market Movements; Civil Strife Further Restricts Deliveries.

Recently I saw a list of 12 European countries with an estimate of the number of calories consumed in each now, as compared with their inhabitants' prewar diet.

It was just at the time when the Greek revolt was well under way and only a tight lid was keeping the Belgian pot from boiling over.

The calorie consumption in those two countries was the lowest on the list, 67 and 63 per cent, respectively, of their prewar diet.

About that time Myron Taylor, the President's representative at the Vatican, was warning the Allies that if communism came to Italy, it would come over empty stomachs. Adding up this data the natural assumption is that hunger is the chief cause of unrest in Europe. But it isn't as simple as that. I made some investigations and came upon a number of interesting facts which prove the dangers of over-simplification.

Number one is: Low calories may be a symptom and not a disease. In other words, disorganization and revolt affect the food supply as well as being affected by it.

Number two: Destruction and disorganization are the chief causes of famine and the type of destruction which affects the food supply is not the destruction of food. It is the smashing of railways and rolling stock and blowing up of bridges and doing other things that interrupt transportation. This has done more to create areas of starvation than any planned destruction of the crops themselves by the enemy.

Number three: Conditions are frequently worse after countries are liberated.

One common misconception which needs to be corrected is the total amount and distribution of the food shortage. Since Europe's food problems are of vital concern to America it might be well to clear up some of these erroneous ideas.

Problem Varies in Different Countries

In the first place, in the early years of the war the situation was painted too black. There were various reasons for this. Among them the fact that many countries exaggerated their plight, asking for more than they expected for fear of getting less than they really needed. Later the picture was painted far too rosily. Through all this time the experts were not fooled but the public was.

"It is wrong to say that Europe is starving. It is wrong to say that nobody is starving or will starve," I was informed by a person who is in a position to know if anyone is.

The point is that the situation in various places varies greatly and here we come back to the question of transportation. We might use Greece as an example of a place where revolt has increased the seriousness of the food situation. One of the chief concerns of persons who had no political interest whatever in whether Greece became a purple monarchy or a bright red spot of communism, but who were interested in seeing that the Athenians didn't starve, was the fact that because of the fighting, shiploads of food lay untouched in the harbor of Piraeus.

Athens, Rome, Marseille are all in spots far distant from areas where surplus food exists. Normandy, for instance, could share some of her products with the south of France if there were any way to get the stuff across the country. The grain in the holds of ships in the harbor is no good to the people of Greece unless there is unrestricted passage to and from the docks and men who can unload and transport it to safety.

This question of proximity to supply explains why all over Europe the average consumption level of the farm population is 40 per cent higher than that of the people in urban or manufacturing communities.

One of the paradoxes of Europe's eating troubles is that in most countries the situation often grows worse instead of better after liberation takes place. Italy is an example of what mixed blessings liberation can bring.

Here we begin to see how the twin demons of destruction work out.

As indicated, the direct destruction of food supplies either by bombing, or battle, or German sabotage so far has not been a major factor. Of course, the more rapidly the Allies remove the Germans, the less chance they have to steal the food or the crops and transport them. They had considerable time in Italy. On the other hand, on their hurried trip from Normandy to the Rhine the Nazis were far too busy moving to beg, borrow, steal or destroy. Where they have had a chance to squat as in the Netherlands, Poland and Czechoslovakia, the situation is worse. But until they knew they were going to have to get out of a country they did not wish to destroy productivity and the natives were fed. They had to keep the people alive to support their own military and economic activity and they expected they would have plenty of time to exploit later when they set up their own new order in Europe.

The factors in food production which suffered most were those involved in food processing. It is easier and quicker to wreck a flour mill or a milk plant than a farm. Some fertilizer factories suffered, and of course in Holland there was wholesale obliteration of arable land when the dykes were blown. This is almost permanent damage since the salt from the sea water will sour the soil for years to come.

Complex Economies Cause Trouble

But there were other forces which began to work earlier.

Europe, before the war, produced most of what its own people ate. The things imported were tea and coffee, spices, and fats and oils.

They also had to import much of their cattle food and fertilizer. Germany, striving to be self-sufficient, built many plants for the production of seed oils and raised many oil-seed crops. This was true elsewhere in Europe and because more food value can be produced from the same resources directly than indirectly through raising food for livestock, the livestock was reduced.

Under these conditions, in order to get the greatest value out of food products, strictest regimentation was necessary. When the Germans left a country and controls vanished, conditions immediately became worse unless, under liberation, a stable government could step in immediately and reorganize.

This reorganization was impeded by the destruction of transportation, the disrupted economy and, in the case of countries like Italy, by the effect of fascist rule which has made the people lethargic, dependent and impotent and, departing, left them leaderless.

And so we see the vicious circle in operation—disorganization hampering the food supply, hunger and unrest preventing reorganization. For their own sake, the "haves" must feed the "have-nots." Time is of the essence, and casting bread upon these unhappy waters will be as profitable an investment as it is a gesture of mercy.

When General MacArthur rides up the streets of Manila some day, we hope not far off, he may have a mounted cavalry escort and if he does, three of the high-stepping members may be veterans of the battle of Bataan.

The First cavalry fought for months overseas as foot soldiers. A part of their job happened to be the capture of the racetrack at Taclaban on Leyte. Naturally every man cast envious eyes on some of the horses left there.

Later the horses were rounded up, and lo and behold, among them were three which were identified as having belonged to the 26th cavalry which had fought at Bataan. They were repatriated with acclaim and formed the nucleus of a mounted unit which has been doing excellent reconnaissance on the island.

So history repeats. In the Spanish-American war of 1898 dismounted U. S. cavalry were sent to the Philippines. Later a few horses were obtained and they proved so valuable that the whole regiment was mounted.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat flying. Appealing to several Generals, he is finally told he can get into the fight. He flies a bomber to India, but on arrival is made a ferry pilot and this does not suit him. After a visit to Gen. Chennault he gets a Kittyhawk and soon becomes known as the "one man air force," taking heavy Jap toll in Burma. Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group, but still keeps on knocking down Jap planes. His "Old Exterminator" is badly mauled in a dogfight.

CHAPTER XXIV

As I looked around now the bombers were gone, but climbing up from the South I saw four twin-engine ships that I thought were I-45's; later we decided they were Japanese Messerschmitts. I had plenty of altitude on the leader, and started shooting at him from long range, concentrating on his right engine. He turned to dive, and I followed him straight for the water. I remember grinning, for he had made the usual mistake of diving instead of climbing. But as I drew up on the twin-engine ship, I began to believe that I had hit him from the long range. His ship was losing altitude rapidly in a power glide, but he was making no effort to turn. I came up to within fifty yards and fired into him until he burned. I saw the ship hit the water and continue to burn. We had been going towards the fog bank in the direction of the Philippines, and I wondered if the Jap had been running for Manila.

I shot at two of the other twin-engine ships from long range but couldn't climb up to them. Then I passed over Hongkong island, flying at a thousand feet; I was too low but didn't want to waste any time climbing. And I saw something that gripped my heart—a fenced-in enclosure which I knew was Fort Stanley, the British and American prison camp. There was a large group standing in the camp and waving at my ship. My saddest feeling of the war came over me then. Here were soldiers who had been prisoners of the Japanese for nearly a year. Month after month they had waited for the sight of Allied airplanes attacking Hongkong—and at last it had come. Even in their suffering they were waving a cheer to the few United States planes that had finally come, and I swore to myself I'd come back again and again.

Then I saw above me the criss-crossing vapor paths of an area where fighter ships have sped through an air attack. They almost covered the sky in a cloud. Here and there were darker lines that could have been smoke paths where ships had burned and gone down to destruction.

I was rudely jerked back to attention by a slow voice that yet was sharp: "If that's a P-40 in front of me, waggle your wings." I rocked my wings before I looked. Then I saw the other ship, a P-40 nearly a mile away. I think from the voice it was Tex Hill. I went over towards him and together we dove towards home.

The presence of the other P-40 made me feel very arrogant and egotistical, for I had shot down four enemy ships and had damaged others. So I looped above Victoria harbor and dove for the Peninsular Hotel. My tracers ripped into the shining plate-glass of the penthouses on its top, and I saw the broken windows cascade like snow to the streets, many floors below. I laughed, for I knew that behind those windows were Japanese high officers, enjoying that modern hotel. When I got closer I could see uniformed figures going down the fire-escapes, and I shot at them. In the smoke of Kowloon I could smell oil and rubber. I turned for one more run on the packed fire-escapes filled with Jap soldiers, but my next burst ended very suddenly. I was out of ammunition. Then, right into the smoke and through it right down to the tree-top levels, I headed Northwest to get out of Japanese territory sooner, and went as fast as I could for Kweilin.

I was the last ship in, and the General was anxiously waiting for me, scanning the sky for ships to come in. He knew I had shot down an enemy, for I had come in with my low-altitude roll of victory. But when I jumped from my cramped seat and said, "General, I got four definitely," he shook my hand and looked very happy. "That makes nineteen then," he said, "for the fighters and the bombers."

We had lost a fighter and a bomber. The bomber had become a straggler when one engine was hit by anti-aircraft; then it was shot to pieces by one of the twin-engined Jap fighters. The pilot had managed even then to get it down, but he had remained in the ship to destroy the bomb-sight, and had been shot through the foot by a Jap cannon. Two of the bomber crew had bailed out and were captured. The other two carried the injured pilot until he had begged them to leave him alone and escape. They had bandaged his foot tightly, but had refused to go without him.

As they moved on through the enemy lines that night, they stopped to rest, and the wounded pilot crawled away from them to insure their getting away to the guerrilla lines. They escaped, and later we received a letter signed by the other two crewmen which said that the pilot had been captured and was then in a Japanese hospital. The letter was a Japanese propaganda leaflet that the Japs had dropped near Kweilin, but being properly signed, it gave us hope for the remainder of the crew, and for the heroic pilot, Lieutenant Allers.

That night Morgan led a night raid to bomb Canton, and had a successful attack. Later the same night, Ed Bayse led six bombers to destroy the power station on Hongkong Island. In his return to Kweilin, five of his ships landed but the other continued to circle—informing the radioman that he had no air speed and thus was having difficulty bringing the fast bomber in to land.

Bayse, who had worked all the day and most of the night over enemy lines, started his ship and went aloft, got the other ship on his wing in formation, and told the pilot to keep the position. And then this experienced bomber pilot led the younger pilot in to a safe landing. It was teamwork of the sort that had begun to appear among the bomber crews, and more important still, as the co-ordinated attack had shown, between the fighters and bombers. This was what Colonel Cooper had been working for during the past several months.

Cooper had done another fine job, one that we learned of only after we returned to Kunming from the attack. In India the field in Assam had been raided heavily by the Japanese at the same hour as our attack on Kowloon, and simultaneously the Japanese had tried to strike at Kunming with a large force. Colonel Cooper had been left behind in the hospital with a sinus infection. He was chafing at the bit, and we sympathized with him—for after having planned the greatest raid of the war in China, he had been forced out of accompanying the mission. But it has always been our contention out there that "everything happens for the best." And it proved out again. When the enemy planes approached Kunming, Cooper left the hospital and took charge of the defense of the home base. He sent Schiel's Squadron towards the South at exactly the right time. They not only intercepted the enemy and foiled the attack but shot down eight of the enemy. That made the score for the Group twenty-seven enemy planes on October 25th, and three highly successful bombing raids.

Gen. Chennault observes the return of the C.A.T.F. from a raid. Lieut. Grosselose at left.

We were ordered home the next day, although we now had the enemy at our mercy without fighter protection against future raids towards Hongkong. But heavy attacks had come to India, and we were needed to protect the terminus of the ferry route to China.

We managed, however, to leave a small force of P-40's under Holloway and Alison, with mission to divebomb shipping in Victoria harbor within the next few days. They took eight planes down and dove through the overcast towards some big enemy freighters that were on the way South towards the Solomons. Their bombs damaged two 8,000-ton freighters and sank a 12,000-ton vessel. Captain O'Connell made this last direct hit by almost taking his bomb down the smoke-stack of the enemy vessel, and in doing so he was shot down. He took the bomb very low, and in recovering from the dive he was attacked by a single enemy, who got one of the best pilots in the Squadron. Clinger and Alison saw the enemy ship, but from their distance they could do nothing in time to save O'Connell. While Alison was getting the lone enemy ship, Clinger dove in anger along the docks of Kowloon, strafing three anti-aircraft positions in the face of very heavy ground-fire.

The most vivid memories of our air war in China come from the little things. Like the memory of General Chennault, sitting there at the mouth of the cave in Kweilin through the long hours while we were away on the attack missions. Sitting there smoking his pipe and, like a football coach, planning the next week's work. Joe, the General's little black dashshund, would be burrowing into the rocks, looking for the inevitable rats. When with the passing minutes the P-40's or the bombers were due to return, the General would begin to watch the eastern sky. There he would sit without a word until the last ship was accounted for. Sometimes I thought: The General lives through every second of the combat with us. With his keen knowledge of tactics and of the Jap too, he sees exactly what we are doing.

Another memory that always brings a smile is Lieutenant Couch's face when he was explaining what happened the first time he got a Jap Zero in his sights. The enemy ship was a lone "sitter," probably some inexperienced Japanese pilot who wasn't looking around and didn't know the P-40 was behind him. Couch said he kept moving up closer and closer until he knew the Jap was going to be dead the instant he pressed his trigger. Then he pressed—and nothing happened. He squeezed the trigger until he thought he'd press the top off the stick; he found that he shut his eyes, flinched, and bit his lip, but still the guns didn't fire.

The American pilot from the Carolinas swore and throttled back, dropping to the rear while the Jap kept flying innocently on. After Couch had recharged his guns he began to stalk the Zero again, going closer and closer until he could see the enemy pilot at the controls. He set his sights right on the cockpit and pressed the trigger once more. And again nothing happened.

Couch came home disgusted, and I think he worked on his guns all night.

Up between Hengyang and Lingling we had broken the main Jap force with several attacks and there were only stragglers around the sky. We had been searching them out for fifteen minutes when I saw and heard a remark that was nothing short of classic. From 21,000 feet I observed a lone Zero. But there was a P-40 trailing him, and so I held my altitude and watched. The P-40 closed the gap more and more, following the acrobatics of the Jap, and then drew up for the kill. As the tracers from the six guns went into the Zero I heard the voice of Captain Goss say, "There, Hirohito, you bastard—God rest your soul." Over the radio you could also hear the staccato roll of the six Fifties. The Zero slowly rolled over to destruction.

Sometimes the hated Japs had the last word. In regions where the air-warning net was working poorly or not at all, our first knowledge of the approach of the enemy would be the sight of Japanese bombers overhead. As the bombs blasted the runways and the Jap radial engines were taking their ships at high altitude back towards their bases, we would hear over the radio on our exact frequency, in perfect English: "So sorry, please, so sorry."

We would just shake our fists and wait for better days.

When I first brought "Old Exterminator" to China, I had painted the number 10 on the fuselage. Later on we used the last three numerals of the Air Corps numbers for call letters, or were assigned some name like "ash," "oak," or "pine." But the first time I came back from Chungking, late one afternoon, I approached Kunming down the usual corridor, expecting that to identify me automatically, and from far out I called by radio: "One-Zero, coming in from the North." Of course I was using the numerals of the number "ten" to identify me to the radio-man. Instead, as I came over the field I saw anti-aircraft men of the Chinese Army running for their guns, and I saw six P-40's taking off to shoot the invader down. Meaning me. You've probably guessed it by now—the radioman gathered that some one had just warned him that one enemy Zero was about to strafe the field. Needless to say, I took myself to safer places for a few minutes until I could properly identify my ship. Then I landed and changed the fuselage number to lucky "seven"—but definitely not seventy.

There just wasn't much relaxation in China with Scotch at one hundred dollars gold a bottle—when you could find it. In fact, we didn't get to drink anything except boiled water and that really terrible rice wine. This we had to learn to down with the Chinese and in their manner, which was with the inevitable salute, "Gambey," or "bottoms up." Then they'd come and proudly show you the bottoms of their glasses, and you'd have to follow suit with a weak little gambey.

Then there was the incessant ringing of the telephones in the warning-net plotting-room that got on all our nerves. After months I found out that without exception every pilot tried not to let others know of his nervousness. But it became unmistakable, for the tension that built up around the card-tables in the alert shacks was not the most effectively disguised in the world.

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 3:13 - 4:11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve.—Matthew 4:10.

Ready for service—this is the next scene from our Lord's life which comes before us in Matthew. Thirty years had passed since His birth, but these are hidden in silence, save for the one glimpse of Him in the temple which is given only by Luke.

These were not years of idleness or luxury. He was obedient to Joseph and Mary. He worked in the carpenter shop. He fellowshiped with God's people, and best of all, with His heavenly Father. He showed obedience and faithfulness in life's ordinary things. And then, all at once, the day of His public ministry was at hand.

His baptism and temptation were a part, the opening event, of that ministry. We find Him:

I. Identified With Sinners (3:13-15).

John, the fiery forerunner of Jesus, had come with a burning message of repentance, and sinners were coming to him to be baptized as a sign of their contrition.

Suddenly Jesus appeared. John pointed to Him as the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1:29). When He offered Himself for baptism, John demurred. There was no sin in Jesus that He should need baptism. There was no occasion for Him to express in a special act His obedience, for He always did the will of God. (Heb. 10:7)

Why then was Jesus baptized? We find the answer in the central purpose for which He came into the world, namely, to save sinners. Here at His official entrance upon that work He, who though He knew no sin was to become sin for us, took the sinner's place in baptism. It was not because He had Himself sinned, but because He was to become the substitute for the sinner. What marvelous condescension and grace!

II. Approved of God (3:16, 17).

The Holy Spirit, like a dove, rested upon Him. The dove is one of the symbols of the Spirit, and speaks of gentleness, meekness, purity, peace and love.

Out of the eternal dwelling places in heaven came the voice of the eternal Father expressing His approval and pleasure in His son. The person and work of Christ bear their own commendation of Him to us as divine. Here we have the Father's word, and the Holy Spirit's coming. Thus we have here the entire Trinity.

III. Tempted by Satan (4:1-11).

A time of testing was ahead. Jesus did not fear it, but notice that He did not seek it either. He was led by the Spirit into this great conflict. We may learn that we must not seek nor put ourselves in the way of temptation, but when it comes we may meet it without fear. God is with us.

He was tempted as the Messiah, and the Son of God, and it was a real testing, one from which we need to learn what to do when tempted. It was threefold: physical, spiritual and vocational.

1. The Physical Temptation. Forty days of conflict with Satan made His body hungry. Under such circumstances it was a terrific temptation to use His divine power to make bread. He could have done it, but He did not. One doesn't have to live, but one does have to obey and honor God.

Note how effectively Christ used Scripture (from Deuteronomy—have you read it lately?). It is the only sure answer to Satan's temptations, but you must learn it if you are going to use it.

2. The Spiritual Temptation. Here Satan asked Him to presume on the grace of God. If he cannot get you to abandon your faith, he will urge you to go to some fanatical and unscriptural extreme in using it.

God always cares for His own when they are in the place where He wants them to be, but He does not deliver us from foolhardy and unnecessary risks which we want to call "faith."

3. The Vocational Temptation. Christ had come into this world to wrest from Satan, the usurper (who is now the prince of this world—John 12:31), the kingdoms of this world. Satan suggested to Him that He could accomplish this by simply bowing down to him—thus escaping Calvary's cross.

Satan is busy urging men to take spiritual bypaths. He has his own leaders who skillfully evade and avoid the cross. They have a religion without the offense of the cross, but, mark it well, it is not Christianity, even though it bears that name.

Jesus met and defeated Satan by the use of Scripture, and by honoring God the Father. Jesus' resistance of the devil caused him to go away. It still works. Read James 4:7. Then came the angels to minister to Him. Victory over the enemy of our souls brings peace and spiritual refreshment.

BROWN ACTS OLD TODAY
DUE TO MUSCULAR PAINS!
Naturally a man looks old beyond his years when he's sore from lumbago or other muscle pains. The famous McKesson Laboratories developed Soretone Liniment for those cruel pains—due to exposure, strain, fatigue or over-exercise. Get the blessed relief of Soretone's cold heat action;—
1. Quickly Soretone acts to enhance local circulation.
2. Check muscular cramps.
3. Help reduce local swelling.
4. Dilate surface capillary blood vessels.
Soretone contains methyl salicylate, a most effective pain-relieving agent. There's only one Soretone—insist on it for Soretone results. 50¢. A big bottle, only $1.

LETTER TO MOTHER OF SERVICE MAN

December 7th, 1944

Dear Mrs. Vinson:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I write you this letter concerning your son, Herman.

Herman has been able to adjust himself rapidly to the constantly changing conditions and as a result has performed his duty in such a way to bring credit upon himself and to his country, fellow comrades, and company since being with us. He is a soldier of whom you, myself and the whole company can be justly proud.

Don't worry about Herman, he is healthy and well able to take care of himself in any situation that might arise. I sincerely hope that you are well and that everything at home is going on as smoothly as possible.

Very respectfully yours,
LEE R. BARNES,
Captain, Infantry.

Friends of Cpl. Lavern Klinner of the U. S. Marines, are happy to have him here spending some time, after serving in the Southwest Pacific for the past 18 months.

Cpl. Klinner, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Klinner of Route Four, will report to Cherry Point, N. C., on the 19th for flight training.

First Lieut. Woody R. Klinner, 26, of Route Two, Maplesville, Ala., has arrived at Army Air Forces Redistribution Station No. 2 in Miami Beach, Fla., for reassignment processing after completing a tour of duty outside the continental United States.

He flew 45 missions as a P-51 pilot during six months in England and France and won the Air Medal and the Purple Heart. He was injured parachuting from his plane over France and was a prisoner for a time in a German hospital before advancing Allied troops liberated him. He joined the AAF October 9, 1939. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Klinner, and his wife, Lennie Leverne, live at the same address in Maplesville.

Walter Kendrick, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Kendrick, of Route 2, Plantersville, Ala., has been appointed a Cadet-Midshipman in the United States Merchant Marine Cadet Corps and assigned to preliminary training at the Cadet Basic School, Pass Christian, Miss.

Willie Daniel Jones, son of Mr. R. Jones of Clanton Route Three, is now enrolled in the U. S. Maritime Service Training Station in St. Petersburg, Fla.

He attended high school in Cooper, Ala., prior to enrollment in the Maritime Service, he was employed as a Service Station Operator.

Mid-Shipman Joe Escoe visited relatives and friends here Saturday.

Friends of T-Sgt. Hershel Penton will be glad to learn that he is home from 13 months overseas in the Italian Theatre of operations.

Sgt. Penton, who is an aerial gunner on a B-26 Maurader, finished his alloted 65 missions and arrived at home today (Tuesday) to spend 30 days with his family, Mrs. Delene McDowell Penton and their little daughter, Linda.

Sgt. Penton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Penton reside at their home on Route 3.

ENSG. URAL MARGIS ROBINSON

Ensign Ural Margis Robinson, son of Rev. and Mrs. F. O. Robinson of Birmingham, formerly of Mitchell Dam, is attending the Naval Training School at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.

Ensign Robinson was graduated from Howard College last Summer, and was commissioned an Ensign in the Naval Reserve shortly afterwards. A native of Chilton County, he is a graduate of the Verbena High School. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Robinson of Mitchell Dam, and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hand of North Clanton.

WOUNDED IN EUROPEAN AREA

Pfc. Broadus O. Williams, son of Mrs. Buzella Williams of Route One, Thorsby, Ala.

Sgt. Milton Cleckler of Route 3, is among a battling group of engineers, who would rather trade shots with the Germans from slit trenches on the battle line than build bridges in the rear areas. The engineers have built up a reputation for themselves as a bunch of daredevils who can really fight.

This group is with the Sixth Army in France.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

C. H. Dansby of Verbena was in to see us this week and renewed his subscription to the News. Mr. Dansb, like many others including ourselves, realize that what the county newspaper needs is more county news. He suggests that we get our good friend, Jim Plott, to help us out in that section of Chilton County. According to Mr. Dansby, what Jim Plott doesn't know about the happenings in that neck of the woods, just hasn't happened. But what we want our readers to understand is that if you want to see it in your newspaper—then write and tell us about it. A penny postcard will do, and there are several thousand readers that would appreciate reading and knowing it.

Mrs. Hugh Simpson brought a cute souvenir into the office this week. It was from her son, Charlie, somewhere in Holland. It was in the shape of a bottle and was all painted up like a doll. When you took the cap off the top, there was another bottle inside, just enough smaller to fit snugly in the larger bottle. Upon taking the next cap off you came upon the same thing. Finally after lifting out seven or eight bottles, each alike as two bottles in a bottle, you got to the bottom of the thing—which was sill a bottle, and about the size of a good size bean.

This is a story about dear Lowe. No, this is a story about low deer. Anyway, dear Lowe laid two deer low. If you think that's confusing, think about the two deer. Ruben Lowe killed them on his deer hunt last week. Says he was the only one about that got anything at all and he feels quite chesty about it. We should have mentioned this last week but he didn't give us any of the steak and we were sore. R. C. Williams treated us much better.

The choir in the little country church was practicing a new anthem. "Now don't forget," cautioned the choirmaster, "the tenors will sing alone until we come to the gates of hell. Then you all come in."

A girl turned up at work the other day wearing two officer's silver bars pinned to her sweater. One of her office mates asked: "Is your boy friend a captain?"

"Goodness, no!" she said. "Two lieutenants."

The mountaineer walked into the doctor's office and told the doctor that he wanted him to see what he could do about patching up his son-in-law's ear, saying: "I shot a hole in it yesterday."

The doctor reprimanded him severely. The idea! Shooting his son-in-law!

The mountaineer replied: "Waal, you see, he wasn't my son-in-law yesterday."

And then there was the little moron who wanted to die with his boots on so he wouldn't hurt his toes when he kicked the bucket.

NOTHING ON THE BALL

Nit—Why can't the Yankees play poker as well as baseball?

Wit — Easy. Because all the "cards" are in St. Louis!

Looking Ahead

School Boy—What business do you expect to take up when you finish school?

New Boy—Well, it looks as if I'd have to take up land, a shovelful at a time!

Never Fails

Boy (in store)—Do you have anything that will wake me early in the morning?

Clerk—Yes, we have, but I'm sure his mother would refuse to part with him.

Change of Climate

There once was a farmer who lived right smack on the Russian-Polish border. He worried over it for years.

"I'm a man without a country," he would wail aloud. "I don't know where I live."

Eventually, he paid a surveyor to size up the situation. "My friend," the surveyor stated at length, "you live just inside Poland."

"Thank God!" the newly made Pole cried. "No more of those horrible Russian winters."

Down on the Farm

Hi—That certainly was a sure-footed horse Mr. Crumm bought last week.

Si—How did you find out so soon?

Hi—He kicked me in the same place three times!

In the Navy

First Gob—What would be the first thing you'd do if you fell overboard?

Second—I don't know. What would you do first?

First Gob—Land in water!

OUT COLD!

She—Did you get hurt badly while you were on the team?

He—No, it was when the team was on me!

Black Market

Driver—What's the charge for this battery?

Mechanic—Six and a half volts.

Driver—Here's a buck. Slip in an extra volt and don't tell anybody.

There's a Difference

Myron—Your aunt calls her dog and her husband by the same pet name. It must cause a lot of confusion.

Byron—Oh, no. She always speaks gently to the dog.

Indies Villagers Are Burned Alive, Places Wiped Out

Sumatran and Javan Groups Massacred by Japs in Style of Nazis.

SAN FRANCISCO. — Emulating the Germans at Lidice, Japanese have wiped out at least two villages of the Netherlands Indies with virtually their entire populations, headquarters of Netherlands forces in the Far East announced.

A village near Medan on Sumatra was soaked with kerosene and petrol and burned to the ground. Inhabitants who tried to escape were shot with machine guns. A village on Java was set afire by incendiary bombs and machine guns also were turned on those trying to flee.

Atrocities Described.

Other atrocities were described in a document, "Japanese Atrocities in Occupied Netherlands Indies." It listed cases of savage mistreatment of prisoners of war and civilian populations.

Some persons were burned alive. Some were forced to drink soapy water until they were bloated and then soldiers jumped on their stomachs until the water spouted from their mouths. Prisoners were suspended by their feet and their heads were bumped on the ground. Others were forced to stand with their head thrown back and their eyes opened to the blazing sun.

Javanese women who resisted the advances of Japanese soldiers, the document related, were bayonetted through the breasts.

"The brutality practiced by the enemy during his administration of the islands has been so appalling that this headquarters is making public a few of the instances but by no means the most severe," the document said.

Names Not Given.

The names of the destroyed villages were not published but the document said the one on Sumatra was wiped out because it was the home of a newspaper writer who criticized the Japanese in an article in the Medan newspaper.

The Java village refused to give up its rice crop after two harvests had been seized by the Japanese. The citizens were so enraged they killed a policeman sent to arrest a man accused of being the ringleader of the "opposition." The Japanese surrounded the place immediately, bombed it and watched the population perish in the flames.

Prisoners, the document said, are on a starvation diet. They have insufficient clothing to protect them from the weather and no medical attention is provided.

"As a result the death rate in prisoner of war and internment camps is unbelievably high," it said.

Wrote Song When Jilted; Weds, Writes Another

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y. — The man who wrote "My Melancholy Baby" after being jilted at the altar more than 30 years ago finally has married—and has written a new song for his bride.

Ernest Burnett, 60 years old, whose 1910 torch song still is popular, said that he was married September 30 in New York to Mrs. Anna Louchlin Fallon, 55, his Saranac Lake landlady. Mr. Burnett, who came here last May, said they became engaged three months ago.

The name of the new song? "There's a Rainbow in My Heart."

Mr. Burnett, who laughingly referred to the jilting which kept him single for so long, said a motion picture would be based on "Melancholy Baby" and that he plans to go to Hollywood soon as technical adviser for the film.

Comes Up With Novel Way to Pay Auto Fines

INDIANAPOLIS. — When Robert L. Keiser told Judge John McNeils that he was interested in improving traffic conditions, the judge suggested that he take the streetcar and leave his car at home.

Keiser had nine overtime parking stickers and one signal disobedience charge against him when he appeared in court. He said that he received many overtime stickers, let them accumulate and paid them off about twice a year.

Ride in Plane Restores Sight Gone for 40 Years

DALLAS. — David Lefkofsky really got his money's worth out of his first airplane ride. Lefkofsky, who had been partially blind in one eye for 40 years, closed his good eye to rest it while en route, and found that he was looking at people on the plane with the other eye. An eye specialist explained a cataract might have been relieved in the change of altitude.

A Family Beats Retreat In Home Front Disaster

KANSAS CITY, MO. — The gravities of war caught up with the Paul Fisher family recently. Their radio, vintage 1939, went to pieces first. Then Mrs. Fisher discovered a part of her washing machine "smashed." The sweeper also made a most peculiar noise. Mr. Fisher arrived at that stage and his wife remarked, "At least the icebox works." Whereupon Fisher opened the icebox and the door fell off.

Eyes Alight

By MARY M. KERN

McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Features.

IT WAS her family's first comment on seeing the portrait. "You'd never know it was you, Mom." It made her wish she hadn't saved nickels and dimes so that all of them except Ed, their father, might come to the art gallery this spring day. Jim and Mike were strutting about, squinting at the picture; Sam wanted to poke six-year-old fingers into the canvas; and only Gertrude, 17 and the oldest of the children, stood quietly.

Jim's voice brought her back. "Would you think Mom was that thin?"

Mom winced as she saw the three-quarter length oil painting of herself, blue eyes luminous, black hair back from her forehead, a bright peasant shawl around her youthful shoulders. Even Ed had not known her when at Gertrude's age, 30 years before, she had posed for this. Twelve years later Mom had met Ed at the mill where both worked, and they were married.

Sam leaned against his mother's gingham skirt. "Tell us again, Mom. About the picture."

Mom sat down on a bench in the gallery. "Peter O'Connell came to room next door to where I lived."

"And the painter guy ast you," supplied Mike.

"Asked," put in Gertrude. Mom was acutely aware of Gertrude's dulled, despairing voice. Her father's had been harsh, strident this morning. When Gertrude had tearfully tried to argue, Ed had shouted her down. "I'm tired of these fancy notions. You start work at the mill Monday—or get out!"

Mom winced as she saw the three-quarter length oil painting of herself.

Mom's heart lurched, remembering. All of Gertrude's teachers at high school said she should finish her senior year and prepare to go into teaching. But none of the talking made any difference. It was just Ed. He was a good man but hard and cold except about working at the mill and things like pool and horse racing. Look at the way he always tried to keep Mom herself from listening to the symphony over the radio.

Mom brought her thoughts back with effort. "The painter had the shawl, his grandmother's, from Ireland."

"Was it fun posing?" Mike queried.

It was unadulterated happiness. "It was work, too," Mom went on. "You get tired sitting."

"You never knew Peter O'Connell died or what happened till Miss Adams told us at school that the picture was coming in this exhibit, did you?" asked Jim.

"He went away. He couldn't pay his rent."

Yes, for a little time while posing for 40-year-old, visionary Peter O'Connell there had been something in Mom's eyes. Knowing him she had glimpsed another world. She—who lived on the wrong side of the tracks, who had no precedent for such a dream and no one to lend her a hand—had hoped she could study music. It had even seemed possible. But there had been her mother to help and all those younger brothers and sisters.

Jim and Mike were taking one last look at the portrait. Gertrude stepped closer, too, but Mom noticed she walked as though nothing mattered.

Mom straightened imperceptibly. She knew what she must do. Because it would only be the same thing over again later with Ed about Jim's interest in electricity and Mike's seeming bent for music. She would send Gertrude back to high school Monday and if Ed drove her away from home then Mom and the boys would go, too. Mom's face was grave, realizing how hard that would be, but her head was up. She was strong. She could still go back to the mill.

Gertrude was almost out the door. Mom hurrying after her felt a new spirit carrying her on in her decision which she knew had been inevitable. It occurred to her to wonder what was strengthening her courage now when her need was greatest. But Gertrude was turning and Mom, explaining eagerly to her, put aside her question. Only Gertrude could read the answer in her mother's blue eyes which were alight with hope, not now for herself but for her children, but still singularly like the eyes of The Girl With the Shawl.

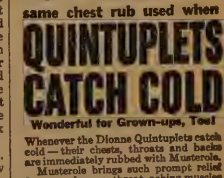
SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In spite of wartime restrictions, American motorists traveled 280 billion passenger miles in 1943, a drop of about 44 per cent from the all-time high set in 1941. Steam railroad passenger miles traveled in 1943 were 2000 per cent above 1941.

Another proof of the importance of rubber in tires: 34 large cities in the U. S. receive all their milk by motor trucks.



A single skid can take as much as 100 miles off a tire. Wartime speed and careful driving will prevent this mileage waste.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

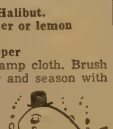
Crisply-Coated Fish Takes It Easy on the Budget
(See Recipes Below)

Serve Fish Often

As civilian meat supplies grow leaner, fish will again come to the rescue as a good protein food. Fish is easier to prepare than meat, and it bakes, broils, fries and cooks quickly.

Fish is at its best when it's perfectly cooked. By that, I mean, the bones separate from the delicate flesh, and the coating is crisp and golden brown if the fish is pan-fried or broiled.

This delectable food is available in large quantity now, and it's wise to plan to serve it not once a week, but several times, to lessen the drain on red points. When served with a garnish of lemon and parsley or one of the excellent sauces, fish can become a regular family favorite.



Condiments should be used wisely so that fish can take on an agreeable flavor. Their flavors should be subtle rather than pronounced so that the delicate flavor of the fish is not completely lost.

Baked Whitefish.
3 pounds whitefish
2½ cups bread crumbs (dry)
2 tablespoons bacon, minced
1 teaspoon green pepper, minced
Onion, large, minced
5 slices bacon
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper

Mix bread crumbs, minced bacon, green pepper, onion and seasonings and lay on fish. Place a slice of bacon on this and fold over fish. Place on rack in open pan and lay remaining bacon over top. Bake 35 minutes in a very hot oven (450 degrees), basting often with fat in pan. Serve with green pepper and lemon slices. For sauce, mix together the following: 3 teaspoons minced green pepper, 3 tablespoons catsup, and 5 tablespoons mayonnaise.

Broiled Halibut.
Anchovy butter or lemon
Halibut
Salt and pepper

Wipe fish with damp cloth. Brush with melted butter and season with salt and pepper. Arrange on broiler pan and broil until fish is well browned. Spread with anchovy butter when ready to serve or garnish with lemon.

Baked Fish With Mustard Sauce.
1½ pounds fillet of haddock
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ cup dried bread crumbs
Salt and pepper

Cut fillets in six servings. Season lightly with salt and pepper. Lay in shallow, well greased pan. Make sauce of 1 tablespoon butter, flour, water, lemon juice and mustard, stirring constantly until thickened. Add remaining tablespoonful of butter to bread crumbs and sprinkle over fish. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for about 20 minutes.

When much fish is served, it is good to vary the method of cooking and serve it as a souffle occasionally:

Fish Souffle.
(Serves 6)

1 package flounder or similar fish
½ cup boiling water
¾ teaspoon salt
Heavy cream
2½ tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
⅛ teaspoon pepper
4 egg yolks, stiffly beaten
4 egg whites stiffly beaten

Cook the fillet of flounder in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain, reserving liquid.

Add the cream to make 1 cup. Separate fish into fine flakes. Combine butter, flour, salt and pepper. Add cream and cook until smooth and thick. Add fish and cool. Blend in beaten egg yolks, mixing well. Fold in beaten whites. Turn into buttered casserole. Place in a pan of hot water and bake for 1 hour in pre-heated 350-degree oven.

Stuffings add interest to any type of fish. Bread stuffings or those with celery, mushrooms, or chestnuts may be used. In the following, rice stuffing is suggested with pike:

Fish With Rice Stuffing
(Serves 4)

1 3-pound pike
2 tablespoons butter
½ pound mushrooms, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped onion
¼ cup bacon drippings
1 cup cooked rice
Salt and pepper
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
2 beaten eggs

Place fish in shallow pan and broil under moderate heat for 15 minutes, basting with the 2 tablespoons of butter. Turn; broil 10 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Cook mushrooms and onions in bacon drippings until tender. Add rice, seasonings and eggs; mix well and mound the stuffing in center of serving platter. Place fish, skin side up over stuffing. Fish may also be baked with stuffing, in a moderate oven for 45 minutes, basting with butter. Garnish with lemon slices.

Cheese sauce is an excellent accompaniment for fish as in this case:

Baked Fish With Cheese Sauce.
(Serves 4)

1 chopped onion
¼ pound sliced cheese
1 2½-pound pike, halibut or perch
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk

Place onion and half of cheese in fish cavity. Place remaining cheese on top of fish. Add remaining ingredients and pour over fish. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Have Sauces with Fish: Combine melted butter with lemon juice and chopped parsley. Serve at once.

Take 1 cup hot white sauce (medium) and mix with 2 hard-boiled eggs and 1 chopped dill pickle. Keep hot until served.

Mix mayonnaise with an equal amount of sour cream and then add drained, chopped cucumber to it. Season with salt and pepper.

Mayonnaise may also be mixed with scraped onion, parsley, chopped pickle and chopped pimiento.

Add grated American cheese to heated tomato soup and blend lightly. Serve over baked fish.

Mix one cup of mayonnaise or white sauce with the finely chopped whites of two eggs. Put the yolks through a sieve and sprinkle over the top of the sauce.

Mix ½ cup finely chopped and drained cucumber with one cup of sour cream. Sprinkle with paprika or minced parsley before serving on fish.

Splendid Cough Relief Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is amazing. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you sleep. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

New Quick Roll Recipe-Easy and Good!

Make them with Fleischmann's yellow label Yeast—the only yeast with those EXTRA vitamins

QUICK ROLLS

½ cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cake Fleischmann's Yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
3 cups sifted flour

Scald milk, add sugar and salt; cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water—and be sure it's Fleischmann's yellow label, the only fresh yeast with all those extra vitamins. Add to lukewarm milk. Add 1½ cups flour and beat until perfectly smooth. Add melted shortening and remaining flour, or enough to make an easily handled dough. Knead well. Shape into rolls and place in well-greased pan. Cover and let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk (about 1 hour). Bake in moderate oven at 400° F. about 20 minutes. Makes 12.

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1945 — NUMBER 3

Hickman Appointed State Sunday School Department Head

The Rev. A. T. Hickman, pastor of the Temple Church, has been appointed State Sunday School Representative for the Assemblies of God in Alabama His appointment was made last Monday in a meeting of the State Official Board of the Assemblies of God in Montgomery. He was appointed Chairman of the Conference Course Committee, which directs training for young ministers and Sunday School teachers. Part of his work will be conducting Bible Seminars over the state for the benefit of prospective ministers and Sunday School workers. He will also conduct Sunday School Conventions throughout the year over the state of Alabama in the churches of the Assemblies of God.

Rev. Mr. Hickman has had years in the ministery, and in Sunday School work, and his able leadership is expected to be a great blessing to the churches of the Assemblies of God denomination in our State.

FARMERS AGAIN URGED BUY FERTILIZERS EARLY

Auburn, Ala. — Farmers should continue to accept early delivery of fertilizer, War Food Administration officials advise after consultations with representatives of the fertilizer industry. Victory over Germany, even at an early date, would not ease labor, transportation, and warehousing problems sufficiently to warrent farmers' resumption of pre-war fertilizer buying habits.

Before the war farmers customarily bought little fertilizer for a new crop season before January 1. However, at the request of the WFA, other agencies, and the industry, farmers during the war have bought and stored increasing amounts of fertilizer in the last six months of each year—well ahead of the season of use.

State Commander Cancer Society Confers With Local Chairman

The County Commander of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, Mrs. Sophia L. Jones, received a visit from Mrs. Ray Meade, of Birmingham, State Commander, who is travelling through the state organizing the work. Mrs. Meade informed Mrs. Jones that the state meeting of the Field Army of The American Society scheduled for Feb., 23, in Montgomery, has been canceled. Decision to abandon plans for the meeting was due to the request of the Office of War Mobilization for cancellation of conventions attended by 50 or more persons.

Five half-sisters. 13 grandchildren and 2 great grand children. Step mother, Mrs. Beckie Rawlinson. Spigener Funeral Home was in charge.

Small oranges are a better buy for the family's breakfast, both in price and in quality, than big oranges, reports the United States Department of Agriculture. Tests have shown that The juice from the little oranges generally is higher in solids, acid and vitamin C than either medium-sized or big oranges.

More cottage cheese, chocolate milk, buttermilk and skim milk powder are expected on civilian markets this year. This is due to efforts being made to help farmers sell their milk whole instead of separating it on the farm, then selling only the cream for butter and feeding the skim milk to hogs, calves or chickens.

Farm families who do home canning of rationed foods may give away as many as 100 quarts for each member of the family, ration free. Families which cure their own meats may give hams or other rationed gifts provided they collect points for them and turn the points into the War Price and Rationing Board.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MOTOR BUS OPERATORS

Six thousand motor coaches, presenting an investment of $90 million dollars, will be ordered by the nation's inter-city bus lines as soon as the lifting of wartime priorities permits their manufacture. In addition, a program of rehabilitating all present equipment will provide employment for tens of thousands of automobile workers. These were the findings of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators as the organization completed a survey of the industry's post-war needs.

"Normally, the country's inter-city bus lines require upwards of 2,000 motor coaches a year," said Arthur M. Hill, association president. "Because transportation is vital to the war effort, the manufacture of a limited number of buses has been permitted in the past three years but far less than the actual requirements were met. Furthermore, these are Victory models that lack the comfort and luxury features post-war travelers will demand.

"While the inter-city bus industry's requirement of 6,000 motor coaches may appear small in comparison with the projected market for passenger cars," Mr. Hill explained, "it should be remembered that business, with new luxury equipments, will average $15,000 in cost and will require a not unreasonably great number of man hours for manufacture. Even when the pent-up demand is met, the anticipated post-war travel boom will send requirements for subsequent years above previous levels.

The plans of nearly all bus companies also provide for the complete rebuilding of a major portion of their fleets when manpower and parts are available. This will offer employment for thousands of ex-service men.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

One day a passer-by saw an old Irishman digging away on a cellar wall, and he asked, "Pat, what are doing this mornng?" With a knowing look the old man replied, "Be dad, my friend, I am digging a hole in this wall so that the darkness can get out." There being no holes in that wall, the darkness could not get out. It is a fact that when we make room in the walls of our hearts for the light of the Gospel to shine in the darkness of sin will flee away. Wall up your life with worldliness and the Gospel light fails to enter and you have darkness within.

One day a discouraged man came to me with his complaints, saying that he could not see far enough ahead to have the courage to go on. I gave him this simple thought that seemed to help him. Said I: "My friend, when you start out at night with a lantern in hand, the light of that lanern does not shine far away, but as you walk, the light goes on before you, and you can walk on and on in the light. To be sure you cannot see the end from the beginning, but as you go on by faith, God's Word and His presence, will shine on and on and you will have light to the end." God supplies His grace and light as we go on with Him by faith.

We have in our library a picture that hangs on the wall. It is beautiful but it does not give out the real truth. In this picture Christ is standing at the door, holding a burning candle, while He knocks for admittance. The light that shines from the candle, illuminates the face of the Master and also drives back the darkness of the night. Often as I look at that picture I am made to wonder why the artist did not make the face of Jesus to shine. He is the real light of the world and not what he taught. Our hearts are not lighted by what Jesus taught to us, but by what He is to us as our Savior and Lord. He alone is the light of the world.

On Christmas morning a little lad who was too poor to have toys for the day, was out on the sidewalk looking at the toys through the window. Some one jostled him and he fell in front of a car and was injured. He was rushed to the hospital and then toys were brought to him. He touched the tin soldiers and then smilingly said, "There isn't any glass between." Some day the things that we want now and cannot have, will be given to us and there will be no glass between.

Two men were seated in the circus tent on July the 6th, to witness an afternoon performance. One man noted that the exit ailses in both directions were filled with runaway animals of the show. and he said to his pal, "Bill suppose that you had to get out of here in a hurry, what would you do?" Bill looked around a moment and then replied, "I would climb to the top of the bleachers and slide down that pole and crawl out under the tent." Less than ten minutes after that both men saw that the top of the tent was on fire, and they cried to men and women to climb to the bleachers stand and then slide down the pole to safety. In that great disaster at Hartford, those two men had their plans made for an emergency and they saved themselves and others. Make your plans for an emergency, when no emergency is expected.

The other night I was listening to a very prominent man making a political speech over the Radio and I started checking the times that he used the pronoun "I." In five minutes he had used it twenty-five times. It occurred to me that this man was suffering from an eye trouble. Did you know that with the most of us the worst eye trouble that we have is the "I" trouble.

I was talking with a man who had spent the day with a collection of bills. Showing signs of disgust and worry, he said to me, "Preacher, some people pay their bill when they are due, some pay them after they have been long overdue, and then there are some who never do." To which of these bill payers do you belong?

Some people think that the world is growing smaller all the time. We can hear of what takes place thousands of miles away in a few moments after they occur. The ends of the earth seem to be near us now. But the world is no smaller than it was thousand years ago. Men are becoming bigger. We should say today, "Man has grown large" and not, "The world has become small." Man is the growing thing in God's universe. It is man's expansion that has contracted the world.

One morning the keeper of the Statue of Liberty found about twelve hundred dead birds at its base. These birds had beateh their bodies to pieces against the great light at the top of the Statue. They had killed themselves against this light, but had failed in hurting, or even making an impression on the light. Just so do we find people today who are battling against the truth of God. They say, "Surely, I can destroy the truth of God and of His gospel," but they injure themselves, not God.

In measuring the size and the distance of a star, a great Astronomer discovered that even the smallest silk fiber would conceal a star in the sky for several months. Thus a silk fiber appeared to be larger than the star itself. There are times when a selfish act, a very little love of pleasure, a small act of greed, will hide out the light of God. The little boy holding a penny close to his eyes said to his mother, "Look, mother, this penny is larger than all out of doors. It does not take much of this world, when we hold it close to our heart, to hide out God and the light. Yes, little sins hinder our vision.

My grandmother did her work by the light of a tallowdip. She did the best work that she could do by the best light that she had. My mother did her work by the light of a clean lamp, and this was a better light than the tallow candle could produce. I am doing my work by the electric light and it is better than the old time lamp. Our work today should be done in the best light at our disposal. No man has the right to be doing tallowdip work in this age of illumination. With the light at our finger tips, we should do great service today.

I knew a Jeweler who tried to keep his diamonds and watches and jewelry behind bolts and bars and iron shutters. When he left at night he would turn off the lights and think his possessions secure. Later he found out that the best way to make his jewelry safe was to leave it under the full flare of the lights all night long. The best way to make secure your character is for you to live in the light. Let truth and love shine through every deed.

Yanks Clash with Japanese in Major Battle of Philippines; Act to Solve Manpower Problem

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Captured enemy film shows Adolf Hitler, surrounded by his party officials, trodding ruins of German village devastated by war.

PACIFIC:
Decisive Battle

Three years before, Gen. Douglas MacArthur had left Luzon in a small torpedo boat in the dead of night, with the Japanese breaking the last shred of U. S. resistance in the Philippines.

But he returned in a brilliant comeback, puffing hard on his corn cob pipe at the rail of an American warship, one of 800 vessels in a 70-mile-long convoy which poured thousands of troops and tons of supplies on the sandy beaches of Lingayen gulf in northeastern Luzon, 120 miles from Manila.

Coming shortly after the U. S. conquest of Leyte island to the southeast, General MacArthur's latest invasion was a bold stroke, setting the stage for the decisive battle of the Philippines, Japan's last great defensive bastion before the Asiatic mainland, a battle in which the enemy was expected to commit 200,000 troops.

Fleet Aids

Preceding the Yanks' landings, U. S. warships subjected the crescent-shaped Lingayen beach to a murderous three-day barrage, and mine sweepers ploughed in to brush away surface obstructions.

Lack of heavy enemy resistance to the landings, and the absence of any formidable beach defenses, indicated that the Japanese command resolved to reserve its forces for concentrated onslaughts inland instead of spreading them along the shores.

Heavily reduced by previous sustained U. S. army and navy air force raids, a pared Japanese aerial fleet offered desperate resistance to the spearhead of the huge American convoy steaming toward Lingayen, with preliminary reports indicating 79 enemy planes shot down by fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

MANPOWER:
Act on Shortage

Its efforts to solve the nation's critical manpower problem brought to a head by the President's appeal for a national labor draft in his 12th annual message to congress, the government moved swiftly to channel workers into essential war plants and provide additional men for the services.

F. D. R. Asks Labor Draft

Although asking for a national labor draft to " . . . assure that we have the right number of workers in the right places at the right times. . . ." the President specifically recommended action to route 4,000,000 4-Fs into war work and induct nurses into the services.

Although generally opposed to a national service act, but at the same time anxious to solve the manpower problem by less drastic means, congress considered legislation to compel 4-Fs to go into essential work or face induction into labor battalions without servicemen's benefits. With 20,000 nurses needed now and recruitment drives having failed to enlist sufficient numbers, the lawmakers also reluctantly backed the drafting of nurses.

While congressional machinery ground into action, selective service sought to keep registrants in essential work by asking local boards to induct anyone leaving a deferred position without their consent, and lowering physical standards to provide for the drafting of such individuals.

Meanwhile, selective service's order for the review of the deferments of approximately 365,000 young farmers between 18 and 25 years of age was attacked by agricultural leaders, who said that induction of substantial numbers of this group would seriously impair food production, particularly of pork, beef and dairy products.

Including authorization of 73 billion dollars for war purposes, the President asked for an 87 billion dollar budget for the 12 months ending June 30, 1946, 13 billion dollars below his request for the present fiscal year. Expecting that smaller war expenditure will result in decreased tax payments by individuals and corporations and bring revenues down to less than 41½ billion dollars, the president said the national debt will reach 292 billion dollars by 1946.

MEAT

With the government stepping up its purchases of all kinds of meat, both rationed and unrationed civilian supplies in the early part of this year will average slightly less than 2½ pounds per week compared with more than 3 pounds at the same time in 1944, the American Meat institute predicted. In addition to the government's increased purchases of meat, the institute said, the situation will be aggravated by a decreasing over-all production.

EUROPE:
Nazis Pull Back

Making use of swirling blizzards and ghostly battle-fields piled high with snowdrifts, German Field Marshall Von Rundstedt slowly pulled his recent onrushing Nazi legions from the big Belgium bulge under the unrelenting pressure of Allied armies slashing in from the north, the west and the south.

Once but 4 miles from the Meuse and 29 miles from the historic gateway to France, the German forces, originally said to number 200,000 men, gradually gave ground as the Allied armies, under Montgomery in the north and Bradley in the south, cut into their lines, severing important supply roads and threatening to entrap the enemy's armored divisions in the western portion of the bulge.

As the Allies delivered their trip-hammer blows against them the Germans, who frequently counter-attacked to relieve pressure on their lines, were looked upon to withdraw to a new defense arc around St. Vith, but four miles from the German border.

Reacting quickly to the Germans' diversionary thrust in Alsace, the U. S. Seventh army fought valiantly to nip the enemy's attempt to isolate its left from its right wing, and reinforcements from the French First army rushed to the defense of the Strasbourg region.

Eastern Front

Long dormant, the Polish front bestirred, with the Nazis reporting Russian movements on the road to German Silesia, 120 miles below Warsaw, but claiming to have set back Moscow's winter offensive plans by going onto the attack themselves in Latvia and East Prussia.

Principal action on the eastern front, however, continued to center in the Hungarian theater, where strong German armored forces struck at Russian lines northwest of Budapest, and the Reds tended to offset this heavy pressure by pushing forward just above the border in Czechoslovakia.

In bitter fighting in encircled Budapest, the Russians continued their block-by-block conquest of the once beautiful but now smouldering Hungarian capital, with tanks and self-propelled guns rumbling through the battered streets and troops firing from jumbled debris.

Murky Weather

Few observers back home realize how short the days and how long the nights are in west central Europe at this season of the year. Aachen, largest German city yet taken by American forces, and typical battle line marker, lies near the 51st degree of north latitude. Although in that zone in late December and early January about eight hours elapse between sunrise and sunset, effective daylight usually is cut sharply at both ends of the day by heavy fog.

POSTWAR AUTOS:
Buyers' Plans

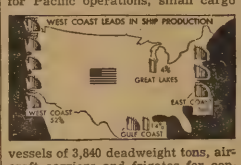
Long statisticians for the automobile industry, R. L. Polk and company, polling 50,000 representative car owners in an effort to get a slant on the postwar market, found 63 per cent of them intended to buy a new vehicle within two years after the war if there was no price increase.

Interviewing 10,000 auto dealers at the same time, Polk learned that most of them intended to greatly expand their service departments after the war to take care of demand for repairs before a complete peacetime adjustment permits new car purchases.

In conducting its poll, Polk also learned that 49 per cent of the car owners intended to buy the same make, while 40 per cent were undecided and 11 per cent planned to buy other machines.

AGGRESSORS:
Future Treatment

Postwar treatment of Germany and Japan will be complicated by the important part these nations have played in the peacetime economy of their respective regions, discussions of experts indicate.



Once called to attention by Secretary of War Stimson at the time Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau proposed the deindustrialization of the reich, Germany's industrial importance to Europe was reemphasized by Eugene P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade council, who said that the country's productive machine should be used toward the rehabilitation of her neighbors as reparations.

Pointing out that as the industrial hub of Asia Japan supplied much of the region's goods, Chinese representatives at a conference on Far Eastern affairs at Hot Springs, Va., stated that continued existence of the enemy's productive capacity might be necessary to help restore peacetime economy.

SHIPS:
U. S. Production

With emphasis on the nation's shipbuilding in the last six months of the year placed on the faster Victory cargo model and construction of special military types for the army and navy, 16,343,436 deadweight tons were produced for the 12 months ending in December.

Special types delivered included transports and cargo ships essential for Pacific operations, small cargo vessels of 3,840 deadweight tons, aircraft carriers and frigates for convoy escort.

During the year, the Maritime commission reported, the shipyards concluded the wooden vessel program, including deck and hold scows, large barges and tugs. Nearing completion is the concrete ship program, with these vessels having proven their worth as tankers, floating warehouses and refrigerator units.

STORE SALES:
At Peak

Reflecting retailers' ability to shift lines to meet wartime conditions, and people's propensity to spend with money in their pockets, department store sales in the U. S. bounded up 11 per cent in 1944 over the previous year, the Federal Reserve board reported.

Most of the increase took place in the last six months, it was said, with sales in the November-December Christmas shopping season mounting 17 per cent.

Increases were largest in the deep south, stretching from the Atlantic to Arizona, with the Atlanta district showing a 21 per cent rise and Dallas, 17 per cent.

GREECE:
Hunger Stalks

With Athens' streets cleared of murderous civil warfare, its hungry people lined up at military soup kitchens for emergency rations or walked about, dragging tattered knapsacks, in search of food.

With inflation having run rampant during the German occupation, Allied liberation has brought no relief, with eggs costing 60 cents each; beef $3 a pound; black bread $2 a pound; oranges 40 cents each; beans 80 cents a pound, and cheese $10 a pound.

Serving only the richest, restaurants were charging sky-high prices, with one U. S. correspondent dining in a cafe paying $8.70 for three fried eggs, French fried potatoes, two pieces of white bread without butter, and one cup of coffee.

French Cold

In France, Paris shivered from lack of coal caused by the disruption of transportation. Patrolmen guarding the city's picturesque public parks were doubled to prevent residents from chopping down trees for fuel.

Because subway stations and post offices recently were the only heated places, women and children and the aged crowded in, huddling in corners all day. Mothers brought along their darning while others played cards or read.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat flying. He appeals to several Generals and is finally offered an opportunity to get into the fight. He flies a bomber to India, but is made a ferry pilot and this does not suit him. He visits Gen. Chennault, gets a Kittyhawk, and soon is flying the skies over Burma, known as the "one man air force." Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group, but he still keeps on knocking down Jap planes. He goes out on his greatest mission, over Hongkong.

CHAPTER XXV

Pilots waiting for the order to go into the air. Sitting at the crude table, waiting for the chow wagon or for an alert. Listening with keen ears for the jingle of the telephone. Playing gin rummy or poker, but hearing everything that was going on. A player would be dealing the deck, and in the middle of the routine of dropping a card here, and one there, the phone would ring. The card would stop in the air, poised over the table while we all heard the Chinese interpreters pick up the magneto phone and utter the familiar "Wey—wey," as they say "hello." The card would remain there over the table, undealt throughout the telephone conversation—until the player realized what he was doing. Then he'd go hesitatingly on.

Perhaps the call was one of the hundreds that meant nothing; only the Chinese really knew, and we could only wait and find out. Then again, the receiver of the telephone might drop back into place and the interpreter would say something to another Chinese. This second one would go to the plotting-board, look at the marked co-ordinates, and quietly put a little red flag down over a certain city towards Japanese territory. Even then, with one warning only, the game could go on for a long time in confidence.

Perhaps the Squadron commander or the officer who was on the alert that day would move out of the game and start looking the map and the flags over, sizing up the situation. As the picture formed and it became apparent that this was a real attack he'd just go over and tell the card-game about it. Or maybe two or three men would begin to get helmets out. The game would silently break up, with cards and CN left where they were. Helmets and gloves would be put on. Men who were pretending to be sleeping in the bags on the floor would be awakened.

And the tension dropped off like a cloak. It wasn't the actual combat these fighter pilots feared, for we all wanted combat more than anything else; it was the damnable uncertainty—the ringing of a telephone, an ominous sound that most of the time meant nothing.

When men went out of the door to get into their ships and take off there was no handing to friends on the ground of last letters to take care of, no entrusting of rings and watches to room-mates. For fighter pilots don't think of not coming back. They are invincible, or think they are, and they have to be that way. Down in our hearts we may figure that some accident will get us some day, when we are old and gray, when our beards get in the way of the controls, or we get to where we don't see well or react fast—but we know that no enemy fighter is good enough to shoot us down. If that happens it's just an accident.

These thoughts are the "chips" that we carry on our shoulders, and they have to be there—arrogant, egotistical chips mellowed by flying technique and experience and fortified by the motto, "Attack!" Never be on the defensive. Shoot the enemy down before he can shoot you down. You are better than he is, but don't give him a chance. He may get in a lucky shot but you're invincible. Move towards any dot in the sky that remotely resembles an airplane. Move to attack, with switches on and the sight ready. If it's not a ship or if it's a friendly one you'll be ready anyway.

The worry comes before you get to take off for combat—wondering whether or not you'll do the right thing out of habit. After you're in the air it's all the fun of flying and doing the greatest job in the world. You are up there, pitying all earth-bound creatures who are not privileged to breathe this purer air on high. Your training makes you do the combat work that is ahead without thinking about the movements.

Months and years of training . . . hours of waiting on the ground . . . high-powered engines pulling you up and up to the attack—and then in a few fleeting seconds the combat is over, your ship is all that's in the sky, and you're on the way home again to base, whistling and thinking how easy it was and what a great and glorious life it really is. You're wondering if you can pick those cards up and finish the game and take your CN back from Ajax or Johnny or Mack. You might be thinking how good that sleeping bag is going to feel, or wondering whether the transports that can land on the field, now that the air raid alert is over, have brought you any mail . . . "Dog-gone, I wonder if that woman is writing me?"

Maybe they've even made some mistake back over there in the States and have sent some new planes out here, and we're going to get the best in the world, planes that go a hundred miles an hour faster and climb 4,500 feet a minute to fifty thousand feet. But there's your crew-chief now, waving you in—and he's looking at the patches you've shot from the blast tubes of your guns and knows you've fired at the enemy. Or maybe your "victory roll" warned him anyway . . . Who knows?

Day after day, through the early part of November, we actually prayed that the weather East would clear, so that we could stop our small, piddling attacks on Burma and go back to Hongkong. I knew that General Chennault and Colonel Cooper were planning a big one for the next time, for now we had the largest force of fighters we had ever seen in China. New P-40's had been arriving in small numbers, but steadily. The Group was actually being built up to strength at last.

With the first breaks in the heavy winter clouds, Bert Carleton was sent with his transport and our ground personnel to Kweilin. Aviation fuel and bombs were placed ready for instant use, and I could feel the tension in the air again. From the daily reports on the air-warning net it could be seen that the Japanese had maintained a constant aerial patrol over Hongkong and vicinity since our last attack. With the first break in the clouds we sent observation planes over with a top-cover of several fighters, but the Jap would not come up to fight the shark-mouthed planes. His instructions appear to have been: Wait for the American bombers.

On November 21, the ground crews got to Kweilin. Instead of keeping them in the hostel that first night to insure that information would not leak out to the enemy, we sent them to town, first casually remarking that we were here now for the second attack on Hongkong.

Early next morning our twelve bombers slipped into Kweilin, with Colonel (promoted since the last attack) Butch Morgan in the lead ship. The strengthened fighter force of between thirty and forty planes infiltrated for reservice—some went to Kweilin, others scattered to the surrounding emergency fields for better protection of the bombers. As soon as I landed I ran up to the cave and the General took me in and showed me the plotting-board. The little red flags indicated increased vigilance at Hongkong. Then I got my orders: "Strike Hongay." In an hour the bombers were off to bomb the coal mines and docks of that Indo-China port North of Haiphong. Morgan sank a 12,000-ton ship that was reported to have been an aircraft carrier. The fighter escort strafed ferry boats, small surface craft, and looked for Jap fighters trying to intercept. But none came.

That night the enemy sent up a flight of three bombers to each of our fields, looking for our forces. But we were so scattered that their luck was bad. Night fighters from all stations took off, but those under Maj. Harry Pike at Kweilin made perfect contact. The entire Japanese formation of three bombers was shot down over the field. Pike, Lombard, and Griffin each added an enemy ship to their scores, but Lombard was shot down in flames when the Jap gunners blew up his belly tank. Lombard had made the tactical error of pulling up over the bombers after delivering fire that shot one down. We had given him up for lost when he walked in carrying his chute—and begging for another ship.

At dawn the next day, November 23, I led the group to escort Morgan to Sanchau Island with twelve bombers. We had noted that the Japs were strengthening the air patrol over Hongkong even more. The General had smiled and said, "We're making them waste a terrible amount of gasoline."

We saw Morgan's bombs take out two of the three hangars on the island field, and we went down to strafe and watch for interceptors taking off. Some of the flight got three, but my plane was hit by the ack-ack, and when the oil pressure began immediately to fail, I started for the mainland and home. With the oil pressure slowly going from seventy to fifty and finally to nothing, I sweated out my return to Kweilin and just made it by mentally lifting the ship onto the strip between the jagged stalagmites that seemed to guard our field.

That afternoon I led sixteen fighters to escort our twelve bombers to Canton. Capt. Brick Holstrom, who had participated in the raid on Tokyo the preceding April, led the bombers. As the fighters kept the new tactical "squirrel cage" about his formation he deliberately circled to the South of Tien Ho airdrome and covered the target area perfectly with his long string of bombs. The anti-aircraft was heavy and increased as we went on North over White Cloud field. I looked back at the results at Tien Ho and felt a surge of pride at that perfect bombing from fourteen thousand feet. This was teamwork, I knew now, with bombers and fighters properly proportioned. All of us were mad because the Japs wouldn't come up. The bomber crews had reported them taking off from both fields and keeping low, but heading in all directions. The accurate bombing must have destroyed many of them on the ground, for we had made a point of continuing on South to Hongkong. I sent one ship home with each bomber. The rest of us hung back and tried to tempt the enemy Zeros to come up; but they had evidently received their orders.

Next morning Lieut. Pat Daniels got up begging the General to let him lead a dive-bombing attack on an aircraft assembly plant in Canton. His plan was good, and the mission was made ready. All of us went down to the alert shack and watched the ground crew loading the little yellow fragmentation bombs under the wings of six P-40E's. A short time later they were off, with Daniels waiting to blow up the factory, and all set with his movie camera to take pictures automatically as he dove the bombs into the target.

Three hours later only five of the six returned. Pat Daniels was missing in action. His wing man had seen his leader lose part of his wing in an explosion on the way in with the bombs. Anti-aircraft could have done it, but most of us agreed from the description that Daniels' bombs might have hit his own propeller. At the tremendous speed that a fast fighter-ship builds up in a long and nearly vertical dive, pressures are also built up from the increased speed. This torque necessitates so much compensating pressure on the rudder that one must actually stand on the rudder control. While doing this, Pat might have relaxed pressure just as he reached down to pull the bomb release; this would have allowed the speeding plane to "yaw" or skid, and the bombs could have struck the arc of the prop.

The only note of encouragement was that a chute had been seen when the fighters left the target. Lieut. Patrick Daniels was one of our best and most aggressive pilots, and we missed him immediately—and hoped for the best.

That same night, Johnny Alison led eight ships in a fighter sweep and dive-bombing attack on the docks at Hankow, over four hundred miles to the North. In the river harbor, with the sky criss-crossed by tracers from the ground, Johnny dropped his bombs on the hangars and on a large freighter. Then for ten minutes he strafed the enemy vessel and badly disabled it. Captain Hampshire dove and shot the searchlights out until he was out of ammunition. The night attack so deep into enemy territory was a daring one and did much to confuse the Japs further. Johnny's ships were rather badly shot up from the ground-fire, and he was lucky to get them all back to base safely. But it was such missions as these which built up the circumstances that would assure the success of the big attack the General was planning.

Next day, with eighteen fighters, we escorted the bombers to raid Sienning, an occupied town near Hankow. We kept the circling movement all around our B-25's and tried to give them an added feeling of security by our presence. Through heavy anti-aircraft fire, Morgan led the attack in and didn't waste a bomb. We left the warehouses in flames, and there was much less ack-ack coming up towards us than when we first approached.

Arriving back at our advanced base, we refueled and bombed up again. Then we made the second raid of the day towards Hankow, over the town of Yoyang. Once again Morgan blasted the target, with black bursts of anti-aircraft fire bouncing around the formation. But there was no interception, and now we were feeling blue. We couldn't destroy the Jap Air Force if they were going to try to save their airplanes.

We spent the next day, Thanksgiving, working on the airplanes and resting. We had flown seven missions in four days, and both men and machines were tired and in need of repair. We had a special dinner that night, but remained extra vigilant against a surprise by the Jap.

On that Thanksgiving evening, as we were grouped around the General, he brought out a bottle of Scotch some one had given him.

"MEET Me in St. Louis," the delightful new Judy Garland-Margaret O'Brien picture, has special interest for a lot of New Yorkers and Hollywoodites who've known Sally Benson, author of the stories on which the picture is based. Her late sister, Agnes Smith, wrote brilliantly about the movies, but Agnes and sister Sally were really at their best when telling tales about their childhood. The picture is just those stories come alive, which may be the reason that Judy Garland could give such a superb performance—the picture isn't just something cooked up by a studio's scenario department; it's a slice of real life.

Grocer - Consumer Anti - Inflation CAMPAIGN

WE FOOD MERCHANTS --- Have pledged ourselves to cooperate with our Government to comply with the regulations of Price Control. We have given every effort possible in doing so, but have had many problems confronting us that have made it hard to do the job as we feel sometimes as it should be done; and we feel that it has been largely due to the misunderstanding between us Food Merchants and the consumers. And we are proud to be a part of this Campaign, feeling it will be a great way for us to better understand our and your duties to perform in holding the great pressure in check. Such pressure, if not held, would cause prices to become out of control and erase all good that has been done.

We wish to take this opportunity to thank our Patrons in cooperating with us in carrying on this Price Control Program; and do feel that all sacrifices we show in this great work, the reward we so anxiously await, will be ours.

Yours sincerely,
THE FOOD MERCHANTS OF CHILTON COUNTY.

WE CONSUMERS --- Are being asked by the Retail Merchants and the War Price and Ration Board of Chilton County to promise to fulfill our duties as loyal American Citizens during this Campaign, and show how helpful we can be and how effective our cooperation can be in doing the things expected of us in making this Price Control successful. We realize that the Food Merchants are under such regulations that it is hard for them to meet their obligations to our Government without cooperation on our part.

In doing so, the sooner the task of defeating the enemy can be accomplished, and the sooner our loved ones can be back home to us.

SUGGESTIONS TO THE CONSUMERS

Make out your Grocery List before going to make purchase.

Check Point Chart in your home (if not at home, use Chart posted in each store), placing by each item the number of points you are to pay. Then check to see if you have your Ration Book with you and that if you have the proper amount of points to cover such purchase.

Please Do Not Ask Your Merchant To Charge Your Points Because

1st. It is a violation of the law.

2nd. It will embarrass him, because he hates to refuse you.

3rd. It causes him not to be able to replenish his stock, because every point he collects from you, he must in return, give to his wholesaler to restock his store.

SUGAR

1. Sugar stamp 34 is still good.
2. Sugar stamps 30, 31, 32, and 33 have been canceled.
3. All outstanding home canning coupons and home canning Sugar Stamp 40 in War Book 4 have been cancelled.
4. Another sugar stamp will become good February 1, for five pounds—it will have to last for three months.
5. We faced 1945 with 14 months' sugar stamps and 12 months' supply of sugar.

HOW WILL EXPANDED RATIONING HELP CONSUMERS?

It will make war scarce items available in equal shares for rich and poor—a fair share, even though a smaller share. The move is for the protection of the people on the home front.

RATION ALLOWS Equal Shares To All

PROCESSED FOODS

1. Canned peas, corn, wax and green beans, asparagus and spinach have been added to the ration list.
2. Blue stamps X5, Y5, Z5, A2, B2, C2, D2, E2, & G2, are worth 10 points each.
3. Blue stamps A8 through Z8, and A5 through W5, in War Book 4 no longer valid.
4. Blue points on most canned fruits, tomato catsup, and chili sauce wll be reduced.
5. We faced 1945 with 14.8 months' processed food stamps and 12 months' supply of processed food.

WHAT OTHER ITEMS WILL BE ADDED TO THE RATIONING LIST?

The additon of other commodities to the rationing list is not contemplated at this time.

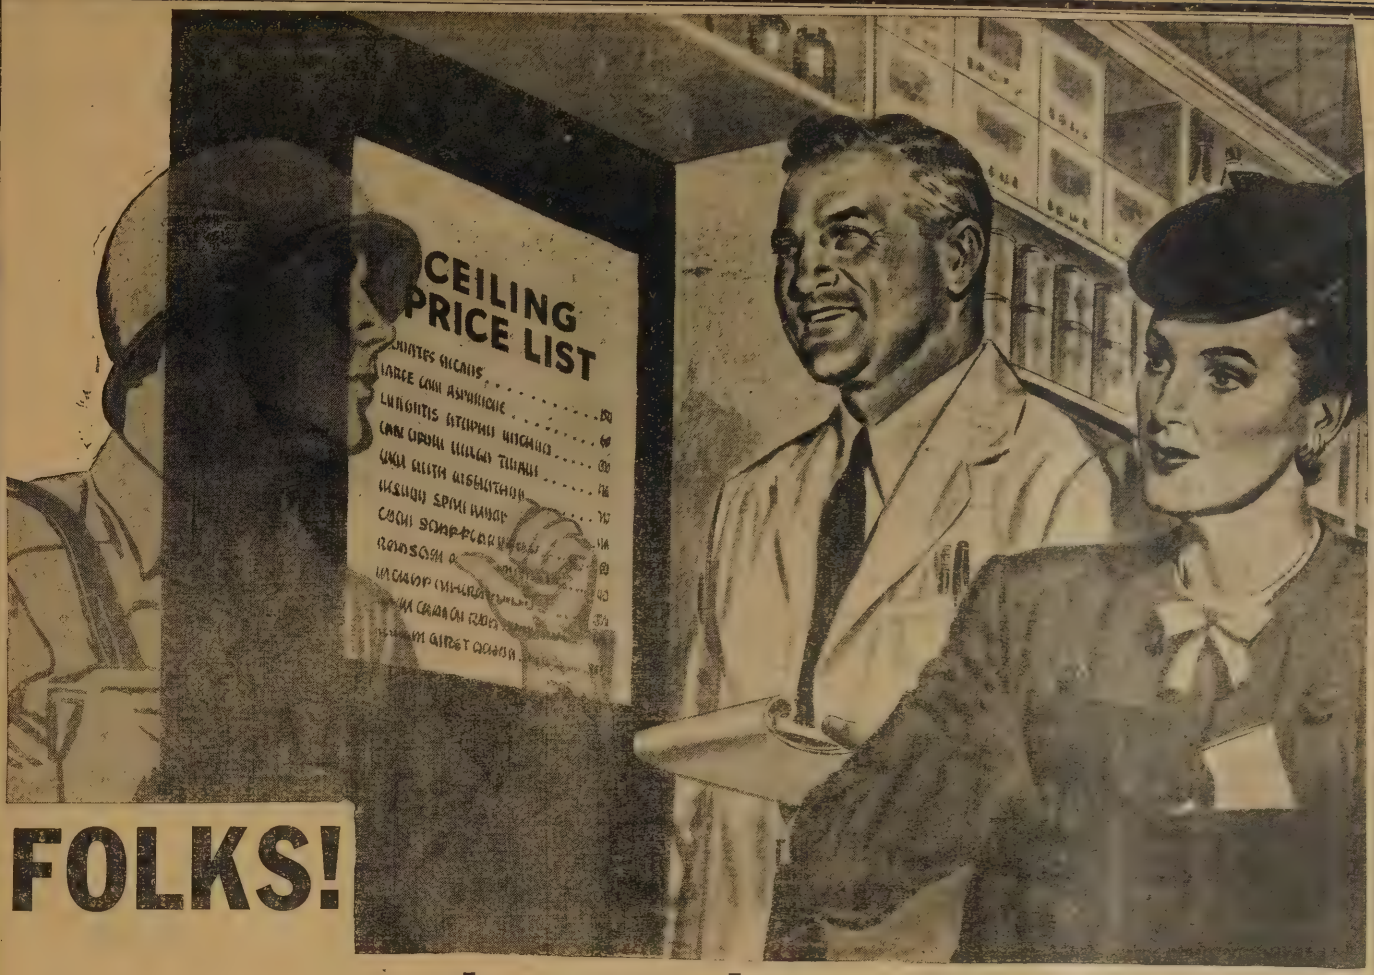
SINCE MORE FOOD IS BEING RATIONED, WHY HAVEN'T OUR POINTS BEEN INCREASED MORE?

No more meats, fats, sugar or canned vegetables are produced or made available by giving consumers more points. If more points were made valid, all point values would have to be increased—it would take the extra points to purchase the same amount of food purchsed with the smaller number of points.

MEATS AND BUTTER

1. Butter was raised to 24 points a pound.
2. Red stamps Q5, R5, S5, T5, U5, V5, W5, X5, are worth 10 points each.
3. Red tokens are still good.
4. We faced 1945 with 14½ months' red stamps and 12 months' supply of meat.
5. 85 per cent of civilian meat supply will require red points compared with 37 per cent before expanded rationing.

WHY WERE OLDER UNUSED STAMPS CANCELLED?



Because civilian supplies of the foods added to the rationing list are at the lowest point since the war began. Cancellation of old stamps gives each consumer a fair share of 1945 supplies.

Those With Money Bid for Scarce Goods

This month marks the Third Anniversary of the establishment of War Price and Rationing Boards. For three years we have done our best to serve you and the people of Chilton county—to administer rationing fairly and to hold prices down.

The record of price control is one in which we can all take pride. Despite the greatest inflationary pressure we have ever known, prices have increased only 9.9 per cent since retail price control was established. This is a record unique in all our wartime history. During the comparable period of the last war, prices increased 50 per cent. We take this occasion of our Third Anniversary to thank you for the co-operation you have given us in making this record possible—and we ask your continued help as long as the need for price control and rationing exists.

that Ceiling Price List helps keep food costs down

"I'VE BEEN KIND OF BUSY LATELY so I've got to depend on you to keep prices down now—and afterwards. My wife and kids can get along on my allotment, if prices just don't start jumping all of a sudden.

"I understand that's what happened in 1919. They tell me almost half of the rise in prices during the last war was AFTER THE ARMISTICE. That's bad for everyone, especially for guys like me on fixed incomes.

"I don't want to face inflation when I get home. So won't you folks keep up your good work and keep on making that ceiling price plan work?"

Suppers Possible With Little Meat
(See Recipes Below)

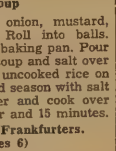
Easy on Meat

Well, what are we going to do about the meat situation? Drastic regulations now in effect will make every homemaker think twice before she buys a cut of meat.

Meat supplies are low, point values high, and still we like meat dishes at least once a day. With clever and effective use of meat, it is possible to use little meat and to simulate meat flavor. Beef cuts are fairly high in point value, but we can use liver. We'll make use of pork, veal, lamb and chicken, too, for they help us to take it easy on meat points.

Proteins are an important body-building food, and meats should not be cut out of the diet. Use these recipes to help you on those low-point weeks:

Spanish Rice With Meat Balls.
(Serves 6)



¾ pound ground beef
¼ pound ground pork
1 chopped onion
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
⅓ cup water
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup rice
2 cups tomatoes
1 can tomato soup

Combine meat, onion, mustard, salt and water. Roll into balls. Place in skillet or baking pan. Pour tomatoes, tomato soup and salt over top. Sprinkle dry uncooked rice on top of tomatoes and season with salt and pepper. Cover and cook over low heat for 1 hour and 15 minutes.

Macaroni and Frankfurters.
(Serves 6)

1 (8 ounce) package macaroni
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
2 tablespoons flour
2 eggs, beaten
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup grated American cheese
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
½ pound frankfurters

Place macaroni in saucepot and add 3 quarts boiling water and 1 teaspoon salt. Boil rapidly about 15 minutes, or until macaroni is tender. Do not cover utensil while boiling. Drain in a colander and let cold water run over macaroni. Melt butter or substitute in pan, then add flour and blend well. Add milk and cook until thick. Add eggs, seasoning and cheese. Pour into an oiled casserole and add sliced frankfurters. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

Lynn Says

Variety from roasts: When you do splurge on meat and buy a roast, make sure you use every scrap of meat before you write finis to the roast.

After it is served the first time, have it cold, sliced. This is especially good when served with salads and relishes.

Ground pieces of roast may be served in recipes which call for ground meat. The made-over taste can be disguised by using tomatoes, catsup, chili sauce and other condiments.

When the meat is almost used, it can be used to give meaty flavor to rice, noodles, spaghetti or vegetable casserole.

If the bone of the roast has meat left on it, it can be made into delicious soups with plenty of vegetables. If the meat flavor is a bit thin, add one of the meat concentrates to enrich it.

When you tire of meat reheated and served as leftover, try cutting it into bits and using for flavor to salad. Fish and fowl may be used like this, too. They can also be combined and used as sandwich fillings.

Lynn Chambe s' Point-Saving Menu

*Braised Pork Liver and Vegetables
Raisin Bread Jam
Grated Carrot-Apple Salad
Caramel Custard
Beverage *Recipe given.

Pork liver is the most nutritious of all livers and the least expensive, too. It has a slightly stronger flavor than beef or veal liver but this can be disguised if it is used with vegetables and seasonings:

Braised Pork Liver and Vegetables.
(Serves 6)

1 pound pork liver, cut in ½-inch slices
2 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
4 tablespoons fat
2 carrots, diced
4 potatoes, sliced
1 onion, diced
1 cup boiling water
1 cup tomato juice

Dip liver in seasoned flour. Brown in hot fat. Add vegetables and liquid. Cover and simmer 1½ hours until tender.

As point values remain rigid, we will turn more and more to chicken and other fowl. This is a good way to fix up the leftover chicken from Sunday's roast. The chicken may be peeled from the bones and diced.

Chicken Rice Casserole.
(Serves 6)

1 cup rice, steamed
2 cups cooked chicken
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon celery salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon chopped onions
2 tablespoons cracker crumbs
1 egg
1 cup hot water or stock

Steam rice. Chop chicken very fine, then add seasonings. Fold in beaten egg, crumbs, stock or hot water enough to moisten. Line bottom or sides of greased mold with cooked rice, one inch thick, pack in the chicken mixture, cover closely with rice, and then place greased paper over top. Steam 45 minutes. Turn out on hot platter, garnish with parsley and serve with tomato sauce or cream of mushroom soup.

There's another possibility, and an important one, which we still have not considered to take the place of meat. Naturally, this is fish. It will meet the protein standards which we must have to maintain health, and will add variety to the menu:

Fish a la Tartare.
(Serves 6)

1½ pounds pike or trout
2 hard-cooked eggs
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon salad oil
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon catsup
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup strained fish liquid
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon each pickles and onion, chopped

Boil and bone the fish, leaving it whole or cut in portions, as desired. Rub the yolks smooth with mustard and oil, then add remaining ingredients, including whites of eggs which have been chopped fine. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Boiling Fish.

Clean fish and let stand in salt for several hours. Let 1 quart water come to a boil with 2 tablespoons vinegar, ¾ teaspoon black pepper, and 1 onion. Add the fish slowly and let simmer gently until the flesh is tender.

STANDARDS OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:3-10, 43-48.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 5:10.

A kingdom must have laws, and here we have the laws for Christ's kingdom—the kingdom of heaven—which He shall one day establish on this earth. In the Church we have the joy of living as loyal subjects of Christ, and hence these standards are for our counsel and guidance.

The verses of this greatest of all discourses are addressed to those who have actually taken Christ as King of their lives. These beatitudes are not a substitute for the gospel. They are not laws that the unbeliever can keep and thus be saved, for this would be utterly impossible. Only he who knows and has called upon the power and grace of God in Christ can qualify to walk as a citizen of Christ's kingdom.

We note two things in this wonderful and instructive passage from God's Word:

I. The Character of the Follower of Christ (vv. 3-10).

The eight characteristics of the Christian here presented are worthy of extended individual attention, but we can offer only brief suggestions. "Blessed are the poor in spirit" speaks of humility as a commendable quality. How contradictory the present-day philosophy, which calls for self-assertion and self-reliance. But Jesus was not mistaken. The way into the kingdom of heaven is not that of assertive self-sufficiency.

"Blessed are they that mourn." The world does not believe that statement. It shuns the house of mourning. It tries without avail to philosophize away the fact of sorrow. The Christian, on the other hand, feels with his fellow man and thus receives a blessing. One can really learn from sorrow.

I walked a mile with Pleasure;
She chattered all the way,
But left me none the wiser
For all she had to say.

I walked a mile with Sorrow,
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her
When Sorrow walked with me.

"Blessed are the meek." Poverty of spirit comes when a man rightly sees himself, and has a sympathetic touch with sorrow. Then he "inherits the earth," because he truly comes to enjoy it as a place of service and Christian growth, and not because he has a deed to a single foot of its soil.

"It is the hunger and thirst for righteousness (v. 6), and not the possession of it, that is blessed" (Plummer). Self-satisfied people know nothing of the glory of having their hunger and thirst satisfied by God.

We have here also the Christian's spirit of mercy which invites divine mercy; a purity of heart, cleanness of mind, and sincerity of purpose, which enable a man really to see God even in this impure world; that Christlike spirit which makes him a peacemaker in a fighting world—yes, that spirit which makes him like the Master in sweetly bearing unjustified persecution. These indeed are the marks of the man who follows Christ as King.

II. The Conduct of the Follower of Christ (vv. 43-48).

There can possibly be no more severe test of a man's Christian character than the manner in which he treats his enemies. Many who pass the other tests meet failure (at least in part) at this point.

It is no easy thing to love your enemies, but it is the standard of Christ, and He will enable us to live up to it. Now is a good time to put it into practice, not only personally, but nationally.

There can be no doubt that love for the brethren will be a more intimate and satisfying experience because they return our affection (v. 46). Anyone can do that and enjoy it. Enemies often return hatred for our love—they persecute us (v. 44). But we are still to love them.

That love must move us to treat them kindly and to pray for them. Someone says, "It can't be done." Yes, it can by the grace of God in Christ, and it is being done.

We need to exercise care lest we fall into the easy habit of speaking with derision or scorn of the ungodly — that wicked, dissipated neighbor who hangs around taverns and other questionable places. Let us never condone their sin—that we should hate—but may God help us to love them and lead them to Christ.

This lesson is indicated as being a temperance lesson. The application can only be made indirectly, but it may have value. The use of alcohol is so destructive of everything that is good, that it is quite obvious it is not in accord with these standards of the kingdom of heaven. It is time some church people decided whether they want to belong to the world or belong to Christ. If the latter is their purpose, we believe the only consistent position to take is that of abstinence from alcoholic liquors.

The Red Man and the White House

John Collier, commissioner of Indian affairs, says there is no reason why an Indian should not be President of the United States. In years of knocking around with the Red man, he says, he has found him notable for probity, complete patriotism, extreme loyalty and humanitarianism.

But we can't help doubting that any good Indian with a proper respect for his backgrounds and traditions would take it. We often wonder what an Indian, driven out of his native land as a savage, thinks of the setup with modern civilization in control.

We took the matter of the presidency up with Chief Loping Gazelle, an old friend, today with the following results:

Q.—John Collier says the Presidency of the United States is open to an Indian.

A.—Chief Loping Gazelle very puzzled. John Collier never scare Red man this way before.

Q.—You don't understand. The presidency is the highest gift within the hands of the American people.

A.—Indian take smaller gift.

Q.—White men are very happy to be president.

A.—White men no look it.

Q.—Think of what it means: you can live in Washington!

A.—Indian do nothing to deserve such hard punishment.

Q.—As president you can be looked up to as the man to whom the people bring all their troubles.

A.—Ugh.

Q.—As president you would have the opportunity to give the people good government.

A.—White man have too much government. Indian happier behaving self of his own accord.

Q.—You don't seem to appreciate the offer. Yours would be the great privilege of bringing greater comforts to all the people.

A.—White man got heap funny ideas what he needs to be comfortable. Red man comfortable with tepee, pipe, few feathers, one pony and chance to enjoy nature. White man have to have auto, gas, first mortgages and time payments.

Q.—As president an Indian would be among those world leaders charged with preserving civilization.

A.—Civilization today not look so hot to Indian.

Q.—Why not?

A.—Savagery of early Redskins on much higher level.

Q.—Don't you think it would be a good thing if an Indian got a right to be president?

A.—Only if Indian refuse.

Q.—It would mean $75,000 a year, free lodgings, eminence and white influence.

A.—Indian think it no bargain.

Q.—But try to realize the honor of being the first Red man to be president.

A.—Indian no make good president.

Q.—Why not?

A.—Squaw too busy to write for newspapers.

Q.—It is not necessary for squaw to write for newspapers and make speeches.

A.—Indian read newspapers. He know better than that.

General MacArthur was equally passive. "I will spot the general two deep inhalations and make him cry for help. We can lick him at anything, including any noises he cares to make," he declared.

"He is very deceptive," we warned MacArthur. "He can snore while awake."

"That makes him an ideal foe," was the reply.

"He sometimes does his deepest planning between grunts," we pointed out.

"We will keep him grunting," smiled MacArthur. "Is he a straight-front snorer or a side-wheeler? Anyhow we will look for an all-around snorer. Do you know if he snores with his mouth open?"

"Our scouts so report," we said.

"That kind are a dime a dozen, even when made in Japan," said MacArthur. "It is the man who snores with his mouth closed who is really dangerous."

MacArthur went on to say that, anyhow, America had been experimenting with a new snore of greater range and velocity, a snore that would go anywhere.

"We fear no enemy snorers," he added. "Kaiser Bill was a better than fair hostile snorer and look at his finish! Hindenburg was tops."

General Eisenhower admitted one fear from the snore technique. "If Hitler, Goering, Himmler and Goebbels should all snore at once, that would be a disturbance!" he admitted.

Hitler Explains His Silence

I cannot talk about the war—
There's nothing I can say;
I have so many things to do
I cannot get away;
To speak is quite impossible—
No message can I bring,
For I've discovered suddenly
The war's a pressing thing.

The mike and I were lovers once
But we are parted now;
Affairs that keep me silent, ach!
Are pressing on my brow;
My viewpoint's undergone a change
And now at words I balk;
At last I think it nice to let
The other fellow talk,

I never thought the day would come
When far off I would stew
And let another make my speech. . .
(And neither, friends, did you!)
I never dreamed there'd come a time—
(So mark this day with chalk!)—
When Germany would hear these words:
"Der Fuehrer cannot talk!"

I realize you're mystified
When Himmler reads my stuff;
It must seem strange to hear my speech
Read from another's cuff;
But still I greet you from afar
Where I must work and sweat
Too busy to leap to the mike
In wartime . . . WANNA BET?

Fruit stains can be removed from hands by washing them in clear water, drying slightly, and while moist striking a sulphur match and holding hands around the flame. Stains disappear immediately.

A loss of more than 2,000,000 pounds of meat food products a year from attacks by liver flukes on cattle and calves is now preventable by a drug treatment of hexachlorethane mixed with a small quantity of bentonite, a finely powdered clay.

Production of 13 out of 17 fairly important clover, grass, and leading winter cover crop seeds was larger in 1944 than usual. This should mean a larger supply for planting this year.

Word has gone out about the new automatic device for home use against flies, mosquitoes and other household pests, invented by U. S. Department scientists. After the war, it is expected that civilians will be able to buy and use this—the can that holds liquified gas and puts out an odorless and non-irritable fog of insecticide called an "aerosol."

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1945 — NUMBER 3

FROM GENERAL'S DAUGHTER TO GI JOE'S KID

INFANTILE PARALYSIS SPARES NO ONE

The eighteen-year-old daughter of a general overseas with the American invasion forces fights infantile paralysis in North Carolina. Her nurse is her mother, who volunteered for the duration of the epidemic emergency at the Hickory Emergency Infantile Paralysis Hospital, when the daughter was stricken.

In an adjoining cot is the young wife of an American Army lieutenant fighting overseas,-another of the nearly four hundred patients cared for at the emergency hospital by The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

. . . And here's the son of a GI Joe. Little Dwight, who proved as good a soldier as any of 'em, stands up in his crib to show that he's won his fight with the Crippler.

JOIN THE MARCH of DIMES

JANUARY 14-31

Last summer America experienced the second worst epidemic of infantile paralysis in its history.

The disease attacked weak and strong alike, invading the richest and poorest homes in the nation.

Your dimes and dollars, supporting The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, made it possible to render expert care and treatment to all polio victims, regardless of, age, race, creed or color.

Many of these thousands of new victims will need care for months, years, some perhaps for a lifetime.

Next summer America must be prepared to meet whatever epidemic emergencies may arise.

Support the Fund-Raising Appeal in your locality and send your dimes and dollars to President Roosevelt at The White House.

Old Dobbins Headed For Last Round-Up

Auburn, Ala. — Old Dobbin and his half-sister Maud are walking right down the long road of years toward the setting sun, and there's nothing in sight to head 'em off.

At least that's the way it looks from a report from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The Department economists see fewer horses and mules this year than last, fewer next year than this, and fewer still each year for several more years.

In the past thirty years, the number of horses on farms in this Country has gone down from 21 million head to a little over 9 million. And in a little less than twenty years, the number of mules has gone down from about 6 million to a little over 3½ million. The number of colts saved this year won't offset the old horses and mules that have joined their fossil ancestors in greener pastures.

Auburn, Ala. — Most successful gardeners are those who get started early, reports W. A. Ruffin, API extension gardener, in suggesting several things to do in gardens now.

First, the garden should get a good cleaning by cutting all old stalks and vines and removing bean stakes.

Next step is to broadcast 20 tons of manure per acre or about 200 lbs. on a 100-foot row. Lime should be used on acid soils at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre or 10 pounds per row.

After the manure and limes have been applied and the ground is dry enough to work, flat-break or spade the soil to a depth of 6 to 8 inches and fix several rows for planting. In preparing the rows, make furrows about four inches deep and put 10 pounds of 4-10-7 fertilizer for each 100 feet of row. On sandy soil it is wise to use two tablespoonsful of borax per row.

Cover the fertilizer by making one round with a small turning plow. It is better to wait a week to ten days before planting, gut at this time of year the rows can be planted as soon as they have been prepared.

In the extreme southern part of the state Irish potatoes should be planted about the 15th of January. Other crops that can be planted at this same time over the South half of the state include cabbage, carrots, endive, kale, lettuce, mustard, onions, English peas (dwarf varieties), spinach, and a mixture of turnips. Extremely low temperatures may kill these crops, but they will succeed more often than they will fail.

UNITED CONGRAGATIONAL CHURCH OF THORSBY

As a feature in the Sunday evening worship service, certain institutions and enterprises are being analyzed from the christian view point. Last Sunday individuals in the congregation expressed their views on the question "Is the church christian?" This next Sunday evening the question will be: "How far do traders in foreign mission lands exemplify the Christian way of life?"

Church School, 9:45: "The Leadership of Jesus" will be the sermon subject in the Worship Service at 11 a.m.

Prayer Meeting Wednesday, 7:30 p. m. in the Music Cottage. Following worship there will be a meeting of the church cabinet.

PRUNING AND SPRAYING ARE WINTER-TIME JOBS

Auburn, Ala. — The most important winter jobs in the home orchard are pruning and then spraying fruit trees. Both jobs should be done as soon as possible, provided the weather is not too cold. Neither should be done when the trees are frozen.

All kinds of scale insects can be controlled by spraying, when fruit trees are dormant, with an oil emulsion. The prepared oil spray should be diluted with water according to directions on the container.

This high school basket ball team ran into some stiff opposition last week with Marion Institute and Selma High School. The game at Marion was lost by one point, the final score being 34 to 33..

At Selma last Friday night our boys lost by 12 points, but came back feeling that when Selma comes here in February they will be able to give a better account of themselves.

Saturday night of this week Jan. 20, Marion Institute comes here for two games. The first game will be at 7:00 and the "A" team will play at 8:00. Please notice these games are on Saturday night instead of Friday.

The schedule for home games for the remainder of the season is as follows:

January 25, Hurt School of Montgomery.
January 26, Verbena.
January 29, Marbury.
February 2, Montevallo.
February 6, Selma.
February 13, Isabella.
February 20, Rockford.
February 27, Holtville.

MOUNTAIN SPRINGS CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The regular worship service will be held on Sunday afternoon, January 21st, at 2:30 o'clock. Several items of business will be considered. Members and visitors are invited.

Where they are and How they are

LUCKY SOLDIER

A card this week from Pvt. James H. Minor indicates that he has been very lucky in being transferred from camp to camp at the right time and to the right place, as far as weather is concerned, in fact, he thinks that he is migrating with the seasons—like the birds do. He spent last winter in Miami, went north to Wisconsin for the summer and now he is back in Miami for the winter. Sounds more like a tourist than a G. I. Joe, doesn't it?

Sgt. Vernon Lenoir, 32, Jemison, Ala., is a member of a 15th AAF group recently cited by the War Department for outstanding performance of duty during the bombing of the Florisdorf oil refineries and railyards at Vienna, Austria. Included in the citation was all members of the ground echelon.

Overseas since last March, he has been authorized the Good Conduct Medal and the European African Middle East Theatre Ribbon as well as the Distinguished Unit Badge. His wife, Mrs. Martha Lenoir resides in Jemison.

Marine Captain David Reese Griffin, son of Mrs. J. D. Griffin, of this city, has been assigned to duty at Camp Lejeune, N. C., with the Headquarters Company of the Headquarters Battalion.

Capt. Griffin has completed 29 mo., of oversea duty with the 1st Marine Division and participated in the Guadalcanal, Cape Gloucester and Peleliu Campaigns.

PROMOTED TO STAFF SGT.

Wodrow W. Atkinson, son of Mr and Mrs R. F. Atkinson, Route 3, has been promoted from Sgt. to Staff Sgt. it was announced by his commanding officer at an Air Transport Command Base in India. Sgt. Atkinson joined the Army in October of 1942, going to the India-Burma Theatre of War in August of 1944. His wife also resides at their home on Route 3 Clanton.

PROMOTED TO CORPORAL

Pfc. Joseph O. Cobb, whose home is in Jemison, Alabama, has been promoted to the grade of Corp., at Camp Wheeler, Ga., where he is stationed with the U. S. Army.

Among the U. S. Army casualties released by the War Department for publication this week were the following boys from Chilton County.

Jefferson Davis Cleckler, Storekeeper 2-C U. S. Naval Reserve, son of Mr and Mrs Jefferson Davis Cleckler, Thorsby, Ala., has been wounded in action against the enemy.

WOUNDED IN ACTION IN EUROPEAN AREA

Pvt. Clarence R. Johnson, husband of Mrs Hazel L. Johnson, of Route 2, Mt. Creek.

KILLED IN ACTION IN EUROPEAN AREA

Pfc. Grady L. Easterling, husband of Mrs. Myrtice M. Easterling of Rt. 1, Clanton.

Pfc. Reuben P. Mims, son of Mrs. Docie W. Mims of Route 2, Clanton,

KILLED IN ACTION

F. C. Cost, Mo. M. 3-C has been reported killed in action against the enemy in the Philipines. Reports from the War Department in December was that he was missing in action.

His parents, Mr and Mrs John Cost received word Jan. 11, that he was killed. Cost, who had been in service 14 months was serving on the LSM 20.

S-Sgt. Paul H. Smith, U. S. Marine Air Corps, son of Mrs R. L. Scott of Birmingham, has returned from service overseas and is spending some time in Birmingham with his mother.

Paul is well known in Clanton and has visited friends here. He was the Sunday guest of Mrs. J. M. Curlee.

Ensign Julious P. Martin, U. S. N. of Clanton has returned from a tour of duty in the Pacific where he served as a co-pilot in the Navy's "Bulldog Squadron", a Liberator search-plane unit.

Once his plane was under fire from four Jap fighters, it damaged one and then escaped and returned safely even though it had been battered by 24 machine gun hits.

Ensign Martin, who is 27 years old, is the son of Mr and Mrs A. V. Martin. He previously saw convoy duty in the Atlantic.

Oscar Latham, WT 2-C, formerly of Maplesville, who has been in the South Pacific for some time is now spending a 30 day leave in Maplesville with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Latham. Latham will leave Feb. 9th, for Philadelphia Pa., where he will await further assignment.

A card received January 12 from S-Sgt. W. B. Crow, who is in a German Prison Camp, reports that he was fine and getting plenty of rest with plenty of good eats.

Our best wishes go to S-Sgt. Crow that he will continue to receive the care that he now writes about

Pvt. Marcus Polk, Jr., from Camp Lee, Va., is spending a ten-day furlough here with his family and friends.

S-Sgt. Jack King, formerly of Clanton, whose parents now reside at Sylacauga, left Tuesday for Miami, Fla., where he will be reassigned after spending a 30-day furlough with his parents and friends.

WON BOMBARDIER WINGS

EARL V. BUXTON

Among the young "hell from heaven" men who won their silver wings recently at the Big Spring Bombardier School, Big Spring, Texas, was Earl V. Buxton, of Maplesville, Ala., who graduated with Class 44-48B and received his appointment as a flying officer in the Army Air Forces.

Flight Officer Buxton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Buxton of Route Two, Maplesville. He graduated from Isabella High School in the class of 1942.

Visiting their parents recently were Flight Officer Buxton and his brother, Kenneth, who is serving on the USS Wyoming with the U. S. Navy.

Pvt. Albert Kendrick, who formerly lived in Clanton, has recently arrived at Welch Convalescent Hospital, the Army's new reconditioning center in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Pvt. Kendrick, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Kendrick, RFD 1, served 10 months in England and France before his return to the States and his assignment at the Convalescent Hospital. He has been awarded the Purple Heart for injuries received in combat.

HIGHLAND

Sunday was preaching day. We had an excellent crowd for both Sunday School and preaching. A lot of the old members were back and we urge them to keep coming.

Bro. Hand delivered a most enjoyable sermon on "Repentance."

We had as visitors Mr and Mrs L. J. Cowart, Mrs Burnie Johnson, Edward Chancelor and Reedie Culpepper. All of Liberty Hill Community.

We are glad to have Cpl. Herschel Hamilton back home on furlough. He has served three and a half years overseas. At the present he and his father are visiting his brother, Lecil at Camp Hood, Texas.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors, Dr. and Mrs. Eiland, Mr. and Mrs. White, the undertaker, and the Sandlin duet, for their courtesy and kindness shown during the illness and death of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Susie Gray. Who died Wednesday morning at 10:15 o'clock, Jan. 10, 1945.

We do especially thank the friends and neighbors for the beautiful floral offerings. Also Rev. J. A. Raines, Rev. P. P. Bonnett and Rev. B. F. Dykes. May God richly bless each of you is our prayer. The Children.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

.By BEN

Steve Hughes the painter, painted or redecorated, the Bus Station recently. Steve has a large sign in the rear of the building proclaiming to the world that he is the guy "who done it". It's all very nice. We can only say nice things about the way Steve paints or redecorates. But, this we will have to ask—Who the h--- painted that sign saying "he done it."

Which brings to mind that the New Bus Station has opened in Thorsby. "The Rebel" the name by which it will be known is complete and up-to-date in every way and a credit to Thorsby. Which brings to mind, again —The Landcasters and Williams have reopened the local Bus Station after a couple of weeks redecorating and redoing and it is really attractive. You ought to make it a visit and dine with them now and then. We bet they wont mind. And we bet Millard and "Mitch" wont mind this free advertising either.

You can watch the News for further announcements but starting the middle of February we will carry each week an eight page colored comic section. Dagwood & Blondie, Popeye, Henry, Little Annie Rooney, The Katzenjammer Kids, Mickey Mouse, Jiggs and Maggie, Panchito, and Flash Gordon. These are the same comics that you find each week in your large daily papers and it is fortunate the Chilton County News was able to secure publishing rights on these popular comics. Watch for, and follow your favorite comic each week in Chilton County News.

He: Do you shrink from kissing?
She: No; if I did I'd be nothing but skin and bones.

Mrs.: How do you like my new gown? I got it for a ridiculous price.
Mr.: You mean you got it for an absurd figure.

SHILOUGH NEWS—

Services were very well attended here Sunday. Rev. Charles Todd brought a wonderful message at the noon hour.

Since some of our boys are leaving for the army Monday, we are having a BYPU social at Mrs. J. E. Kendrick Thursday night January, 18th.

VERMONT —SCHOOL

The attendance at Vermont School is good. The Junior High School got the Banner last week for the highest attendance.

Vermont boys and girls played Thomas Junior in basketball Friday, January 12, Vermont boys won 22-8. The Vermont girls lost 14-20. The sportsmanship was good between the schools.

Now is the time to begin fighting flies. Spray, swat, and poison those that lived through the winter.

We'll Be Cranky About This Again During 1945

THERE were some interruptions to electric light and power service in 1944. As nearly as we can determine, every interruption was caused by conditions beyond our control. Among the causes were trees being chopped down across the lines, storms, fires and power line poles being snapped off by automobiles colliding with them.

In every case of an interruption our crews got on the job promptly and, even though short handed, restored service within reasonable periods of time.

They took pride in that. We in Alabama Power Company are "cranky" about good service and any interruption in that service is as annoying to us as it is to you. So, during 1945, continuity of service is something about which we will be cranky.

We intend to do our best to keep it good in spite of the difficulties which we may encounter due to war and other conditions. The price, of course, will continue to be low.

Listen to Nelson Eddy on "the Electric Hour" program every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 on Columbia Network Stations.

1945 KUDZU PAYMENTS WILL BE $6 PER ACRE

Auburn, Ala. — Under the 1945 AAA program, Alabama farmers will be paid for establishing a satisfactory cover of kudzu.

Specifications for qualifying for this payment read:

"A satisfactory cover will be deemed to have been established when the crowns or seedlings show strong healthy growth and the number surviving can be expected to uniformly cover the area within a reasonable length of time."

The following recommendations should be observed in planting crowns or seedlings:

Set sound healthy crowns or seedlings 2½ feet apart in center of well prepared beds 10 feet wide and not more than 25 feet apart. This spacing requires approximately 500 plants per acre. Planting should begin about February 1 in the southern part of the State and February 15 in the northern part of the State and be completed before active growth begins. Control weeds and grass.

On steep slopes, kudzu should be planted 3½ feet apart on maintained terrace ridges.

Where kudzu is planted along gullies, plants should be set 3½ feet apart on well-prepared firm soil about 6 feet from the bank.

In determining the acreage of kudzu where it is planted only on terrace ridges or in rows along gullies each row will be considered to occupy a strip 25 feet wide.

In all cases, apply in the rows either 200 pounds of superphosphate, 200 pounds of a complete fertilizer, or 1 ton of barnyard manure per acre.

INDUSTRIAL CANCER CLINIC FIRST IN NATION, PROVES SUCCESSFUL IN SYLACAUGA

The first industrial cancer detection clinic in the United States, organized in August at Avondale Mills in Sylacauga, Alabama, has proved so successful in four months of operation that it promises to mark the beginning of a new era in the nation-wide campaign to reduce the cancer death rate.

Attendance at the clinic is entirely voluntary, and no worker is required to submit to an examination. Complete physical examinations have been given to more than 200 women. Five cases of early cancer have been detected, and one of every three women examined has had lesions which might have resulted in cancer if left untreated. The program set up is primarily for treatment of women over thirty, but many men have been examined in the clinic.

Sponsored by members of the Field Army of the American Cancer Society, the precedent-making program is incorporated into the regular surgical clinics of Drummond-fraser Hospital at Avondale Mills. The project operates with practically no expense. Doctors contribute their services, and volunteer workers have been recruited from leaders in women's groups in the mill village. In cases where patients need medical treatment expenses are defrayed by employee insurance.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. Circuit Court, in Equity. No. 2307. Woodrow W. Draper, Complainant, vs. Elsie Mae Draper, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of Woodrow W. Draper that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that her place of residence and post office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort; and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Elsie Mae Draper, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of Complaint in this cause by the 12th day of February, 1945, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

Done at office in Clanton, Ala., this 28th day of December, 1944.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic [illegible]. Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Local Officers Arrest Two Would-Be Gansters Here

Monday afternoon about 6 o'clock Chief of Police Henry Anderson, Deputy Rucker and Patrolman Glenn seized two boys at Ellis Tourist Camp here, who turned out to be amateur burglars, giving as their home Clearwater, Fla., and their names as Harry Quck, 16, and Charles Fulwood, 18. They were riding in a 1940 Ford Sedan, which had been stolen from Leila M. Vinson of Tarpon Springs, Fla., on January 19th. The boys were well armed, having in their possession an automatic shotgun, a double-barrel 12 gauge, a .22 pump rifle, a single-shot .22, a .38 pistol, cigar box full of pennies, $21 in money, pocket watch, ladies wrist watch, several butcher knives and a radio. They had some hacksaw blades and some files.

The boys confessed to robbing a place in Bradford, Fla., also in Elfurs, Fla., and said they had broken into the home of Jack Woodfin near Liberty church in Autauga County, where they stole a radio and wrist watch.

They were placed in the county jail.

WHITE CITY BOY ARRESTED

About the same time the boys were being taken at Ellis Tourist Camp, another youngster, giving his name as Arthur Headley of White City, was caught attempting to break into the home of Mrs. W. C. Robinson west of the railroad. The boy, equipped with a large knife had been apprehended by Mrs. Robinson as he was breaking through a glass window and ripping a screen to a closet. When arrested by Anderson about 6:15, the boy stated that he was about 15 years old and that his father and mother were dead. He had purchased the big knife and scabbard during the day Monday at Bell Harware and had charged it to Bud Bradberry, although he told Chief Anderson that he paid $2 for it. He was placed in jail charged with attempt to burglarize.

REPORTED A PRISONER OF GERMAN GOVERNMENT

Sergeant Robert W. Sumner, who has been missing in action in Germany since November 11, is now a prisoner of the German Government, according to word from the War Department, received by Sgt. Sumner's sister, Mrs. Nell I. Sims, of this city.

Sgt. Sumner was serving as an aerial gunner on a heavy bombardment plane with the Fifteenth Air Force in Germany.

SGT. ROBERT W. SUMNER

Methodist Church Crusade For Christ

The Methodist Church of Clanton with other Methodist Churches in Alabama and througout the nation are promoting a bold and comprehensive program to raise $25,000,000.

The share for the Clanton Methodist Church is $2,000.00.

Those soliciting these funds for the church are Frank Callen, J. C. Page, Jim Wade and Otto Jones and others.

About three-fourths of the $2,000.00 which is being raised by the Clanton Methodist Church as its share in the $25,000,000 which the denomination is to use in its "Crusade for Christ" for the relief of human suffering and the rehabilitation of people who have been bombed out of home, family, and occupation during the war years, will be spent overseas, according to the Rev. O. C. Lloyd, pastor of the church. Of its total goal, the Clanton Church has already secured $500.00 in pledges and subscriptions, and expects soon to reach the total.

According to Mr. Lloyd these moneys will be used to care for men, women, and especially children—many if not most of them members of Christian churches—in various countries of Europe, in China, Malaysia, Korea, India, Burma and the Philippine Islands. These people now find themselves without homes, without lands, without occupations, without tools or seeds for the spring plantings, and without churches, schools, hospitals and any form of social service. Those who have been members of the Methodist Churches overseas and many others will be aided as far as possible by missionaries and their national associates, using funds of the Crusade for Christ in most instances.

"In the use of these moneys, the meeting of human need will come first and foremost," says Mr. Lloyd. "There will, in most countries, be some help toward the rebuilding of ruined and damaged properties—if and when human needs have first been cared for and to the extent that seems reasonable. The of help will be so that the recipient of aid will be enabled to help himself better thereafter—he will not be pauperized by the church funds.

"As one generalizes on the needs in various countries so that churches may be re-established, Christian communities re-assembled, families restored to their homes and to self-support, schools opened, hospitals equipped, and the normal activity of life and home re-established, a vast panorama of need and of service comes into view. Perhaps foremost in reassembling the Christian community and making it a leaven among the nations will be the feeding, clothing, sheltering, and providing medical care for pastors, teachers, nurses, doctors, and other nationals who lead overseas Methodism. These people have usually been the principal victims of enemy persecution."

Sgt. Princeton Simmons, of the U. S. Air Corps, has returned from 31 months overseas in the Mediterrnean Theater of Operations.

He will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Simmons, at Jemison, Alabama, after which he will go to the Redistribution Station to be reassigned.

NOTICE TO REGISTRANTS

Your board members can give more intelligent consideration to your problems if you will call on them in the office at a regular meeting.

Frequently a registrant contacts a board member on the street or at his place of business. It is entirely possible that some new regulation has been received at the office since the last regular meeting and the board member would not be familiar with this new regulation. It is therefore urged that, if you desire to discuss your draft status, you call at the draft office during a regular meeting.—Select Service System.

MISSING IN ACTION

Pvt. Jessie Cox, has been missing in action in Germany since December 20, according to word from the War Department, received by his wife, Mrs. Effie Mae Farmer Cox.

Pvt. Cox has been in the service since March, 1944, going overseas in September of that year.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cox of this city.

S-Sgt. William (Billy) Maddox from Avon Park, Fla., has been spending a short furlough here with his parents and friends.

Billy was lucky to be here at the same time a couple of his close friends were. Sgt. Bill Eiland and Lt. Kenneth Thompson are also spending some time here with parents and friends. It sure looked natural seeing the guys together, but what I don't understand is, the three of them going (Stag) to a movie Sunday night. It just isn't like those fellows.

PM 1-C ROBERT R. WHITE, JR.

AWARDED BRONZE STAR MEDAL

For his "untiring exertions" in caring for Marines wounded during fighting for Sapan and Tinian, Navy Pharmacist's Mate First Class, Robert R. White, Jr., 28, of Clanton, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

A corpsman attached to the Fourth Marine Division, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. (Bob) White of Clanton. Before enlisting January 19, 1942, he was employed as an embalmer at the Usray Funeral Home in Anniston, Ala.

WINS OAK LEAF CLUSTER TO HIS AIR MEDAL

First Lieutenant George E. Kyser, 23, of Camden, Ala., pilot of the B-17 Flying Fortress, "Georgia Gal," has won an Oak Leaf Cluster to his Air Medal for "meritorious achievement" during Eighth Air Force bombing attacks on German industrial targets and military strong points in the paths of Allied Armies.

Lt. Kyser is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Kyser, Camden. His wife, Mrs. Marjorie May Kyser, lives at Rome, Ga. A graduate of Isabella High School, he was a student in Vanderbilt University before entering the AAF in September, 1941.

Harold Stroud left last week for Great Lakes, Ill., where he will receive his navy basic training. Harold says that he likes the Navy fine. Of course, he has only been there a week, but maybe it seems months to Harold. We wonder if he will still like it after he has been in there six months, anyway, we hope that he does.

FSA LOANS ARE NOW AVAILABLE TO FARMERS

Marvin Durbin, FSA Supervisor, announced today that loans are available through the Farm Security Administration to assist low-income farmers in doing their part in producing crops and livestock needed for the war effort. Farmers who are not able to secure adequate credit from private sources are eligible for these loans which can be made for the purchase of livestock, machinery, seed, feed, fertilizer, etc. These loans are repayable over a period of from one to five years at 5% interest.

Full information and applications can be secured from the FSA office located upstairs over the Chilton County News.

LOYALTY TO THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:33; 7:12, 16-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6:33.

In the kingdom of Christ there must be unquestioned loyalty. If then He is the King of our lives, we as Christian men and women will want to live in accordance with His blessed will.

Loyalty to Christ leads to the best kind of living. It surpasses any experience of loyalty to a cause or a human personality. Instead of hindering or limiting our development, it opens wide the grand vistas of a life altogether worth-while. It is a life:

I. Well Ordered (6:33).

Much of the distress in which men and women find themselves is caused by the fact that their lives are not well ordered. They live in a constant flurry of uncertainty, indecision and disorder. They have no proper center for their lives, and consequently they are lopsided and lacking in real usefulness.

See how delightfully right is the experience and activity of a follower of Christ. He is the center. The interests of His kingdom are the first in thought. His righteousness is the rule of life. Other things? Well, all that is necessary, God adds day by day.

When the center of life is right, everything else is right—when that is wrong, all is wrong. Is your life centered in Christ?

II. Kind (7:12).

Spiritual principles apply to daily living, to our attitude toward our fellow men. Here we have the so-called Golden Rule. It is not the way of salvation; it is a summary of the teaching of the law and prophets. But it does provide us with a splendid principle of daily conduct.

Our active concern each day and in every touch with others is to be, "How would I like them to deal with me? Let me do thus to them." That is a higher standard than you think until you really try it. Only Christ can enable you to do it.

III. Fruitful (7:16-20).

Two fruit trees or vines may look almost alike until the fruit appears, and then we learn the true character of each—whether good or bad.

Every life brings forth some kind of fruit, and in its outward manifestation the life speaks of the inward condition of the life. Unclean and profane speech, hatred, dishonesty and trickery—these come out of an evil heart. Righteousness, pure and kindly speech, thoughtful actions, honest and straightforward dealings—these speak of the good heart.

The one whose life is centered in Christ (see above) is a vine after God's own planting. His roots strike deep down into the grace and mercy of God, and his fruit is the Christ-like grace of Christian character (see Gal. 5:22, 23).

IV. Genuine (7:21-23).

Lip service will not do (v. 21). Even an imitation of the real service of God's people, but rendered without the backing of a life of faith, will result only in disappointment and our Lord's own disavowal (vv. 22, 23).

The opposite of that is equally true. The real child of God works for Christ; he speaks of his Lord, and calls on His name. But in and through it all there is the evident ring of sincerity and genuineness which marks it as the real thing.

One does not hear much mention these days of hypocrites in the church. Perhaps we are too polite to speak of them, or it may be that we think them too obvious to need pointing out. But they are there, going through the motions of a Christian life, talking the language, and imitating the works, but completely dead spiritually.

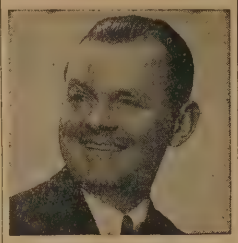
V. Well Grounded (7:24-29).

The figure of speech changes. Instead of being likened to fruit trees, men's lives are said to be like houses, with their various kinds of foundations and superstructures.

The figure is an interesting and instructive one. There is only one foundation upon which one can build a Christian life. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (I Cor. 3:11).

Therein lies the folly of the modernist or liberal. He has denied and rejected the only foundation—and yet tries to build a house of Christian character. When the real problems of life strike, he goes down in ruin.

On the other hand, let no Christian who has laid a foundation on the rock fail to go on and build upon it. Thus grounded, his house of faith will stand though the wind and rain and floods of life seek to tear it down. Of that kind of house we read that "it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock" (v. 25).



This lesson will afford many professed Christians a chance to test their lives and their loyalties by God's standards.

THAT'S quite a jump that "Your Hit Parade" has made, from Frank Sinatra to Lawrence Tibbett; nobody can say that the executives aren't giving us variety. They wanted to widen the musical range of the program, and it's safe to say that they're accomplishing their aim. They've also brought about a reunion. Some 23 years ago, Lawrence Tibbett was one more young man headed toward an operatic career—and Basil Ruysdael was an operatic basso profundo. He showed the young man how to use his voice; in fact, Tibbett credits him for helping him succeed. Now Ruysdael is the announcer on the program that gives us the first operatic star to sing popular music regularly.

Abbott and Costello's airshow conductor, Freddie Rich, has been given an unusual assignment for the new United Artists picture, "A Walk in the Sun." He will compose a special song to run throughout the picture, to interpret the different moods of the story musically. It will also be used as a background for the narrator's comments.

John Brown, who plays "Father" on NBC's "A Date with Judy," originally came to Hollywood to play in pictures, after specializing for years as a dialectician on the stage. "But in my first part," says Brown, "I didn't have a line. The director gave me a cane and said 'Just stroll past the camera.' Then he added, 'but remember to walk with a foreign accent!' "

Every weekday evening as Perry Como steps to the microphone for his solo on his airshow, a young lady—a different one each time—rises in the studio audience and tosses a white carnation at his feet. The girls belong to Manhattan's numerous Perry Como fan clubs, which accord to members the honor of presenting their idol with flowers.

Hedy Lamarr, co-star of "Experiment Perilous," broke into the movies as a script girl, but didn't go far; before she could really learn her duties, she was given a role in something called "Storm in a Water Glass." She was just 15, had run away from school, and her family promptly staged a storm in a teacup. Hedy weathered it, and in another year was one of Vienna's reigning screen beauties.

Bill Goodwin, ace announcer who recently switched from the Burns and Allen program to Frank Sinatra's, is doing right well with his career as an actor. You heard him with George and Gracie as "a friend to the Burns family"; you'll see him in a leading role in "Incendiary Blonde," and also in Alfred Hitchcock's picture, "Notorious," starring Ingrid Bergman. Lots more fun than just announcing!

Butterfly McQueen, former comedienne on Jack Benny's radio program, has a comedy role in "Mildred Pierce," Joan Crawford's first Warner Bros. picture under her present contract. As if that picture hadn't been held up long enough, the star came down with flu and they had to shoot around her.

If you've always wanted to go to Mexico and see no immediate chance of doing it, make a note to see Republic's "Song of Mexico." James M. Fitzpatrick is neglecting none of the famous historic spots, none of the very beautiful ones.

Arthur (Dagwood) Lake of the CBS "Blondie" program says his destiny will never be complete till he co-stars with Dinah Shore. Asked if someone else wouldn't do, he cracked, "In our family it's a tradition that every Lake must have a Shore!"

ODDS AND ENDS—Drew Pearson, syndicate writer and radio commentator, makes his film debut in "Betrayal From the East," appearing in the prologue and doing the narration. . . . The script of the CBS "Suspense" drama, "The Man Who Couldn't Lose," has been bought by a Hollywood studio, and will be adapted to the screen. . . . Marie McDonald, who plays a fatal lady in "It's a Pleasure," was hailed as a Frank Sinatra when they both sang with Tommy Dorsey's band, but she gave up her singing career to go into the movies. . . . Ted Malone, heard from overseas on the Blue, is writing a syndicated column, called "I Saw Your Boy."

GROVE'S COLD TABLETS FOR QUICK RELIEF

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Technical men say that about three gallons of alcohol are used to produce sufficient butadiene to make an average-size synthetic tire.

Use of synthetics and alternate materials, particularly in field wire and telephone cable, resulted in the conservation by the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army of more than 12 million pounds of crude rubber in the first 4 months of 1944.

The importance of rubber tires to the economy of Michigan is indicated by the fact that 65.2 per cent of all inbound and 69 per cent of all outbound freight in that state is carried by motor truck.

At the Bell

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"YEAH, he's a promising young fighter," Jim Gray declared, propping himself on his left elbow on the rub-down table. "It was a good fight until I caught up with 'im in the seventh and planted this right on his chin."

"And what a right!" a reporter said.

"Twenty-one straight knockouts!" exclaimed another reporter. "That brings your total up to a hundred forty-four, doesn't it?"

"No, this one makes a hundred forty-five knockouts in three hundred five fights," Jim said.

Pop Foster, Jim's manager, roared into the dressing room and shoved his way through the group around Jim. "Sorry, Jim, I forgot this," Pop said, holding out a wrinkled telegram. "It came just before we left the hotel. Hope it's nothing serious."

Jim ripped open the envelope. He jumped up and darted across the room to his clothes, shouting, "My little boy's sick with pneumonia! I gotta get medicine to 'im quick. Get a plane, Pop. Hurry! Hurry!"

Because a snowstorm surrounded the mountain range for which Jim was headed, no one wanted to fly him. Finally, he located an old friend who took him to a small town nestling in the foothills. On landing, Jim found that all modes of travel had been temporarily canceled. He started to walk to his log cabin far back in the mountains.

Determinedly Jim plodded on. Once, as he peered through the blinding snow, he thought he saw his home. Then he glanced at the bell in his left hand. He had bought it more than a week before and put it in his coat pocket so he wouldn't forget it. All Fall his little boy had been asking for one. Its tinkle was scarcely audible.

Jim looked the way a top-flight fighter ought to look. He was tall, well-built, his face slightly scarred, and his blue eyes were quick and intelligent.

At first he had felt his 4-F classification as a brand of shame, then he decided to do the next best thing—back up the fighting men by buying bonds—and more bonds. And he could do a better job of that in the ring than if he worked in a factory.

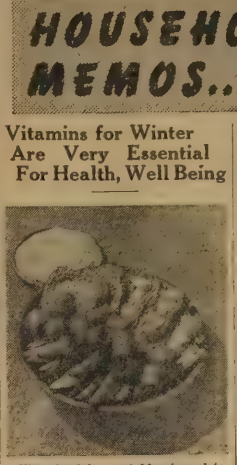
The snow swirled so thickly that it looked like a solid sheet. He bent over, but ached so that he fell, face down. The snow was soft, and the feel of it was soothing to his body.

He staggered up, but after only a dozen steps was down again. The bell caught on a bush as he fell, the strap remaining about his wrist. If only he could get over that next rise! The path might open and he'd be in time.

His hands clawed at the snow. Finally the pain seemed to leave his head, and his arms and legs were no longer heavy. His body was numb now. Over that next ridge, and his boy would have the remedy he badly needed. He had to make it!

He would relax just a minute and sleep in the snow that was so light and soft and warm. The cold no longer cut to his marrow. The flakes were like air in June. His head sank slowly until his nose was beneath the white blanket. Somehow he had to make a supreme effort to be on his way.

From far away he heard a bell. He had to get up. It was the last round coming up and he had the fight almost won. He had to get out there for this last round . . . he had to get out there . . . for . . . this last . . . round . . . Drowsily, painfully, he struggled to his feet; the bell had summoned him. He must be in there fighting. . . .



"Thank heaven I went outside when I did," he heard Martha say. She was beside him and he was in his easy chair. Then she told him that the boy would be all right; how she had left the house for a moment and saw him stumbling along in the blizzard.

"What I can't understand," she said, "is how you managed to hold on to that little bell. It was clenched in your hand when I reached you . . . it rang as I picked you up."

"Yeah . . . it rang . . . it rang before you got to me. If it hadn't 'a' rung I'd never 'a' got on my feet."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Vitamins for Winter Are Very Essential For Health, Well Being

Vitamin-rich vegetables tossed together with mayonnaise make this salad bowl good, healthy eating. Carrot curls and lettuce make a pretty color combination.

It's an easy matter to get vegetables and fruits into the diet during the summer months because supplies are plentiful. However, we need just as many fruits and vegetables in winter, and there is not as much available.

Every homemaker should make it her job to see that the family does not suffer from fruit and vegetable lack during the winter. True, supplies are shy but there are foods in both categories that are in season, and these should be used for all they're worth.

If fruits and vegetables are served raw, more of the valuable vitamins can be saved. Salads should have a big place in the menu. Apples, pears, oranges and grapefruit offer variety and vitamins aplenty, while carrots, cabbage, beets, green beans, squash, turnips, spinach and brussels sprouts can hold their own on the vegetable front.

Today I've selected vegetables which are particularly adaptable served in salad form. Tack these recipes where you can find them and serve often:

Spinach Toss.
(Serves 6)

3 cups broken lettuce
¾ cup fresh spinach
¾ cup shredded raw carrots
¼ cup iced celery
6 radishes, sliced
1 tablespoon minced onion
¼ cup French dressing

Rub bowl with a clove of garlic, but do not let it remain in bowl. Put all vegetables together in bowl just before serving. Pour French dressing over all and toss with fork and spoon until well mixed.

Hearty Winter Salad.
(Serves 8)

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
2 cups hot water
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup cooked peas
½ cup diced celery
½ cup finely shredded cabbage
½ cup diced pimiento, if desired

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add vinegar and salt. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold vegetables into gelatin and pour into shallow pan or 8 individual molds. Unmold on crisp lettuce and serve with mayonnaise which has been thinned with sour cream or milk.

Golden Winter Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 package orange-flavored gelatin
2 cups boiling water or 1 cup fruit juice and 1 cup water
1 apple, unpeeled and diced
2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
1½ cups diced grapefruit sections
¼ cup chopped walnut meats

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water and chill until it begins to thicken. Cube apple and sprinkle with lemon juice and salt. Remove all membrane from grapefruit sections and dice. Combine grapefruit, apples and nut meats into gelatin. Pour into molds that have been rinsed with cold water. Chill until set and serve with mayonnaise.

Hot Slaw.
(Serves 8)

2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ cup cold water
¼ cup vinegar
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups shredded raw cabbage

Combine egg yolks, water, vinegar, butter, salt and sugar. Cook on low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add cabbage and reheat.

One of the factors which makes salad making so easy is the use of a real mayonnaise which is so smooth-textured and easily blended with the ingredients. It is nutritious, too, for it contains oil and egg yolk which adds a vitamin D boost to the diet:

Side Dish Salad.
(Serves 6)

12 carrot curls
1 cucumber, cut in fingers (or dill pickle)
Lettuce, sliced
Mayonnaise

Wash and scrape carrots; cut in very thin lengthwise strips and leave in ice water until curled. Arrange carrot curls, cucumber fingers and lettuce slices in salad bowl. Serve with real mayonnaise.

Make your lunches vitamin rich by serving a sandwich with a rich-in-vitamin-B salad:

Vitamin "B" Salad.
(Serves 6)

6 cups cooked or shredded cabbage
1½ cups cooked peas
1½ teaspoons salt
⅜ teaspoon pepper
6 tablespoons mayonnaise

Mix cabbage, peas and seasonings with real mayonnaise. Chill. Serve with a bacon sandwich made with whole wheat bread. Garnish with watercress.

Pears make a lovely salad when combined simply with lettuce, carrots and American cheese balls. It's nice enough for company!

When served with a whole wheat bread sandwich, this salad gives a rich vitamin "B" lunch. Lunch is a good time to get the salad into the menu.

Company Salad.
(Serves 5)

2 cups finely shredded lettuce
2½ cups grated carrots
5 pear halves
10 ½-inch balls of American cheese
10 ½-inch balls of cream cheese
French dressing

Arrange shredded lettuce on salad plates. In center of lettuce make a nest of grated carrot. Place pear half in each nest with balls of cheese in the pear cavity. Serve with French dressing.

French Dressing.

1 clove garlic, grated fine
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 small onion, grated
⅓ cup tomato catsup
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups salad oil

Mix all ingredients in order given with a rotary egg beater. Place in quart jar and store in cool place until ready to serve. Shake well before using.

Don't Waste a Scrap: Every bit of food you buy can be made to work. Outer leaves of lettuce, spinach, and leftover bits of parsley from garnish can be used to give flavor to soups. The same is true of leftover liquids left from cooking vegetables.

Stale cake may be sliced and served with fruit and fruit juices. Combine with eggs and milk and bake into pudding. Or, use it to line pudding molds and pour gelatin or custard over it to make icebox dessert.

Dry, leftover bread may be toasted and used on top of soup. Or, grind and make into bread crumbs, or use in stuffings to stretch meat.

Syrups from canned fruit may be utilized for fruit sauces to pour over puddings and custards. Leftover jams and jellies are ideal for pastry fillings and for flavoring and sweetening stewed fruits and berries.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home

No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold promptly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it eases breathing, and lets you sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

I'LL SETTLE FOR 25 MORE YEARS OF YOUR COOKING!

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

.By BEN

What's this "crime wave in miniature" thats going around Clanton? Burglary and theft seems to be the order of the day -- or night. Monday night our daughter, June, was scared silly (no cracks please) by a 'peeping Tom' who came to the window and, with half covered face, looked the situation over. She rushed to the telephone and called and told us that there was a man at the window and to hurry home. We did at far above the State speed limits. Of course we could find no one there, or anywhere around that neighborhood, when we arrived. But one thing is certain, ordinarily we are the most peaceful person alive, but nothing would be more pleasant than to place a rifle bullet between the eyes of one so low as to go peeping into people's windows.

What do you say Folks & Things institute a good neighbor paragraph each week? Our nomination as first on this list is Mrs. P. M. Moore of South Clanton. You may know a better neighbor—but we do not. In case you do, write Folks & Things and tell us about her and we will use it in this column. Now let's give Mrs. Moore that orchid. We have been thinking of good neighbors and people who live so that their every act exemplifies Christs teachings—just such a person is Mrs. Moore. She has spent 65 of her years thinking of others and doing for others. Never being one to complain, she is constantly on the lookout for other people, a friend, a neighbor to lean upon when trouble comes. Mrs. Moore is a good gardener and each year finds time between doing good turns to plant her garden and enjoys every minute of it. She does all of her housework herself and has raised three children. Mr. Moore died in 1911, 34 years ago this May, and never has a responsibility been shirked by the widow he left to care for these three children. She called only on God for comfort when burdens were hard to bear. She She is a tither in every way, in her time, her talents and in her worldly possessions and certainly gives moral support to everyone she comes in contact with. We commend Mrs. P. M. Moore as a good neighbor. Should you doubt our word, ask any resident of South Clanton.

Our brother Buck, who is now in Germany, says now he knows how it feels to take a bath in a steel helmet.

James W. Smith was in to see us Monday. Mr. Smith is a guard at Kilby Prison and has been for the last 17 years. Week before last he had to shoot a prisoner for the first time in those 17 years. He tells us that once before he had to pull a gun on a prisoner who would not halt when he was commanded to. However the case week before last you probably read about in the papers. A prisoner was trying to escape and had scaled the wall when Mr. Smith caught him between his gunsights and pulled the trigger. As we left the office we cautioned him, "Well don't shoot anymore prisoners." To which he answered, "We don't want to, but none better not try to get away."

We are far from being worthy of telling others what to do, or what not to do, but do us this favor: the next time you start to condemn others for what they do or before you decide that what you think is absolutely RIGHT, take a little time out and read "The Sermon On The Mount." It will do you good. It will make you stop and think. After rtading it, you will realize just how far we have strayed from Christ's teachings. We are also refering to our churches.

We will call it quits this week with this little tale furnished us by some GI Joe who was home on furlough: The K. P. was talking to the rookie, "Where you been all morning?" "Filling the salt shakers as you told me to, Sarge." "You mean all the morning?" "Yep, it ain't easy pouring the salt through those little holes."

The Great Pasteur
Never Saw Chile's Nitrate Desert, But...

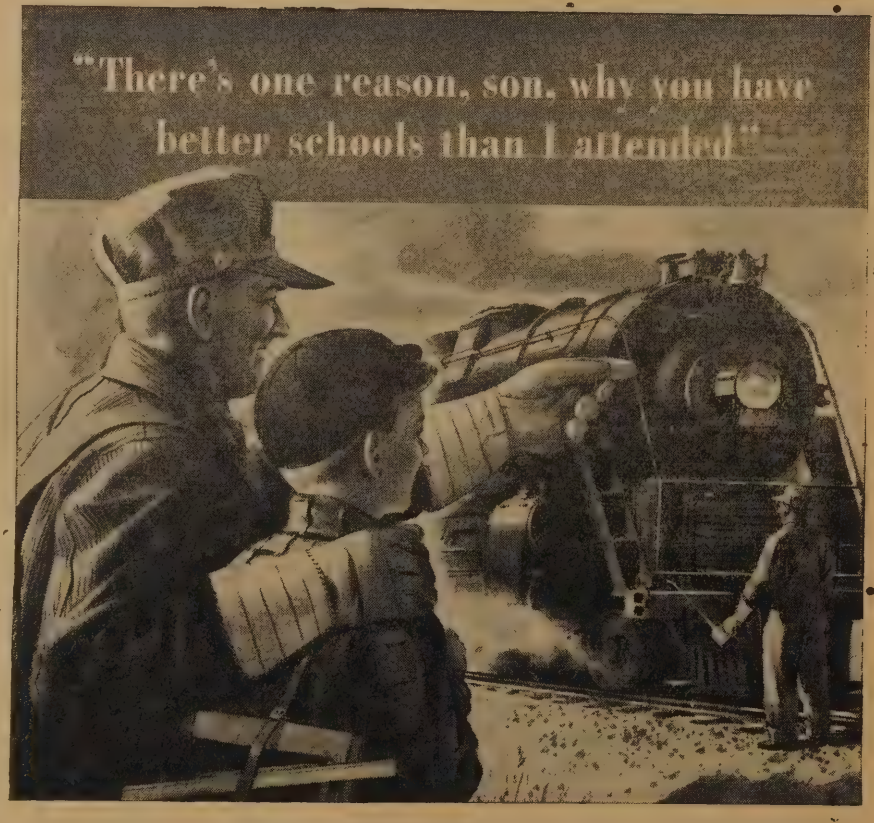
His bacterial research, which gave his name to the pasteurization process, provided the basis for one of the widely accepted explanations of Chilean Nitrate's origin.

Vast beds of Natural Nitrate in Chile's desert region are natural deposits—enough to last hundreds of years—of one of the oldest and best known fertilizer materials. Mystery of their origin long has challenged science. Many theories have developed.

Some say prehistoric plants were "nitrified" by bacteria in the soil. That's what Pasteur's work suggested. Others say they are decayed vegetation.

There is a belief the nitrate beds are droppings of billions of birds. Another, that electricity formed them through centuries of violent storms. Some think the beds are rotted rocks; some think they are a crust pushed up from underneath.

Perhaps the right theory combines parts of all of them. Who knows? But there is one point on which all agree:



Chilean Nitrate of Soda was created by tremendous natural processes. It is completely natural . . . the only natural nitrate in the world.

Because of its natural origin, Chilean Nitrate of Soda contains, in addition to nitrogen and sodium, small amounts of boron, iodine, manganese, copper,—34 elements in all—many of which are essential to healthy plant growth.

Yes, a hundred years of research and experience agree on the importance of Chilean Nitrate's natural qualities and their outstanding performance in continued profitable farming.

Easy to Handle . . . Easy to Use
Natural Chilean Nitrate comes in two forms—Champion brand and Old Style. It reaches you in fine mechanical condition, in even-weight bags, for easy storage and handling.

Natural CHILEAN NITRATE of SODA

Taxes paid by industry largely maintain our Public School System. The Railroads contribute greatly to that source of revenue. In 1943 alone, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad paid over $2,200,000 in taxes for the support of schools and State Universities.

That is equivalent to employing about 2,000 teachers or sending about 60,000 children to school for one year, who otherwise might be deprived of the benefit of proper education or modern school facilities.

The L & N finds satisfaction in the number of Southern boys and girls who are attending fine schools, in contrast to the "little red schoolhouse" of a generation ago. This is made possible in no small measure by its contribution in school taxes. The L & N likes to think of these boys and girls of the South as our own—"We're putting our sons and daughters through College," we might say.

No other agency has for almost 100 years contributed more to the growth of the South's commerce and culture than our own "Old Reliable"—the L & N. We hope to continue to aid in that program in the postwar period. Toward that goal we ask only an impartial treatment in regulation; that we be given an equal opportunity with our competitors to serve the Public's needs.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

2,000,000 Russ Strike Nazis; Yanks Drive Inland on Luzon; Set Up New Deferment Policy

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

In what the Germans say may be the decisive phase of the European war, the Russians launched a general full-scale offensive along the long eastern front, as indicated by arrows, attacking northward from East Prussia to Southern Poland. At the same time, the Reds pushed forward into Czechoslovakia. Main Russian effort was concentrated below Warsaw on route to Krakow, with the Germans forced to give up forward positions under the sustained pressure of the Red attacks, prepared by the heaviest of artillery bombardment. At this point, the Russians were on the threshold of industrial Silesia.

PACIFIC:
Move Inland

As carrier planes from Adm. Halsey's Third fleet ranged the South China sea to smash Japanese shipping that could bring reinforcements and supplies to the Philippines, U. S. ground forces under command of Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger continued to move inland on Luzon in their drive for Manila.

Gen. Krueger

Only to the eastward did the Yanks encounter stiff Jap resistance, with Jap armored columns, using baby tanks, lashing at the left flank of General Krueger's forces in an effort to check a drive that could bottle up sizable enemy units to the northeast.

In the early absence of appreciable enemy strength southward toward Manila, Yank columns took full advantage of the minor resistance to securely fasten their hold on a network of highways leading from their supply dumps at Lingayen Gulf for the great battle shaping.

In penetrating the Japs' inner lifeline in the South China sea, Admiral Halsey's carrier planes not only attacked enemy shipping bearing supplies to the Philippines, 1,100 miles away, but also bombed their sources of supply along the Chinese mainland to the west.

DRAFT PLAN:
For 26 to 29

With the pool of 18 to 25 year olds dwindling, and with the services insistent on the use of younger men, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes traced out the course to be followed in the induction of industrial workers in the 26 to 29 class without impairing the production effort.

Under Byrnes' formula, 26 to 29-year-olds not in essential activities would be the first to go. They would be followed by those engaged in relatively unimportant positions in essential or critical industries, who can be easily replaced. Finally, those in more important jobs in essential and critical industries would be inducted.

Meanwhile, some 365,000 deferred farm workers between 18 and 25 years of age began receiving their pre-induction physicals, preparatory to local boards' review of the cases of those found fit for the services.

CIGARETTES:
Trade Rationing

In the first broad attempt at private rationing during the war by a trade, the National Association of Tobacco Distributors drew up a plan under which the 1,250,000 retail outlets they serve would issue cards controlling their customers' cigarette purchases to assure an equitable supply for all.

Framed after shortages had pinched many communities, the distributor's plan did not meet without criticism, with an official of the National Association of Retail Druggists declaring that no such private rationing was necessary if members were given their wartime allotments instead of smaller and smaller amounts.

Eight-seven per cent of the retail outlets would be affected by the plan, with exceptions including the chain stores, which buy direct from manufacturers and take 8 per cent of supplies, and hotels, railroads and other places serving travelers and normally selling 5 per cent of stocks.

ON ROAD TO MANILA

The road to Manila, which American forces broke open with landings on the gulf of Lingayen, lies through the great central plains of Luzon. A broad open corridor 40 miles wide and hemmed in by mountains, this region is one of the most populous and normally productive areas of the Philippines, with many small farms spreading a mosaic over the face of the land.

EUROPE:
All-Out Drive

On the move behind massed artillery, with tank columns spearheading their drive, 2,000,000 Russians smashed at German defenses from the wooded lake country of East Prussia to the vast snow-covered plains of Poland in an all-out effort to reach the Reich.

Greatest concentration of Russian strength was along a 200-mile front below Warsaw, where about 650,000 Reds hacked forward, with one of the wings swinging to the rear of the former Polish capital, and the other riding down hard on Silesia, important German industrial province.

Outnumbered, with no natural barriers to hole up behind on the flat plains, the Germans were compelled to fall back as the Reds overran their forward positions. In East Prussia, where the Nazis could utilize the forested terrain, the Reds were held to smaller gains.

Meanwhile, the Reds encountered stiffening resistance in their push into southern Czechoslovakia and Hungary as the Nazis sought to buttress their industrial districts to the west.

Write-Off Bulge

One month after Field Marshal Von Rundstedt had launched his lightning thrust into Belgium and Luxembourg into the First army's rest sector, his forces streamed back into the Siegfreid line again under cover of fog and rain.

As the U. S. armies wrote off Von Rundstedt's sudden offensive thrust, however, the cagey German general was reported to be shifting major forces to the Alsatian front to the southeast, where small but sharp Nazi diversionary attacks earlier had bitten deep into American and French positions along the frontier.

With the war department removing the limitations on the total of overseas vets who can return home on 30-day furloughs, Gen. George C. Marshall said the number should rise sharply in the next few months.

Von Rundstedt's abandonment of the bulge and withdrawal into the prepared defense fortifications of the Siegfried line followed quickly upon the Allies' recovery from the first shock of his big offensive and their attack upon his lines from the north, west and south with massed forces that threatened to chew his army to pieces. Taking advantage of murky weather, and with rearguards stubbornly covering his retreat, he managed to extricate most of his armored columns from the bulge, to fight another day.

Losses High

With most of their 90,000 casualties on the western front between December 15 and January 7 suffered in Belgium and Luxembourg, the Germans paid a high price for their temporary relief of their vital industrial Ruhr and Saar basins.

Of the 90,000 casualties, approximately 40,000 were captured, Secretary of War Stimson announced, bringing German prisoners up to 844,891 since D-day, with the U. S. First army bagging 230,911 alone.

U. S. losses on the western front between December 15 and January 7 reached 52,594, with nearly 40,000 of these suffered in Belgium and Luxembourg. Of the 40,000, Stimson said, about 18,000 are missing, with the majority presumed to be prisoners.

GUARD MARKETS

Protecting both the consumer and honest manufacturer, the U. S. Food and Drug administration moved against a minority of manufacturers who sought to capitalize on the heavy demand of consumers by disguising their food products during 1944.

Cases included substitution of mineral oil for food oil; use of saccharin in beverages and ground cocoa shells in chocolate products, and the palming off of prepared cereals for nuts and coconuts.

FARM INCOME:
Up 6%

With returns from crops showing the most substantial increase, farm income approximated $20,390,000,000 in 1944, 6 per cent over figures for the previous year, the U. S. department of agriculture declared.

The rise in income from crops totaled 11 per cent, the USDA said, with receipts for tobacco showing the biggest increase of 36 per cent as a result of larger acreage and higher yields, and returns on food grains mounting 29 per cent, chiefly as a result of the record wheat harvest. With production of deciduous fruit above the unfavorable 1943 season, income from fruits and nuts was up about 25 per cent.

With most of the rise due to marketings of meat animals, receipts from livestock and related products were up 2 per cent over last year, USDA estimated. Because of a sharp drop in egg prices and slight decreases in both prices and quantities of chickens and broilers, income from eggs and poultry dropped.

Wages Highest

The highest wages and lowest level of employment of hired hands for a January 1 in two decades were recorded on the first of the year, the USDA said, partly reflecting the intense competition of agriculture and industry for labor.

Up sharply from a year ago, rates per month with board averaged $74.60 on January 1, while rates without board stood at $88.90. Daily rates with board averaged $3.54 and those without board $4.15, the USDA reported.

As of January 1, the total of both hired and family workers on farms stood at 8,005,000, 2 per cent below 1944, 9 per cent below the 1935-'39 average, and the lowest on that date for 20 years. Part of the decrease was attributed to unfavorable weather, which reduced efforts to necessary chores and livestock care in most parts of the country except the west and southwest.

FOREIGN POLICY:
Senate Debate

Charged with the consideration of America's foreign affairs, the U. S. senate, with prewar debates still mutely echoing within the staid walls of the stately old chamber, again be-stirred itself as Montana's Burton K. Wheeler rose to his feet to describe projected postwar peace organization as the arbitrary rule of great powers, and Florida's Claude Pepper warned against scotching an effective international security body.

Burton Wheeler

Said Wheeler: " . . . Observe how the Dumbarton Oaks proposals emasculate the good neighbor policy, override the principle of the sovereign equality of all nations, approve as a cardinal principle the use of brute force and the threat of coercion with requiring resort to peaceful methods in dealing with the threat of aggression, and deliberately divorce the structure of the proposed security organization from the nature of the peace which it is expected to enforce. . . ."

Claude Pepper

Retorted Pepper: " . . . After the senate failed to ratify the treaty of Versailles (in 1920), including provision for the league of nations . . . we abandoned our Allies. We abandoned our objectives. We failed to take advantage of the opportunities afforded by that day, and we waited for the next war to come. . . ."

HITLER TRIAL:
Plans Snagged

With Great Britain's rejection of the Allied war crimes commission's proposal for a creation of an international court to try Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini and other Axis leaders, fear was expressed that they might escape punishment, after all. According to the London Sunday Express, the British foreign office favored exile for the Axis heads, much in the manner of Napolean's banishment to Elba.

Meanwhile, Russia intimated that it was proceeding with its own plans for trying Hitler, et al, what with Ilya Ehrenburg, prominent Soviet journalist, declaring: " . . . We ourselves will judge our torturers and this we will entrust to nobody. . . . "

Quoting an unnamed British jurist, the London Sunday Express declared that one of the reasons Great Britain might object to an open trial of the Axis chieftains was because some of its own officials might be embarrassed by being called to the witness stand to give evidence for the defense.

LABOR TURNOVER

For every 1,000 workers on factory pay rolls in November, 60 either changed jobs or left manufacturing work. Quits represented three-fourths of all separations, discharges and lay-offs each accounted for 10 per cent and the remaining 5 per cent resigned for military and miscellaneous reasons.

The quit rate for manufacturing as a whole, 45 per 1,000, was slightly below that of the previous month, but on the same level with that of one year ago.

Prospect of Marriage Knocks Memory Out

DENVER, COL. — Although Corp. Richard H. Jacobs of St. Louis has written to his fiancee nearly every day for six years, he was so excited he couldn't remember her address when he filled out a furlough application, asking time off so he could go and marry her. Jacobs had to consult a Memphis directory.

Admits Throwing Sons Into River

Father Gives Reason Lack of Home for Them.

COSHOCTON, OHIO. — Warren Patterson, a slender 31-year-old machinist who, Prosecutor Russel E. Lyons said, admitted in a signed statement that he stood on a bridge and dropped two of his three sons into the Mohican river because he had no home for them, was held in jail here.

One of the boys, Larry, 1½ years, drowned, and Lyons said he would file a murder charge later. the other, Raymond, seven years, crawled from the stream, wandered most of the night in a cold rain and finally was picked up by a motorist, Lyons said.

The two other boys, Gene and Glenn, eight-year-old twins, were put out of their father's automobile a half mile from the bridge and left with a blanket under a tree. They stayed there 16 hours in a rainstorm before being found, the prosecutor added.

Lyons said that Patterson told him and Sheriff Jay Abbott in the statement that he intended to push the twins into the river too, but "hadn't the heart" to go on after dropping the first two.

The story unfolded, the sheriff said, after Charles Fessler, an oil driller, brought Raymond to Abbott's home and listened to the boy's bizzare account of being dropped into the creek along with his infant brother. A search disclosed the child's body, Abbott said.

Abbott said Patterson later was found asleep in the rear seat of his automobile near an Ashland (Ohio) machine shop where he was employed, and was brought here.

The sheriff said Patterson related this story: He left Ashland about 11 a. m. with the children in his automobile and drove to Wooster, Ohio, where he had a few drinks. Later he started for Coshocton, arriving near Mohican river about midnight.

He told the children to lie down and sleep. Later he awoke the baby and Raymond, took one under each arm, walked onto a bridge and dropped them into the water.

"I made up my mind to get rid of them all, but I lost my nerve," Abbott quoted the father as saying.

Five Chickens Fly From Frisco to Pacific Isle

SAN FRANCISCO.—Five chickens flew from San Francisco, Calif., to a central Pacific island recently, stopping only at Hawaii en route, the navy announced. The chickens, four hens and a rooster, were carried aboard a Martin Marauder medium bomber to furnish fresh eggs for a lonely outpost. Lieut. John Heppe of Lincoln, Neb., the pilot, said the flight not only was successful for the fowl but profitable for him. He collected an unannounced sum from skeptical navy men who bet his cargo would not survive the trip.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat flying. He appeals to several Generals and is finally offered an opportunity to get into the fight. After flying a bomber to India he is made a ferry pilot but this does not suit him. He talks Gen. Chennault into giving him a Kittyhawk for combat flying, and soon is flying the skies over Burma, becoming known as the "one man air force." Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group, but he still keeps knocking Jap planes out of the skies.

CHAPTER XXVI

We figured that some important announcement was about to be made, and out there in the hostel area everything was quiet. The amber liquid was divided among some forty men, and each of us got a few drops in a Chinese teacup—but it was enough for the ceremony.

The General grinned at us and said, "We've got the Japs worried now, we've hit everywhere except what he thought we'd attack. Tomorrow is the Day." We could hardly keep from cheering. But we held up our "brimming cups" and just said, "To you, General." The drops never tasted better.

That night, after the announcement, we closed the post and kept all men from going into town. This would cause talk in the right places. Colonel Cooper went into Kweilin and discreetly passed out the news that we were ready for the main attack. Somehow he arranged for just the right information to begin its round-about journey to the Japanese.

The seed had now been sown.

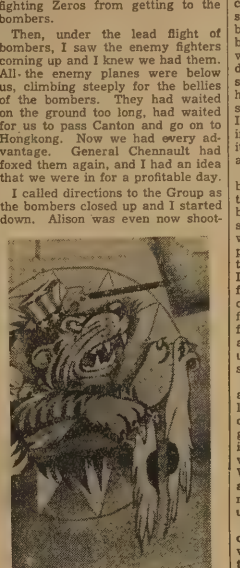
On November 27 the largest force of bombers we had ever used in China, escorted by the largest force of fighters, rolled down the runway at Kweilin. There were fourteen bombers, with twenty-two P-40's for escort. We had also left a strong force on the ground at Kweilin, just in case the Jap tried something while we were away. I led the headquarters section of the fighter escort and made up the reserve. My position in the escort would be three thousand feet above the bombers. Down below me a thousand feet was Johnny Alison with his flight of eight, on the right flank of Morgan's bombers. Colonel Bruce Holloway had the flight on the left flank, another thousand feet lower. Colonel Cooper was riding in the lead bomber as intelligence officer, and that day was going to demonstrate the teamwork that he had striven for, between the fighters and the bombers.

Cooper had been so anxious to accompany our raids that he seemed keenly disappointed whenever other duties interfered. He was threatening today to take over one of the turrets in the lead bomber and shoot down the first Jap. I joked with Coop on the way to our fighters that morning, and told him that we in the fighters were so glad to have him along that we were going to let one Jap through, just so he could shoot it down and get the pilot's ears for his little boy. We laughed as we separated.

The large formation—large for us in China—assembled over the airdrome and took a course North in the direction of Hankow. We wanted reports from other spies in Kweilin to get started, for this mission was planned mainly to get the Jap Air Force into the air where we could get at it. We usually evaded towns as we began our attacks, but today we went low over Kweilin, and then to the North. When we were beyond the prying and ready ears of any spies, we turned to a direct heading for Hongkong.

Now we climbed above high overcast to twenty-thousand feet, and settled down for the three hundred miles ahead. In fifty-five minutes the clouds began to break and scatter, and we approached enemy territory with a cloudless sky and perfect visibility. Over to the right now I caught the glint of the sun on the junction of the three rivers that meet near Canton in a figure like a trident. Far ahead I saw the hills of Hongkong Island and the ever-present fog banks out in the Pacific.

We crossed the East River that led down to Canton, and the bombers turned ninety degrees to the right, away from Hongkong—and we swept towards Canton. Once again we were going where the enemy were not expecting us. The General was about to outguess the Japanese as always.



I could imagine the small aerial screen over Hongkong watching and waiting, while on the ground at Kai Tak in Kowloon, on Sanchau Island, at Tien Ho and White Cloud in Canton, the enemy Zeros were waiting to take off after we had passed Canton, to come and get us over Hongkong or to intercept us on the way home. We bored in towards our targets—shipping on the East River at Canton and at Whangpoo Docks. We had special reports that two freighters were unloading new Zeros and spare airplane engines at Canton that morning.

Just South of Tien Ho airdrome, we split the bomber formation, and one of the fighter echelons went with each of the three bomber flights, each with an assigned target. My flight stayed with the lead bomber formation, and I saw our target, an 8,000-ton freighter surrounded by many lighters, there in the river. The smoke from the single stack was lazily going straight up. Morgan's bombardier was bending tensely over his bomb-sight now, keeping the cross-hairs on the target. I knew the A.F.C.E. was flying the lead bomber as we went on the straight bombing run towards our target.

I saw the string of bombs bracket the freighter perfectly, and later photos showed four direct hits from the first flight. The lighters around the doomed vessel were blown high and in all directions. Down to our left, Holloway, escorting the other flight whose target was a freighter, saw the vessel hit, then saw the smoke. Alison had his fighter force with the third flight; they had already bombed the docks and were fighting Zeros from getting to the bombers.

Then, under the lead flight of bombers, I saw the enemy fighters coming up and I knew we had them. All the enemy planes were below us, climbing steeply for the bellies of the bombers. They had waited on the ground too long, had waited for us to pass Canton and go on to Hongkong. Now we had every advantage. General Chennault had foxed them again, and I had an idea that we were in for a profitable day.

I called directions to the Group as the bombers closed up and I started down. Alison was even now shooting down Zeros around the last formation of bombers. Holloway called to one of his elements to take the climbing Jap ships and return to formation. We were fighting this battle like a business, and we were going to keep together until every bomber was safely on the way home to lunch at Kweilin.

The Flying Tiger of the AVG jumps through the Chinese Sun and tears Jap flag.

About four thousand feet under the leading three bombers I could see the first of the steeply climbing Japs. As I dove closer I could even see the white smoke rings that formed in front of his wings, and I knew from experience that he was firing his cannon at the bottom of the bombers as he climbed. The Jap carries in his wings smaller guns that have tracers: he gets these on his target, then shoots his cannon. As I took this first enemy ship, I had one moment of panic: it seemed very close to Morgan's lead ship—maybe I couldn't get to it in time. Then my dive took me right up above the Zero, between him and the bomber. I held my fire until the last two hundred yards, and shot the Zero down with a two-second burst. It exploded within a hundred yards of the ship in which Colonel Cooper was—he confirmed it for me later. But as I pulled up and looked for the next enemy ship, I recalled that I had almost made my joking threat too good. For the Jap had got too close to the bomber in which the Chief of Staff was riding.

My wing man stayed with me and we fired on the second Zero together. I could see his tracers coming from my right. I closed in with a full-deflection shot and held a burst ahead of the next enemy ship. He climbed on up towards the bombers and flew right through my tracers. His ship turned in a slow, almost too deliberate half-loop, stalled out, then dove straight down. At first I thought that I had fired too far in front of him and he'd turned to evade the fire; then, as I watched the speeding ship go straight into the hills between Tien Ho field and White Cloud, I knew I had shot the pilot. The ship did not burn until it crashed.

I fired at six Japanese fighters so fast that I didn't see what happened to any of them. You get a snap shot and then the Zero is gone, rolling over, or you're turning for another one, or you're getting your nose down to make sure that you never lose your speed and too much altitude when you're fighting those highly maneuverable ships.

One other I saw trailing smoke as he rolled over, but I didn't get to see him catch fire or crash. The bombers had outrun our dog-fight and were going down-hill fast for Kweilin. I heard Morgan call that chow was on, and I knew he considered his bombers safe. I called and told Captain Goss to escort the bombers to base.

The others of us broke away looking for straggling Japs. I took my flight over towards White Cloud airdrome, where ack-ack was so heavy that it was just about making the sky black. I guess I must have thought of Lieutenant Daniels—for I dove. I hadn't heard a single P-40 call for help; so I was fairly confident that we had won the battle. My wing man must have got lost in my dive.

From the altitude at which I had started my dive I couldn't see what was on White Cloud field, but as I pulled half out of the four-hundred-mile-an-hour dive over the hills South of the airdrome, I saw an airplane. It was a big ship, which I soon saw had three engines. The door was open, and I think men were hurrying to get in or out. Two cars were driving away from the ship. Even at my speed I tried a burst at the tri-motored Junkers 52, but I saw the tracers go short, and when I got closer I coud see the dust far to the left of the target. My speed was so great that I couldn't hold enough pressure on the rudder steadily for accurate shooting. But I must have gotten a few tracers in, for as I swept low over the ship it seemed that dust was churned up all about.

Turning low, I came back for a better shot. The ack-ack was so thick that I nearly forgot and turned back. After all, that which I could see had already exploded, and if it wasn't hit yet I was as well off one place as another. My burst caught the engines of the transport, which I could see now were running. Uniformed passengers were jumping out of the door. I turned steeply and fired on the door, then into the fuselage. The ship was smoking, and the engines had either been shot up or had been cut off, for they had stopped.

My engine missed several times, as it had done from some poor gasoline earlier in the flight, and I decided to let well enough alone and get away from White Cloud. Keeping just about down in the rice, I went straight North to the river. With the engine missing every now and then, I spent a miserable few minutes that seemed like a year until I got out of Jap territory.

I landed at Kweilin, and while I counted the holes in my plane I watched for the last of the fighters to come in—half trying to count the twenty-seven holes from the ground-fire around White Cloud and half trying to sweat all the twenty-two fighters back. All the bombers were in and were being serviced and bombed up again. Eighteen fighters finally came in, and we worried until we got word that the other four were at another field and would be back later in the afternoon.

We made our reports to the General and we knew he was pleased. Out of 45 Zeros that had come up for us over Canton we had shot down 29 that were confirmed. Alison had stayed back there for twenty-five minutes and definitely had seen that the two freighters loaded with Zeros and engines had been sunk. The nature of the cargo was eventually confirmed. Three weeks later we dive-bombed the salvage parties that were diligently trying to raise the sunken freighters. Evidently there had been something very valuable to the Japanese on the two big vessels.

We went on back to Kunming. Sometimes I wonder if the Jap ever did find out where General Chennault was going. Years after maybe they'd still be flying that patrol over Hongkong, waiting for the attack that we were supposed to make.

As we carried out the long missions into Burma in the days that followed, I thought about how the spirit of our air warfare had changed from what I had heard about and read of the last World War in the air. There had been an element of knighthood depicted in that first struggle in the skies. Now I thought I knew why.

Back there the pilots had been carefully hand-picked. They were the adventurous, devil-may-care hotbloods, like those boys who had been the Confederate cavalry in the War Between the States. More than likely when they fired at another pilot and then saw that their victim's guns were "jammed," they may have "saluted" and dived away, unwilling to destroy the helpless enemy. But this was a different type of war, against a race of fanatics, who had been repressed for so long in their warped minds that they were barbaric madmen.

From what I had already seen, I knew that the Japanese soldier and the Japanese war machine were not out merely to beat us in war—they were out to EXTERMINATE US, even to the extent of killing our pilots whom they captured as prisoners. And we knew that this had been done even in April of 1942. We learned of it again after the Hongkong raid. They would never give up—they had gone all-out in a war to the bitter end. There was no romance about it. We knew that if we were shot down and were not killed in the crash, or if we were captured, we would most certainly be tortured and executed. That's why all of us never considered the element of capture. Get out of the crash-landing shooting, we always said.

Youth Cornerstone of Germans' War Machine

Taken in Tow at Six, Children Schooled in Nazi Ideology; Grooved Into Places in Totalitarian Society.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

(This is the second of two articles by Mr. Baukhage on where Germany continues to get its fighting manpower.)

The husky and determined young Germans pictured on this page are a symbol of the force that made Von Rundstedt's counteroffensive on the western front possible—made it possible for the German armies, supposedly smashed to pieces in France, to "come back" from their stand at Arnhem and on the Cologne plain.

These boys represent two things: first, preliminary military training, and second, the control of the Nazi party over the German people. "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined." There are probably seven million "twigs" in Germany today.

In a previous column I discussed the various Nazi semi-military and military organizations outside the German army itself. Particularly, the great "SA" or brown shirt organization which, after its purge, became the implement for indoctrination and preparation for military training of the German people. I also discussed in some detail the "SS" or Elite Guard, now the most powerful factor in the Reich, whose function was first to "overcome the enemies of the Nazi party from within" and which now has taken over the control of the German armies and the protection of the Nazi state from without.

The German counteroffensive on the western front has made it possible for another crop of six hundred thousand tough Nazi-indoctrinated girls and boys to bolster the army and the home-front in 1945. (Courtesy—Infantry Journal.)

Through SA representatives right down to the "ward"; through the powerful Gestapo (secret police of the SS) which gradually superseded all police force, the adult non-Nazis are controlled by force and threat of force.

Take Over Adults' Duties

But perhaps as important as any Nazi weapon today is the Hitler youth organization which is the Nazis' grip on the future. Today, thousands of Hitler youth are guarding installations, watching foreign workers, performing work which relieves men for the front. Already, many have shot to kill. All can.

Tomorrow they will be in the army.

The pre-Hitler youth groups in Germany had flourished for a long time. They embraced everything from the strongly rightist, Prussianized version of the Boy Scouts whose weekly excursions were given over to military games and maneuvers, to the religious groups. In the middle were the "Wandervogel" (Wanderbirds) who despised regimentation, strolled about the countryside on holidays with their guitars on their backs, sleeping in barns or in the open, hobnobbing with the peasants, singing and also collecting the old Volk-songs and just having a plain good time. The writer himself spent many happy hours with the carefree Wandervogel, some of them in the "Eifel," the very territory through which Von Rundstedt led his charge. We talked of poetry, love and philosophy—never about war.

Suffice it to say, the Nazis methodically absolved all of these groups, the religious movements which were well organized, resisting as long as they could. Today, under Nazi law, the Hitler youth (male and female), controls "all German youth within the Reich."

I can give you the testimony of one German mother which was whispered into my ear in 1939, just before the war broke out.

"My daughter has gone," she said to me. "We have nothing in common. Her whole time is given to the Nazi activities. But I have my boy again. They worked him so hard in the youth camp that he came down with tuberculosis and Hitler doesn't want him. I shall have him to nurse at home."

Poor woman, I am afraid that by this time, if he can walk and carry a gun, he is at least a member of the Volkssturm, the "home army."

Military Training Begins at 14

The tiny tots join the youth organization at six. But not until they are 13 or 14 does the real "prep" military training begin for the boys and the serious work for the girls in their separate camps. By this time they have already been indoctrinated with blind devotion for the "fuehrer," the belief in German superiority and abject loyalty to the Nazi state.

Aside from training in sports which are believed to condition a boy for military hardships and actual drill with weapons, the "leadership principle" is stressed and promising youths are sent to special schools (Ordensburg).

When the Hitler youth completes his training he is fully prepared for whatever Nazi group into which he fits best. He may, in due course, become a member of the esoteric SS—the force which under Himmler rules every phase of life in the Reich today. He will probably find some role in the great SA organization. In any case, he will become a member of some special group, perhaps more than one, which will prepare him to serve or provide a place for his service in his destined role as a cog in the machinery of total war.

Normally, when his Hitler Youth period is ended, the next step, unless the boy is physically disqualified, or is chosen for special duties, is the Labor Service, which is like the American CCC insofar as it is concerned primarily with such work as construction and forestry. But the military training continues. As in the Hitler youth organization, the young Nazi is drilled, disciplined, housed, fed and clothed like a soldier.

When this duty is completed, he probably finds himself immediately in the army. But in peacetime, or if he is specially qualified, there are a score or more organizations which will take care of him right up to old age, such for instance as the Veterans organization in which military ideas are kept alive.

One important group is the Labor Front which was created as a check on unionism. There is the huge Todt organization, a kind of land Seabee outfit which was created from groups of highway builders in order to complete the Westwall. Now it is a vital part of the army.

There is the huge People's Welfare agency which collects charities; three large civilian auxiliary air groups; the Nazi Transportation Corps, and many more, not to mention the host of services under National Socialist Womanhood.

It must be remembered that all of these organizations stoutly maintain two functions: first, indoctrination in the Nazi philosophy, or if the person is too old or too stubborn to bow to these perverted ideas, so to enchain him in discipline as to achieve the same result. The second function of the Nazi organizations is to prepare German man and woman power for the nearest thing to a total war effort achieved in history.

The effectiveness of this system of militarizing a nation undoubtedly was underestimated by the Allies. The facts concerning it were available. For example, an excellent compendium of the Nazi groups was published by the Infantry Journal in Washington called "Hitler's Second Army," for distribution to and study by the American armed forces. But it was simply impossible for the normal individual to grasp the degree to which the Nazis had perfected their plans and had, by indoctrination from childhood, actually turned human beings into efficient machines.

Herr Goebbels, father of lies, was not lying when he said recently that Germany had become "a warrior nation in the full sense of the word."

It takes a lot more than a telephone!

The instrument in the home is a very small part of the equipment needed to give telephone service. There must be a pair of wires leading from the house to the pole line, a pair of wires in the overhead cable, and another pair in the underground cable, switchboards and a vast amount of central office equipment.

When we cannot give you service it may be because of the shortage of one or all of these items. Of those persons waiting for service, only about one-third could be served if instruments were available. If you are waiting for home telephone service, we think we know how you feel. You would like it now. And we would like to install it for you now.

But as long as the needs of war have first claim on telephone facilities and until manufacture of equipment in adequate quantity is resumed, we cannot tell you when we will be able to serve you. Your order is important and we promise it will not be forgotten. It will be reviewed frequently and will be filled in its proper turn. That might be some time after final victory.

Service Award Mailed Chilton Farm Wives

Certificates bearing the seal of the United States and the title of "War Service Award" have just been mailed from the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, to a number of housewives in Chilton and Perry Counties who during the last four months have been keeping a Wartime Food Diary. This was announced today by Mrs. Lillie S. Stapp, local supervisor who is in charge of Census Bureau Special Surveys for Chilton and Perry counties.

The certificate, bearing the signature of Chester Bowles, administrator of the Office of Price Administration, for which the Wartime Food Diary program is conducted by the Census Bureau, is filled in with the name of the housewife and reads:

"In sincere appreciation for the devotion to our country's need in time of great national peril; for the voluntary service in the successful operation of food rationing this award is given."

The Wartime Food Diary program is now entering its fourth four-month period of operation with a new panel of participating housewives. A selected group of housewives in 68 areas throughout the United States will keep a record of the family's food purchases for home use, amount and kind, over a four-months period. On the basis of information gathered in this survey, it is possible for the Office of Price Administration to adjust rationing in the light of conditions found in the various areas.

At the end of a four-months period the housewives are relieved of this duty and 2,000 more are selected. As each group is released its participants will be presented with the War Service Award, distributed by the Census Bureau for the Office of Price Administration.

The group recently released is the third such group that has completed a four-month's record.

Income Tax Notice

A Deputy Collector from the Internal Revenue Department will be at the Post Office, Clanton, February 5, 6, 7 and 8, to assist taxpayers in making out their income tax returns. Taxpayers requesting assistance of a Deputy Collector in preparation of returns must be able to readily furnish the following information:

1. A record of all income received in 1944.

2. An itemized statement of all deductions they wish to claim on the return, such as taxes, interest, contributions, business expense, cost of goods sold, etc.

3. The total amount of tax withheld by all employers during 1944, together with Form W-2 furnished by each employer.

4. The amount of tax paid on estimated income tax for 1944 as reflected by declarations of such income filed on Form 1040-ES.

5. A copy of the 1943 return if depreciated was claimed on such return.

Quick Freeze Plant Burns At Holtville

Formby Hall, a large frame building which housed several outstanding community service plants at Holtville High School were completely destroyed by fire Saturday night.

Loss was estimated at $100.000.

A great deal of meat in the quick freeze locker plant was destroyed, as well as the hatchery, a cannery, dehydration plant, and printing office which included a $3.500 Linotype machine.

It is reported the fire started when C. J. Brown, refrigeration plant superintendent was laying a final coat of asphalt in a quick-freeze plant addition under construction.

John M. Parrish Prominent Citizen Died Monday

John M. Parrish, age 61, prominent citizen and educator of Chilton County, died in a Birmingham hospital on Monday, January 29th.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30, at the Concord Church, conducted by Rev. S. J. Ezell, assisted by Revs. Roswell Owens, G. G. Williams and R. W. Stuckey. Pallbearers were: C. E. Stapp, Joe Calloway, Douglas Robinson, Clarence Baker, D. P. Culp and Mr. Pruitt. J. Mell Martin & Sons in charge.

He is survived by two sons, John R., County Agent of Randolph County, and Lt.-Col. Nelson Parrish of U. S. Army, New York, N. Y.; two brothers, Dr. W. L. Parrish of Clanton, and J. S. of Verbena.

Prof. Parrish had been identified with educational, religious and agricultural activities of Chilton County for almost forty years.

Boys and Girls 4-H Fat Stock Show To Be Held May 3rd.

This year Chilton County 4-H Club boys and girls are again feeding out a group of beef steers for local and sectional shows. The group of steers now being fed out promises to be among, if not the best, the county has ever had.

These animals will be shown within the county for the purpose of displaying the results of good breeding, care and management. The probably date of the county 4-H Club Show will be May 3, as the Birmingham 4-H Fat Stock Show will be May 4-5. At this time Club members who have show animals will carry them to Birmingham where they will be judged and sold.

We are interested in having as many locally grown steers or heifers entered in this project as possible. Anyone having a good beef bred steer or heifer on hand ranging in weight from 350 to 700 pounds should let some 4-H Club boy or girl or an FFA member in the family or closely related to the farm feed this animal. If an animal were put on feed now there would be a 105-day feeding period before the Birmingham show.

A valuable lesson is to be gained by any boy or girl who undertakes a project of this nature in that valuable experience is to be gotten in feeding and management along with the creation of a love for quality cattle. The Local Show creates an interest in the production of better beef cattle and will result in animals of better quality being produced by Chilton County farmers. The ultimate and more important result of such steps will be higher farm incomes for Chilton County farmers.

Another attractive feature of this project is the fact that there is no ceiling price on animals that are sold at the show by Club boys and girls. Because the prevailing ceiling price does not govern the selling price of the Club animals it is possible for a club or girl to realize a greater profit from the animal than if it were sold on one of the local markets.

Everyone owning one or more beef bred animals suitable for feeding should give this project serious consideration and help make this spring's Chilton County 4-H Club Fat Stock Show the best show in this area of the state. Contact the County Agent's Office at your earliest convenience if you have an animal you would like to put on feed and we will be glad to help you work out a desirable feeding ration from the feeds that you have on hand. Club members will be given all possible assistance in finishing and fitting their animals for the show.

To give a soldier another good steak and a club member a valuable lesson in cattle production and a chance to make a profit, let's feed one out.

Chilton High To Be Presented At Alabama College February 2-3

Montevallo, Ala. — Chilton County High School will be represented by a group of students at the fourth annual state-wide Drama Festival at Alabama College, February 2 and 3, according to Dr. Walter H. Trumbauer, professor of Dramatic Literature and director of the College Theatre. The high schools selected for this honor were determined on a basis of leadership, on a standard of excellence applied to the entire dramatic work of the school during the past three years, regardless of the size of the school. Invitations to attend have been extended to one high school from each Congressional District.

Those attending from here were: Miss Elizabeth Barton, English teacher; Norma Davenport, Bernice Foshee, Melba Studdard, Emma Frank McRae, Owen Lawrence, John Morgan Foshee, Andrew Hickman and Thomar Bean.

This festival has for its purpose the promotion of drama in all its phases through a cooperative program among the high schools of the state and it is unique in Alabama.

Each visiting group will make some contribution to the festival, such as playes and original scripts. Following the presentation of the plays there will be discussions for constructive criticism. This year as an added feature Alabama College invites the groups to attend the showing of Walt Disney's famous technicolor film, "Fantasia."

Thorsby Ladies Guild Met Thursday

The Ladies Guild met on Thursday in the dining room of Thorsby Institute. Interesting reports were given of the work carried on during the past year. Interior painting was done in a cottage on the hill. The "White Elephant Sale" in November brought in $80 and raised the yearly total above $200.

The Guild elected officers for the coming year: Mrs. C. M. Williams, president; Mrs James Bosworth, vice-president; Mrs Marie Regan, Treas.; Mrs A. M. Laurell, Secretary.

Delightful refreshments were served. The Guild provides social and educational activities for its sixty members while rendering other services for the community.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

This Sunday, the first in February, will be Go-To-Church day again. We are making an extra effort to bring in members and friends who need transportation. It will add to our joy if we will also encourage absent members to make this a home coming day. There will be special features in the Worship Service. "My Father is still at work, and I work too" will be the sermon text.

Following the young peoples' program at 6:30 there will be another Sunday evening group service. Every one in the congregation will be invited to contribute material for the consideration of "Traders in Foreign Lands."

The regular monthly church supper will be held in the fellowship room on Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. Some recreational features will be tested.

Early Diagnosis of Cancer Is Plea

(From Birham Age-Herald)

The need for early diagnosis of cancer was sounded by physicians and health department representatives at an organizational meeting of the Jefferson County division of the field army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer Tuesday at the Tutwiler Hotel.

Dr. Ralph Baker, pathologist at the University of Alabama medical school, discussed the desirability of a diagnostic clinic in Alabama. Dr. Lee Turlington, chairman of the state executive committee of the field army, emphasizes the need for early diagnosis in controlling cancer.

Efforts of the Jefferson County Health Department to control cancer were reviewed by Dr. George A. Denton, city county health officer.

Mrs. Jean T. Batten, [illegible] Jefferson County Division presided at the meeting and Mrs. Ray Meade, State commander, made a short talk.

Attending the meeting were representatives of city and county Councils of Parents and Teachers, the American Association of University Women, Third District, Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs; Medical Auxiliary, Junior League, Birmingham Council of Church Women, Ensley Council of Clubs, Tarrant Health Council, North Alabama Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers and other groups.

Clanton Grammar School Leads In Polio Contributions

The children of the Clanton Grammar School led the county Wednesday in their contribution of $90.60. to the Infantile Paralysis Drive, which they turned in to Mrs. W. H. Klinner, County Chairman. According to Mrs. Klinner, this was the largest single contribution received to date and she was high in her praise of the little fellows.

Mrs. Warr's room sponsored the drive at the Grammar School, preparing jars with pictures of Polio victims pasted to the sides, and passing them from room to room.

Complete returns of the drive have not been received but Mrs. Klinner announced today that they would be published in next week's issue of the News.

All Night Prayer Meeting At Courthouse Feb. 3rd.

There will be an all-night prayer meeting at the courthouse in Clanton, February 3rd, for [illegible] that are in service, and for a world-wide revival.

The Christian people of Clanton invite all faiths from churches in and out of town, or anywhere to come, and be in this meeting. May we who call ourselves Christians forget denominations and come together and pray for lost souls, and for God's help in this awful conflict.

We thank every pastor in Clanton for their cooperation in this venture and ask every [illegible] to pray that [illegible] 3rd and help Judge Smith and Judge Nivens for their kindness.

Seventh-Day Adventist Aid Russian War Relief

The Clanton Seventh-Day Adventist church members are making a Russian War Relief Kits. Mrs. [illegible] Wilson, Dorcas Society leader reported today.

It is hoped, she said, that [illegible] soon be on their way, with [illegible] of thousands of others sent by other groups, to bring cheer to some of the thirty-eight million Russians driven from their homes by war.

In providing these "Happiness kits" the members here are joining in an organized movement participated in by all of the Seventh-day Adventist churches in eight southern states, Mrs Wilson explained. This is sponsored by the Southern Union Conference executive committee, with offices at Atlanta, Ga., representing more than 1325 churches in the territory. Each has received a special bulletin of information, with full instructions in packing, marking, and shipping the kits.

Among the millions of those needing help, it is estimated that there are 120.000 Russians Seventh-day Adventists, the bulletin says.

Emergency Crop And Feed Loan

Mr. John K. Spivey, Field Supervisor for the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office, stated that farmers of Chilton County are now applying for loans to finance the production of their 1945 crops. Applications for loans are now being written in the County Agent's Office at Clanton, Alabama. He stated that, in addition to financing the production of regular crops such as cotton and corn, loans were also being made for the production of those crops vitally needed this year in the War Effort. Plans for 1945 call for increased production of food crops. The need for [illegible] necessary for their production [illegible] special consideration in the view that credit will be extended, where needed, so that every [illegible] an opportunity to [illegible] contribution to [illegible] Production Program.

Emergency Crop and Feed Loans are available to farmers, either owners, [illegible], who own or can make arrangements for land to farm, who [illegible] have the use of necessary livestock and equipment with which to farm, and who can give as security a first lien on the crops to be financed. Loans are also available for the purpose or production of feed for livestock to be fed for the market, or for breeding animals with the increase to be marketed and, as security, a first lien is required on such livestock. These loans will be made to farmers whose cash requirements are relatively small and who are unable to obtain from other sources, including local banks and Production Credit Associations, loans in an amount sufficient to meet their needs. Mr. Spivey emphasized that these loans are not restricted to selected applicants but are available to all farmers who can establish eligibility, according to the terms of the loan regulations and authorizing act.

Farmers interested in the above described loan facilities will find it most convenient to make applications each Friday while Mr Spivey is interviewing applicants in Chilton County.

"The Bargain Bride"

On Tuesday night, February 6th at eight o'clock, at Maplesville School, Bobby Graham, as Jimmy Smith, will take unto himself a bride—a husky red head, with all the gentleness of a football player. All this is because his true fiancee, Wendy Hill (Mattie Delene Dennis) refuses to marry him under an assumed name.

His roommate, Dexter Dormer (Kenneth McGee) is engaged to Cissie Trent (Frances Chambers) but allows himself to become entangled with his giggling landlady, Mrs. Florabelle Fizby (Lucile Bearden) and a Swedish Maid, Minnie Peterson (Hilda Ruth Carter).

Aunt Oma Ornsby (Louise Walker) arrives just at the wrong time and meets her sworn enemy, Tucker Trent (Fred Gandy).

Miss Thompkins (Grace Harris) and Mrs James Smith (Janie Ruth Lewis) add to the confusion of the plot.

All through the plot, Hosanna Bugg (Majorie Burnette) demands hush money to buy various articles for her "torso" which she is collecting in anticipation of her marriage to the colored man of her choice.

The Sr. II Class invites the public to see this play. A small admission will be charged.

Hanging clothes to dry immediately after they are starched will prevent mold.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Germans Fall Back Behind Oder River as Red Tide Rolls On; Act for More Essential Apparel

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Driving southward to Manila, Yank infantrymen trod gingerly over crude irrigated landscape on Luzon.

EUROPE:
Red Tide

Long in the making, when Germany first envisioned the necessity of fighting by herself, the Reich's Oder river line was put to its first real test as Marshal Konev's 1st Ukraine army rolled to its ramparts on a broad front in Silesia, the "little Ruhr" of the east.

Premier Stalin

As Konev's forces moved on the Oder line, Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army pushed on the rich agricultural province of Pomerania farther to the north, while Marshal Rokossovsky's 2nd and General Cherniakovsky's 3rd White Russian armies were snapping their huge pincer on East Prussia, traditional home of the Junkers.

In sweeping on Silesia, the Russians threatened Germany's second great industrial belt, rich in mineral resources and once distantly removed from heavy Allied bombardment. As the Red tide rolled on, Nazi commentators frankly admitted that loss of Silesia would seriously impair their ability to carry on the war, and it was here that the enemy offered some of his first sizable resistance.

While Premier Stalin announced the fall of one stronghold after another, and declared that the great Russian winter offensive had licked up the cream of the German army, Nazi circles began to take a calmer view of the situation after their first frantic reaction, claiming that effective countermeasures could be made only in time because of the gigantic scope of the attack.

Renew Threat

As the last remnants of the German forces which punched deep into Belgium streamed back into the Siegfried Line under a hail of Allied aerial fire, British forces to the north maintained their heavy pressure against the Roer river line guarding the plain to Cologne.

With their Belgium bubble burst, the Germans stepped up the intensity of their nuisance attack in Alsace, where the U. S. 7th army, forced to bear the full weight of the Nazi pressure in this area following the retirement of units to meet the enemy's earlier threat in the north, fought off savage tank-led attacks on a broad front.

Temporarily relieved by Von Rundstedt's daring thrust into Belgium, Germany's vital Rhineland again was seriously endangered by the British operations above Aachen, and the U. S. 1st and 3rd armies' regaining of the initiative.

Terms for Hungary

Return of territory to Czechoslovakia, Romania and Yugoslavia, payment of $300,000,000 in reparations and provision of at least eight infantry divisions to help fight Germany marked the Allies' armistice terms to Hungary accepted in Moscow.

No sooner had Hungary returned Ruthenia to Czechoslovakia than the latter ceded the mountainous province to Russia, which sought it as a natural defense barrier to the newly enlarged Soviet Ukraine.

Payment of the $300,000,000 in reparations will be made in goods over a six-year period, it was revealed, with Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia sharing in $100,000,000.

DROUTH

With their fields and pastures scorched, drouths were said to have played havoc with Australia and Argentina's field crops, and, in the case of the former, taken a heavy toll of stock.

From a normal 156,000,000 bushels of wheat, Australia's production was estimated to have dropped to a mere 50,000,000 bushels, while 2,000,000 of 137,000,000 sheep and thousands of head of cattle and were said to have been lost.

Only a carryover of 75,000,000 bushels of wheat from the previous year curbed the stock fatalities and enabled the country to meet its domestic and foreign commitments.

In Argentina the prolonged drouth and excessive heat is seriously endangering field crops, with prospects for corn 80 per cent below last year's harvest and for wheat down 50 per cent. Flax and rye production also is expected to suffer heavily.

Seared pastures and small forage reserves cloud the country's stock situation.

PACIFIC:
Yanks Wary

Virtually without opposition during the earlier stages of their drive down the broad plains to Manila on Luzon, General MacArthur's all-conquering American forces began to run into stiffer opposition as their drive fully developed.

Even so, enemy opposition was chiefly concentrated far behind on the Yanks' left flank, where General MacArthur was forced to bring up strong artillery batteries to pound Japs entrenched in the mountainous terrain, guarding the approaches to the northeastern end of the island.

Although the speed of their advance southward waited only on the movement of their supply columns, the Yanks pushed forward warily, cognizant that the enemy command had not yet committed the major portion of his forces to the fight. As they swept on, however, the Yanks seized a half dozen air strips for use of the numerically superior U. S. air forces.

CLOTHING:
Plan Controls

Seeking to increase the output of essential low and medium priced clothing, and also check the rising cost of apparel, the government mapped a double-edged program.

First, the War Production board planned to give priority preferment for fabrics to manufacturers of work clothing, children's apparel and underwear, with the government controlling quality to assure maximum serviceability of the garments and limiting the trimmings.

Second, the Office of Price Administration, describing rising clothing costs as the greatest single threat to the anti-inflation program, planned to fix maximum prices at the average level of the first half of 1943, a reduction of about 6 or 7 per cent.

Although most so-called luxury items will disappear from the market under the new regulations, WPB said, better grade clothing will continue to be available, and the overall supply should remain about the same.

CABINET SHIFT:
Wallace Named

With business generally looking askance at ex-Vice Pres. Henry A. Wallace's appointment as secretary of commerce, the senate sought to soften the opposition to the selection by considering the transfer of the huge lending functions from the department to a federal loan agency.

Such a move would serve to quiet apprehensions over Wallace's experience in the handling of huge sums, and the concern that he might use the department's tremendous resources for the active entrance of government in business to provide postwar employment. On being apprized of his appointment, Wallace declared: "The department of commerce and federal loan agency provide an opportunity . . . for intelligent work in behalf of the producing and consuming public. Roughly, the job is to promote a maximum of national employment by private business. Government must accept the duty of seeing that all men in health have jobs. . . ."

Wallace's appointment was not made smoother by the displacement of incumbent Sec. Jesse Jones, the big Texas business mogul who handled the multi-billion dollar lending activities of the Reconstruction Finance corporation with small loss even before the RFC was made part of the department of commerce in 1942.

POLITICS:
Party Plans

Girding for the 1946 congressional and 1948 presidential elections, the Republican national committee, meeting in Indianapolis, Ind., adopted a program looking toward the active revitalization of the party.

Proposed by Chairman Herbert Brownell, who was reelected to the position, the program calls for the establishment of a full time organization with an enlarged staff, which, in addition to maintaining contact with state units, would work closely with GOP representatives and senators and help them prepare legislation.

Originally a Dewey man, Brownell faced some opposition to his reelection as chairman chiefly because of discontent with the last campaign and the feeling that his retention might strengthen the New York governor's position in 1948, but he set fears at rest by declaring that he would work for no man's candidacy but would merely interest himself in operating the party machinery.

On the other side of the fence, the Democratic national committee, with $400,000 in the kitty, revealed plans to have each state raise a certain quota of money to help defray the expenses of the party's between-election publicity and educational drives.

At the same time, Chairman Hannegan announced that the Jefferson Day birthday banquets to be held April 13 would replace the former Jackson Day dinners for the raising of funds for future election campaigns.

CANNED VEGETABLES:
Guard Supplies

Because uncontrolled demand would have resulted in the disappearance of short stocks of canned vegetables three to five months before the new pack, rationing of these items was restored in December, it was revealed.

Originally, OPA had removed canned vegetables from rationing in September because of the indication of an early end to the European war and OPA's wish to avoid the accumulation of a surplus of stocks.

At the time rationing was restored, it was said, only 31 per cent of the year's supply of peas remained for distribution in the next eight months; 60 per cent of the year's supply of corn for ten months, and 46 per cent of the eight months' supply of snap beans for eight months.

It was a burdened but firm Franklin D. Roosevelt, who, laying his left hand upon an old family bible and raising his right, was sworn in to a fourth term as President of the United States on the south portico of the White House, as 7,000 selected guests stood in the chill air to witness the event.

In the briefest of his four inaugural addresses, the President called for total victory, then asked for perseverance in the achievement of a just peace. Said he:

"We shall strive for perfection. We shall not achieve it immediately—but we shall strive. We may make mistakes—but they must never be mistakes which result from faintness of heart or abandonment of moral principle. . . ."

WAR PRODUCTION:
Further Boosts

Reflecting the government's intensive efforts to speed up output, production of critical war material showed a sharp increase in the last half of 1944, ranging from 20 per cent for tires and trucks to over 200 per cent for rockets.

Despite the substantial boosts, however, plans call for even greater production in succeeding months, with further increases for rockets, tires and trucks, planes, light artillery field pieces and batteries.

In addition to these items, it was revealed, the government's program calls for greater output of artillery ammunition, navy high capacity ammunition, cotton duck, communications wire and tanks.

AUSSIES:
Mop-Up

To Australia's half-million men between 18 and 35, who have volunteered for overseas service, has fallen the task of cleaning out the Jap pockets of resistance in the South Pacific, left far behind the front lines by General MacArthur's leapfrogging tactics.

Left to wither away, 100,000 Japs, supplied by submarine, have managed to maintain their positions in a great arc extending from the Solomons to New Guinea.

By planting troops behind these Jap garrisons to coop them up while superior U. S. aerial and naval forces reduced their communications to a minimum, General MacArthur avoided the necessity of committing large units in long and costly all-out battle to storm them one by one, thus delaying his whole offensive schedule.

RAIL TRAFFIC

Railroads in 1944 handled the greatest volume of freight traffic, measured in ton-miles of revenue freight, for any year on record. Total traffic amounted to approximately 737,000,000,000 revenue ton-miles, according to preliminary estimates based on reports from Class I railroads, 1.4 per cent above the previous record.

The volume of freight traffic carried by the railroads in 1944 was an increase of 121 per cent compared with 1939.

Mounting Battle Tempo Calls for More Material

Big Problem Is to Route Manpower Into Critical Work; Labor Needs Vary Throughout Different Areas.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WNU Service, Union Trust Building
Washington, D. C.

What is wrong with the American war effort on the home front?

Why all this excitement over a new draft of manpower?

Didn't War Mobilizer Byrnes say that our war production almost equalled the production of the entire world?

These questions are being asked in many minds. I have asked them of the men whose job it is to get things done in Washington, and I want to try to put their answers before you.

Let me quote one sentence spoken by War Mobilizer Byrnes himself:

"Critical production no longer feeds pipe-lines or goes into strategic reserves—it is going right into battle."

If we compare "critical production" with fighting units, perhaps the recent German counter-offensive will help us see the picture.

When Von Rundstedt's drive started, men and tanks and guns and trucks, "critical production" in other words, all had to be poured into actual battle. The result was that there were just not enough of them in the right place at the right time and our line crumbled. There were no immediate reserves to throw in and bolster the defense. Later on, when the veterans from the Third army and the First army and the British troops arrived, the tide was turned. They represented the reserves of "critical production" which should have been there all the time.

For many months on that particular front only the men in the front lines were needed. There were enough men there to take care of the normal enemy opposing them. It was a minimum force without enough reserve to take care of maximum need and they were thrown back.

That is the situation in war production today. Certain critical supplies (airplanes, tanks, other vehicles and their accessories, certain types of ordnance, certain types of ammunition) are being used so fast in battle that if an extra strain developed at a certain point there would not be any reserve to call upon.

Changing Conditions Alter Planning

Why are these things lacking? Why didn't we pile them up, as we do other things, until we had enough to take care of an emergency? Chiefly, because their greatest need developed after we started our war programs. Reserves for the future can only be based on present information or estimates based on previous knowledge, or lucky guessing.

When the war began nobody, not even the Japs who used amphibious warfare in the early stages to the best advantage, had any idea of the type and number of landing-craft, to say nothing of the technique of operating them, which are used in the latest Allied operations. The contrast between the Japanese landing in Lingayen bay and the American landing three years later in the same place is astounding.

Byrnes used as examples of other "unpredictables," inventions and improvements over old models, jet planes, new types of radar and the like.

Today, 55 per cent of our war production does not need to rise. Some of it is properly declining.

But there are other parts of the program which are lagging that should mount, because they are "critical production." Of course, some plants making such goods are temporarily closed while re-tooling for new models. Others are under construction. But many plants lack nothing except manpower, those, for example, making certain types of planes and tanks and ships. Tires are being ground to pieces by shell splinters in the mud of Luxembourg and Belgium. Tanks are rolling from New Guinea to the Philippines to the Rhine, and bigger and better ones are demanded. There is a constant need for all kinds of ammunition, but there is critical need for certain types of ammunition, both heavy and light.

And so we come to the main problem which is really the only problem today—manpower. We have the raw material and will have the manufacturing facilities in time.

Undersecretary of War Patterson told the house military affairs committee that in the first six months of 1945, 700,000 men would be needed for war production and industry necessary to the war effort.

I have talked with the War Manpower commission experts and they break down those figures something like this:

One hundred and fifty thousand men needed immediately for critical war production.

One hundred and fifty thousand more for other war production to take care of the normal turn-over, expected replacements, etc. The remaining 400,000 must be retained in civilian production and services which have to be continued in order to maintain the total war effort.

The situation is summed up in general terms this way: The manpower mobilization problem is not as large as it was in 1942 and 1943 but it is more acute in certain lines. Two things contribute to making it more acute. One is the fact that we haven't the pool of either civilian production or the unemployed from which to draw as we had at the start. Second, because the needs are "critical" (battle needs) they must be satisfied immediately or the actual front-line activities may be immediately affected.

One thing which must be considered is the geographical shift of the American labor force, a point which affects the general situation for it involves moving a worker from place to place. And in the present need, although the West coast (where labor is concentrated) is still the most critical area, the building of new factories to meet new needs and the change in the type of needs from one established factory in one place to one in another place involves the question of suasion or force on the worker.

For instance, there is a great need in Utah and Wyoming for workers in coal mines. The scattered foundry sections from Michigan and Ohio, through Pennsylvania and New York to New England are critical areas. Even plane production, concentrated in the West, has its problems, for, although some airplane factories on the Pacific coast have closed down, many of the new factories for the flying fortresses and other new models are in areas other than the West coast.

We have the man and womanpower in the nation to take care of the need. It is a question of getting the right man in the right place.

Overoptimism Causes Letdown

There are several reasons why the right man (and woman) is not in the right place now. One is due to an error in judgment which may, or may not, be blameworthy. Germany's "come-back" power, for which I attempted to set forth certain reasons in two preceding columns, was underestimated.

This caused a shortage in certain types of weapons. Superabundance in others. The latter put men out of work and caused them to seek non-war jobs. We had counted on a more mobile type of warfare. We did not think we needed the heavy artillery to blast Germany out of powerful defenses. We counted too heavily on enemy vulnerability to the bombing of German cities. That was both a psychological and strategical error.

Underestimating the length of the European war also had a bad psychological effect. It caused many workers to quit war work for what they thought would be more permanent employment. It caused great pressure on Washington to begin reconversion, as War Mobilizer Byrnes admits was wrong. He said: ". . . we could not do two things at once . . . could not pursue an all-out war production effort while simultaneously releasing materials, facilities and manpower for civilian production."

The man and his job were separated, too, by the improvement of models and creation of new equipment. No one can be blamed for this. But frequently, as I have shown, it tended to place the job and the man miles apart.

Household Hints

With bottle brushes scarce, use waxed paper from bread to scour bottles. It does the job well.

If an enamel pan boils dry, do not plunge it from the hot range into cold water. Let it cool first, then soak before washing.

When dyeing wearing apparel it is a good idea to run a few lengths of thread through an inside seam. When finished, these threads may be removed to furnish an exact match if repairs are needed.

Corduroy needs no ironing. Gently press out the water with towels, but don't wring or twist. Pin up skirt or pants by waistband. Brush against nap when dry.

A small vegetable brush is an effective tool when using paint and varnish remover, especially on carved surfaces.

When discarding worn bath towels, save the best parts and use for making washcloths or bath mitts.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field, Texas, and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out and is told he is now too old for combat flying. After appealing to several Generals, Scott is finally offered an opportunity to get into the fight. He flies a bomber to India, but on arrival is made a ferry pilot, but this does not suit him. He visits Gen. Chennault, gets a Kittyhawk and soon is flying the skies over Burma, where he becomes known as the "one man air force." Later, he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group, but he still keeps on knocking down Jap planes.

CHAPTER XXVII

Another theory was that the realization that you had strafed enemy ground troops, shot down Japanese pilots, strafed troops getting out of an enemy transport, or even killed Japanese satellites, would come back to you at night, and you'd wake up in horror at having "blood on your hands." To that I say "Nuts."

Later, when the newness of combat had worn off, I used to watch a Japanese pilot come towards me on a head-on run, picking me out, I guess, because I was leading the Group. I'd get my sights on him and yell, perhaps a bit hysterically, "You pour sucker, with my six Fifties that out-range your short-range little cannons that jam lots of times, I'm going to blow you apart before you get close enough to hit me!" Overconfidence, perhaps, for I didn't get every one who came at me, and I took lots of hits in my own ship—even had to dive away sometimes when two came on me at once. But I'm still here, and from thirteen to twenty-two Jap pilots who fought against me are dead.

You know that you have everything to live for, and that the Jap has everything to die for. That's his only hope of reaching the heaven that we already have.

Yes, they are suicide pilots; at times they will try to ram your plane, or will dive their ships into our carriers. I've seen a Japanese dive low over Hengyang and circle while they shot at him with everything on the field and we shot at him with every ship above the field. But he flew his ship in a slow circle, as if he were blinded and couldn't see, or were only partly conscious. Then, with a half roll at barely three hundred feet, he dove his plane into the only building on the field—our thatched-roof alert shack, which burned with the Jap in his ship. When the wreckage had cooled enough we finally pulled his charred body out—and by his side was his Samurai sword, and through his body the doctor found one lone bullet-hole, severing his spinal cord near the small of the back. He had been able to move his hands but not his feet. But with his last consciousness he had picked out one more object on our field to destroy for the gods of the Shinto Shrine.

But they have fear too. Don't think they're supermen, for I assure you they're not. They're little, warped - brain savage animals with the complex of suppression—but they have fear, like any one else. Their fear is worse, for there's that phobia of having nothing to live for—the inferiority-complex they try to overcome.

I once saw that fear on the face of a Japanese pilot when he knew he was going to die, and it did me lots of good. I told of it many times to youngsters in my Group and it always made them feel better to know that the Japs were afraid when they met them — probably more afraid than we were. Oh, the Jap is a wonderful pilot when he meets no or little opposition. They come in over undefended Chinese cities and long and well and zoom, shooting at the helpless pedestrians while arrogantly flying inverted on their backs. But when they meet good American fighters, with pilots who know how to fight them, they are the most anxious people I've ever met to leave our territory and go "hell for leather" towards Japan.

One day I flew up very close to a lone Jap pilot during a fight near Kweilin. I placed my sights right where his wing joined the fuselage of the I-97-2 and steadily squeezed a burst from two hundred yards, holding the trigger down while I moved into closer range. Then I swerved out from behind the enemy ship, expecting it to stream fire and perhaps explode. I had seen pieces come off, and I had seen the canopy glass turn a fine, shining powder that sparkled in the slipstream as the ship nosed almost straight up. But when it didn't burn, I skidded back across its tail, first with a look to my rear quarter.

I saw into the cockpit. The canopy had been shot away and I could see the Jap's face—and on it was a look of terror such as I had never seen before. The realization went through me with such force that as I nosed down to fire again I nearly cut the tail from the Jap fighter with my prop. Then I savagely held a long burst from less than fifty yards while I shot the ship to pieces. Even after the enemy plane had fallen and I had flown through the debris, I found that I was continuing to fire at the empty heavens, for I had learned to hate also.

No, the Jap is far from a superman. But we must never again belittle the fanaticism of the Japanese. They are as dangerous as mad dogs. They think they will win—and they can if we continue to underestimate them.

Strange things happen in the air, strange as the fiction of the ages. Six of us shot into a ship that detached itself from one of the circling Japanese "circuses" we encountered one day East of Hengyang. When you meet the Jap in his larger-numbered formation, he at once goes into the circling technique that Baron von Richthofen made famous in the last war. This "circus" gradually moves in on or away from their objective as a defensive maneuver, for in it the ship behind protects the tail of the one in front. Our tactics were to dive through the "squirrel cage" and get snap shots at as many ships as we could, but keep our speed to prevent their getting on our tails.

It was in one of these attacks that this lone Jap Zero left the protection of his other ships and began to do aerobatics—sloppy loops, wingovers, stalls, and then another loop. Thinking it was a trick, we were wary; but after two of our pilots had made passes on it, two more of us went down towards it. As I kept getting closer and closer to the enemy plane I could see that the pilot was evidently hurt, but when I crossed the top of the strange-acting plane I saw that he was leaning forward over the stick control, obviously dead.

As the speed of the dive would build up pressures on the tail surfaces, the nose would rise, for a Jap ship is rigged that way. As the ship climbed more steeply, the pilot's upper body swung to the back of the seat in the normal position and the plane made a sloppy loop.

For several minutes we watched the pilotless Zero in fascination. From 16,000 feet a ship that is shot down can dive into the ground in a few seconds—it can even spin in from an explosion in a little longer than that; but we watched this plane for twice the time that it would normally have taken. It worked closer and closer to the ground over the same area, as it lost altitude gradually in the maneuvers. Then, after the longest wait that I can remember having gone through in the air, in one of its dives from a loop it struck the hills below and burned. We could have burned it with a long burst many times during the minutes of our watching, but I imagine we were all spellbound at the spectacle.

No one spoke for several minutes as we turned back to Hengyang. Then some call over the radio broke the spell, and we just marked the Jap off as another confirmed Zero—another "good" Jap.

Over in Yunnan we fought the Japs a few times in Burma and had the sadness of another military funeral. Those moments in the Buddhist burial grounds were the hardest in China. As the Chaplain read the prayer and the flag-draped casket was lowered into the red earth of Yunnan, a small formation, with slow-turning engines that gave forth a muffled sound, would fly over the grave. There would be one vacant niche in the evenly spaced fighters, in honor of the brother airman who would fly no more.

After eight months in combat I was sent with five other pilots to ferry six new P-40K's over from the air base at Karachi. During our wait for the planes to be ready for combat, we were permitted to go to Bombay for the detached service. There, in this splendor of the Hotel Taj Mahal, we had a glorious time. In fact, it became very hard to realize that a war was going on over in Burma and China, as we looked at the night clubs from Malabar Hill and from inside them too, at the horse-races for the Aga Khan's Purse—and at all the things that we had forgotten to remember.

The return across India was a happy one, for we were ferrying new and higher-powered ships back to the war, and all of us were eager to try them out in combat. From Assam we took the old familiar trail that I used to fly with the transports, and it felt especially good to look around and see those friendly looking P-40's along with me over the Burma Road where I had, in earlier months, been compelled to fly alone. The shark-mouths had not yet been painted on, but the silhouettes of the new fighters looked friendly nevertheless.

A fast trip over the five hundred miles from Assam is like this:

We're off from our base and heading 118 degrees across the twelve-thousand-foot Naga Hills to the first check-point, where the upper fork of the Chindwin forms the likeness of a shamrock. Up to our left now, from the altitude of eighteen thousand that we've attained so effortlessly with the new ships, can be seen the higher snow-capped peaks of Tibet and Chinese Turkestan. Down below us the valley of the Irrawaddy is low and green, but forbidding nonetheless. Ahead, as we cross the "Y" in the little known "triangle of the Irrawaddy," we see the real hills of the "hump" begin to rise. Snow-capped peaks everywhere. Our map reads that our highest peak is going to be 15,800 feet; yet we well know from experience that we've tried it many times and we need to be very sure that we are at 18,000 to clear the mountains from the Irrawaddy to Tali Lake.

Below us are the villages of the Miaows. We climb to 25,000 feet to test the "super-up" ships, and a smile comes to our faces under the oxygen masks—for this is going to surprise the Jap. We're going over the Mekong now, and from the time that has elapsed we've certainly picked up a tail wind—must be making over three hundred. The gorge of the Mekong runs like a gash in the sinister country of Burma to the South, and we know it goes on and on towards Saigon and the sea.

It's barely twenty miles to the Salween, and we make it so quickly that we begin to doubt that the other river had been the Mekong. Our ground speed is well over three hundred as we see Lake Tali and start the down-hill run to Kunming. Now we catch the first glimpse of the Burma Road, North of Yunnanyi, and soon we see the small lake that is near our field at that town. The mountains to the North are very high, and we know they get higher and higher and stretch almost without break to the East and the Pacific. We see the hairpin turns of the Burma Road near Tsuyung, and know that we're nearly home from the Taj Mahal and India.

We dive over the field of our headquarters just one hour and twenty-five minutes from the time we took off from Assam, five hundred miles away. I can tell by the smiles on the faces of the other men in the flight that we're all thinking the same thing: We have bad medicine for the Jap packed into the increased horsepower of these new "Kays"—our Warhawks. They are the latest of the P-40 series, and coming to us this time of year we look upon them as Christmas presents from the States.

The P-40 was in production when the war began. Then the decks were definitely stacked against us, and everything was in favor of the enemy. During the first year of our war these ships produced as no other fighter plane did, for they were serving on every front. Any pilot who actually fought the Axis enemies in the P-40 Tomahawks, Kittyhawks, or Warhawks will tell you they are tough and dependable. They will dive with the best of projectiles—including a bomb. All of us hope that the best fighter plane has not been produced, but we know that America will develop it.

In the meantime, through those lean months when America had to fight on many fronts with so little, the glorious P-40 series paid off when the chips were down in a ratio of between twelve and fifteen to one—twelve to fifteen enemy ships for every one of ours lost.

Some day, when the war is over and our sturdy American engines driving great American ships have won victory with air power, I hope and pray—with all fighter pilots who have faced our enemies in aerial combat, from the hot sands of Libya to the cold tundra of the Aleutians, from the jungle heat of Guadalcanal to those torrential rains of the Burmese Monsoons—that some understanding group of citizens will go to Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. There, beside the statue that commemorates the first flight of the Wright Brothers, I hope that they will build a monument to the Curtiss P-40 with its Allison Engine.

And now, with a few minor battles in the air, we saw Christmas in China draw near, and I couldn't help wishing for fast action somewhere. After all, there's only one place a person wants to be at Christmas.

I took off from Kunming one day just before Christmas to inspect the warning net in western Yunnan. It didn't take long to find out that it was very inefficient near the Burma border, where a steady influx of fifth-columnists and Japanese money was filtering across the Salween. Even then I knew that instead of getting the Chinese officers who were in charge of the net to investigate, it would be much better to have a few engagements with the Jap over the failing net-area. There was no tonic like burning Jap planes over the country to improve the functioning of the air-raid warning net.

JESUS' CONCERN FOR ALL

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:1, 9-13, 18-26
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.—Matthew 7:12.

What is a man worth? Well, say we, that depends, and then we are prone to undervalue him. Jesus had and taught a high regard for the inherent value of man. He saw possibilities in all men. He had a love for them. He was concerned about their welfare, and they responded by an interest in Him.

Jesus showed by His dealings with men how wrong are most of the standards and attitudes of the world. With Him there were:

I. No Social Barrier (vv. 1, 9, 10). The caste system of some lands, dividing people into social strata which separate men and hinder fellowship, does not exist in our land. Yet, in practice, we have such levels which are a formidable barrier in the thinking of many (perhaps most) people.

Jesus knew nothing of social barriers. He ignored them and went straight to the one in need. In our lesson it was a man of position and wealth who was an outcast among his people because he was a hated gatherer of taxes for Rome.

Jesus saw in him a man of faith and a useful witness for Him. And He not only talked with him, but called him to be His disciple. Then He went further and, to the astonishment of His critics, went in to a great feast where many such men were gathered.

He ate with publicans and sinners, not because He approved of their manner of life, but because He wanted to change it as He changed them.

II. No Fear of Criticism (vv. 11-13). Many a kind and noble impulse has died a-borning because of the fear of criticism. "What will people say?" has kept many a Christian from speaking to some sinner about his (or her) soul.

"The world is too much with us—" and we all too often guide our lives and service by the possible reaction we may receive from those round about us. We did not learn such an attitude from Jesus.

His answer to His critics made it clear that there will be no self-righteous, "good enough" people in heaven. The Lord is not even calling them, so long as they trust in their own goodness. He came to seek and to save sinners (v. 13, and Luke 19:10).

We, too, may go forward without fear of our critics. That doesn't mean that we "don't care what people think" about us. We ought to care, but if their opinion is based on unbelief and self-righteousness, it should certainly not deter us from our all-important business of soul-winning.

III. No Limitation of Time and Place (vv. 18-22).

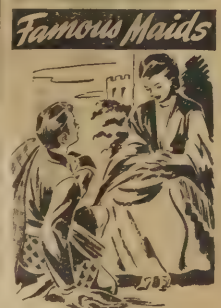
Often the help of man to those in need is circumscribed by so many regulations that those who most deserve help cannot get it. There are times and places for application forms, and tests must be completed, etc. Doubtless much of this is needed, but one wonders at times whether our charitable impulses have not disappeared under a mountain of red tape.

Be that as it may, how interesting it is to see that Jesus met the need when and where it appeared. He was already on one errand of mercy when the sick woman touched His robe. He was not too busy nor too preoccupied to stop and give her a word of help and comfort (v. 22).

Is there not a significant lesson here for us in the church? The need is reason enough for the extension of our help. The place is anywhere that men are in sadness or sorrow, and the hour is now—when they need our help.

IV. No Lack of Power (vv. 23-26). How often the human heart is prompted to help, and willing hands are ready to follow its promptings in loving action, yet we find that we cannot do anything. The need is too great for our meager resources. Our strength does not suffice. We have no money, or the situation is one beyond human help.

How wonderful it is then to remember the Lord Jesus! A touch on the hem of His garment in faith made the woman whole (v. 22). A word from Him brought the dead little girl out to face the scorners of Jesus, in the bloom of life and health.



Has He lost any of His great power? No. He is just "the same yesterday, and today, and forever" (Heb. 13:8). Why not trust Him?

Do you need help—spiritual, mental, physical? He is able. He has no prejudice regarding your social position. He will meet you right where you are, and right now. He is seeking the sick and the sinful—"the lost, the last, and the least." Look to Him by faith.

The great Physician now is near,
The sympathizing Jesus:
He speaks, the drooping heart to cheer;
O hear the voice of Jesus.

ABOUT TOWN

And strange it is, and true it is
That while men build with bricks of sin,
They rear heart-palaces of right,
That they may never wander in.

Clifford Jones asked us a question. Just a simple question and we are passing it on to you. In case you cannot answer it, you can think about it. Why isn't Chilton County getting some of these million dollar industries and billion dollar industries that are going up in other counties of the state and other states in the South? That's the $64 question. Can you answer it? Or, better still. Can't we do something about it?

The days are growing longer. Had you noticed? The sun sets about 20 minutes later now than it did three weeks ago. Of course we have plenty of bad weather ahead of us, no doubt, but then, when the days begin to get longer we start feeling that it won't be long now until we will wake up mornings with the birds singing, the buds bursting and the flowers blooming -- Spring as only you will find it one place on earth -- Chilton County Alabama.

Bet you didn't know that there were 7,759 babies born in Alabama in 1944 to wives of service men. All had free hospitilization, free doctors care and free nursing care. That's a service furnished by the government to soldier's wives. That's just five times as many as were taken care of through this service in 1943.

Speaking of babies reminds us that there is a sort of campaign going over the state urging folks to try to make it easier on the Doctors that we have left. Those who are young and have been left us, are working themselves to death and those who ordinarily should have retired just can't keep up the pace and retain their shortage of Doctors in every County good health. The Army has left a of the State. Make it a rule never to call your Doctor to come to you when you can go to his office. Never call him unless you need him. By cooperation of his patients he can serve all better with less strain on his nerves and body. And another thought, try paying your Doctor promptly when your account is due. That would make him very happy -- if he didn't drop dead.

Inspector: "Don't you know you can't sell life insurance without a license"?

Salesman: "I knew I wasn't selling any, but I didn't know the reason."

A very good friend of ours tells us of a lady here who refuses to be called a mother-in-law. She says that when once some friend called her a mother-in-law, she became very angry and informed that she was no such thing. She was only a mother. A mother to her own children—a mother to her in-laws—and a mother to her children's children. She only wanted to be known as "Mother."

BIRTHDAY DINNER

A Birthday Dinner was served at the home of J. D. Yeargan, Sunday, January 21, in honor of J. D. Yeargan and four of his sons.

Those present were: Mr and Mrs J. D. Yeargan and family, Herbert, Ronald and Donald of Clanton Route Two; Mr and Mrs Cecil Yeargan, Mary Ann and Mac., Wilsonville; Mr. and Mrs Earl Yeargan and Carolyn, Clanton; Mr and Mrs Melvin Yeargan and Shirley Jean of Billingsley; Mr and Mrs J. B. Jeargan, Verbena, Route One; Mr and Mrs L. M. Yeargan and Billy; Mr and Mrs A. Q. Yeargan and daughter, Elsie Myrtle; Mr and Mrs E. R. Yeargan of Clanton.

The day was enjoyed by all present. They left in the afternoon wishing to meet again next year.

Where they are and How they are

Wilford Lamar Teel, 19, son of Mr and Mrs Jesse Emmett Teel of 1610 Ann Street, Montgomery, Ala., was a member of the 31st class of aviation cadets to graduate from the Columbus Army Air Field near Columbus, Miss., on Feb. 1st. He received the silver wings of a Flying Officer and commission as a Second Lt. in the Army Air Forces.

Lt. Teel entered pilot training last January 1944, and attended flying schools at Avon Park, Fla., and Greenwood, Miss., before his graduation at the advanced flying school near Columbus, Miss.

Sgt. Toombs H. Lawrence, son of Mr and Mrs John Lawrence, is a crew chief of a veteran Twelth Air Force P-47 Thunderbomber fighter outfit now blasting enemy communications, motor transports and gun positions in support of Allied ground troops in the Mediterranean Theatre operating over northern Italy.

Overseas since July 16, 1942, Lawrence recently celebrated his 30th month of foreign service. He has participated in four major campaigns, Africa, Sicily, Italy and France.

T-Sgt. Clarence E. Smith

(Editors Note: Below is a letter from Sgt. Smith that his parents, Mr and Mrs Ocie Smith, of Jemison, would like to share with his many friends in Chilton County.)

Dear Mother and Family:

I will write you again. It has been a good while snce I have heard from you. I try to write you every week when possible. I am doing fine and hope you are the same. I read in a newspaper where it had been real cold in Alabama. Was it very cold at home?

You should see some of the gardens some of the boys have planted since we have been here. They grow tomatoes, cucumbers, radishes, etc. I am still working as aircraft welder. We have done a lot of work in the last two years. We have worked on heavy bombers most of the time.

I will sure be glad when I can get back home again. I hope to make it sometime next spring. They have sent quite a few back from here but most of them had been over for thirty months. I am on my twenty-sixth month now so maybe it wont be too much longer before I can get home. It has been about two years and a half since I was home last. I guess everything has changed a lot.

Well, I don't know much to write so tell Ruby to write me. Tell Dad and Doug hello.

Love.
C. S.

Battle Jacket

By EDWARD YEWDALL

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

JOHNNY MULFORD'S first approach to the girl was direct. He went straight up to her in the subway station and said, "Gee, you're the most beautiful thing I ever saw."

The girl gave him a look that was (1) startled, (2) contemptuous and (3) mad. She said, "On your way."

Perhaps if she had known Johnny's long build-up before he found the courage to do what he did she would have been a little more receptive. It was like this: He had come back from the wars and gone to work for the Mulcahy Contracting Company on his old drawing board, after two months' loafing. He couldn't get through his red head that this building stuff was of the slightest moment. He couldn't, at first, get back to work. He couldn't get his mind on the beam.

After wandering around the house, worrying Mom to death, picking books out of the bookcase and reading a page or two, then putting them face down on the coffee table, the piano, the floor; after whitewashing the cellar and pruning the trees, he finally gave up and went into the office. The battle jacket with the shoulder patch embroidered with the "1" and "Guadalcanal" hung in the closet. He had never worn it since the day he got home.

He saw the girl the first day he went regularly to work. She boarded the bus at Poplar Street. She carried herself with a quiet dignity that became her blonde beauty; she was alone always. The girl's eyes reminded Johnny of the deep blue of the Pacific, and it seemed as if this was the girl he had been waiting for all his life. But the girl appeared to know nothing about that.

After a few weeks of long-distance admiration Johnny met Kline Harkins and, wonder of wonders, Kline knew something about the girl! If Kline had only been acquainted, things might have been settled one way or another right then. But Kline only lived near the girl, and she wasn't given to distant noddings. But Kline had a lot of dope. Her name was Hermance Taylor, she was twenty-two and worked in the Great American Insurance Company's office; her father was a dispatcher for the bus company. There was no boy friend in sight.

Six weeks passed. Once Johnny had the opportunity to give Hermance his seat in the bus. She said a cool "Thank you," and sat down. After that Johnny ceased to exist.

After his rebuff in the subway station Johnny braced Kline Harkins to try to meet the girl through neighbors on Poplar Street, but Kline was too diffident and bashful himself for that. Anyway, Johnny calculated, Kline would like to meet the girl on his own account. This seemed a cockeyed reversal of the "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" Pocahontas thing.

Johnny just subsided into eyeing the girl, drinking in every detail of her appearance, noting the sweetly grave expression in the deep blue eyes, the just-right details of her modest dress, the graceful walk and superlative carriage.

Things at the office didn't go so well. He couldn't concentrate on the layout of the Kilmer Radio Company's machine shop at all. Mr. Mulcahy was swell; he reminded Johnny that Rome was neither built nor destroyed in a day. "Take your time," he said. "This stuff will seem trivial for a while yet. Work only when you feel like it, Johnny. We're with you—we know what you can do."

"Wait till I meet Hermance," he said to himself. "Then I'll start to go to town. We'll see movies two nights a week, and we'll hold hands in the dark. On Saturday nights we'll go to the American Legion dances, and the boys will look at Hermance and gnash their teeth. After about a year I'll touch Dad for a loan and we'll think about buying a house, and from then on it'll be bills and mortgages and maybe a little Hermance and Johnny. And will I love it!"

Early on Johnny's Saturday off, Mr. Mulcahy called him up. "Johnny," he said, "Mr. Henderson is here from Milwaukee. He wants to go over the machine shop layout with us, and I don't know a thing about it. Will you come in?"

Well, Mother had sent his only civvy overcoat to the cleaners, and it wouldn't be back until night—a special concession at that. Mother said, "Put on the battle jacket, John. It's mild out. You ought to be proud of it." Johnny hated to wear any part of a uniform somehow, but there was nothing else to do. It was too cold for his suit, and as yet he possessed no topcoat. He sallied forth in the battle jacket.

Hermance hopped on the bus at Poplar Street. Her eyes passed Johnny with their cool impersonality and looked out the window. Something brought them back again, and they settled on the shoulder patch of Johnny's jacket, on the "1" and the "Guadalcanal."

In the subway station she came swiftly up to Johnny and said, "Pardon me, but I always wanted to shake hands with a man from Guadalcanal. I hope you won't think I'm forward."

Johnny grinned and said, "No. I don't think you're forward. I think you're swell."

Gives Blood and Flies With It to Island War Zone

Reporter Declares More and More Blood Needed for Wounded Yanks.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Jack McDowell, a reporter on the San Francisco Call-Bulletin staff, went to the Red Cross blood donor center one day recently and gave a pint of blood.

About 48 hours later McDowell arrived at Guam with the blood he had donated and that given by others, and saw some of it used for a transfusion.

He's back in San Francisco after the trip, reporting that "more, more and more" blood is needed for wounded Yanks.

"Just 48 hours after flying over the Red Cross blood donor center where more than 100 other San Franciscans and I put blood from our veins into little pint bottles, I stepped to the air strip of an advanced American base within 1,500 miles of Tokyo," he said in a news story.

"With the speed and ingenuity of the naval air transport service I was able to make Jules Verne look like a crawling piker, but the real thrill came in a forward area hospital as I watched color return to the face of a critically burned Seabee.

Watches Transfusion.

"In the bottle suspended above his hospital cot was blood donated by Chesla O'Brien, 22. I saw it drained from her arm as she lay on a cot adjacent to mine in the blood center. (Bottles containing the blood were labeled with the names of the donors.)

"My own pint of blood was in the hopper somewhere else, but I was able to follow that of Miss O'Brien across the Pacific to the advance blood bank at Guam and ultimately to the veins of Willie R. Boyter, 34, of Pine Bluff, Ark.

"Boyter, a veteran of D-day fighting in the Marianas, was thin and pale. He had charged up the beach of this particular island through the hell of Japanese mortar and artillery fire. His buddies dropped dead or wounded beside him as his outfit pushed through the fire. Boyter came through the battle unhurt—only to fall victim to the accidental explosion of a drum of turpentine. Now, according to medical officers, he is on the mend.

"Boyter wanted to know more about the girl who had sent her blood to help him back to health and the United States. I told him she had donated blood three times, had recently moved to San Francisco from Boston, and that one of the first things she did was call the blood donor center and make an appointment.

Vet Sends Thanks.

"'You don't know how thankful I am,' Boyter said, licking his dry lips in the tropical heat. 'Will you take a message back to the little girl in San Francisco for me? Tell her something to make her feel good—tell her how much I appreciate her sending part of her own blood all the way over here to me.'

"'Say,' he continued, 'will you tell that girl something else for me, too? Tell her I hope her blood gets me home to my wife quicker. I haven't seen her in 22 months.'

"Boyter's wife, Caroline, manages a coffee shop in a hotel in Pine Bluff.

"Shipments of whole blood are leaving San Francisco by air every day. They are landing at forward area hospitals two days later. The ingenious plan is working, but the demand is for more, more and more."

London U. Tests Back Belief in Clairvoyancy

LONDON.—The belief that human beings can obtain fleeting glimpses of future events is supported by experiments conducted for three years by S. G. Soal. He is a member of the mathematics department, Queen Mary college, London university.

Prof. Ifor Evans said the strange faculty which tests are alleged to affirm is known as precognitive-telepathy.

Soal experiments with a professional photographer and a pack of cards. Placed in a room apart, the subject guessed, not the card chosen for him, but the one to follow. He did this often enough, Soal said, that "the odds against the whole series of tests being due to chance are stupendous and are represented by a figure consisting of 10 followed by 34 noughts."

Fun, $11,000 Worth of It, On Other Fellow's Dough

LOS ANGELES. — "Just put it down to fun" was the comment of Bonnie Barker, 22-year-old waitress, as she told police of a 60-day spree in which she and a girl friend spent $11,000 belonging to a Detroit businessman.

Last August, Rubin Frumkin, Detroit, complained to police that his brief case containing $11,000 was stolen while he was in a downtown cafe.

My girl friend told me she found the money," Bonnie said, adding that they went to Phoenix and Little Rock, where "we had ourselves a time." The waitress was booked on suspicion of grand theft.

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

OUR TRIP TO THE QUICK-FREEZE PLANT

How happy I was when we won a half holiday! Soon after winning, we were discussing how and when we would spend and take our half holiday.

Mrs. Thomas remarked, "If you like, you may all take a trip together."

The class replied, "We should like to make a trip."

Then Mrs. Thomas added, "You may ride your bicycles if we can get Mr. Glenn to escort you."

The next morning Mrs. Thomas said, "I talked to Mr. Glenn this morning and he says he will go with you on your trip."

We decided we would have a picnic lunch in our room before leaving. Janie Lou and some others said they would like to bring a lunch for Mr. Glenn.

When Mr. Glenn came, Edward introduced him to the class.

We left the school building at one o'clock, rode down by the hospital and out the Birmingham highway. Betty Jean Lowe and I were leading the other people on bicycles.

When we reached the Quick-Freeze Plant, Mr. Reedie Taylor was there waiting to take us through. On the outside the plant has cut glass. It is a brick building.

Hollis was in charge of the questions the class had prepared to get answered at the plant. Mr. Taylor was answering our first questions when an employee of the plant came to the door and said, "Mr. Taylor, you may bring them in now."

We first went through a small hall and then entered the place where the calves are killed. In this room there is also a chickn-picker. When we were in there, there was a calf being dressed and some chickens being picked. Right off to the left there is a door leading into a little room where a great big boiler is kept that makes heat for the plant. Hogs are also killed in the slaughter-room. In one corner is a big vat into which the animals are dipped to make it easier for them to be skinned. The water in the vat is very, very hot.

We then went into the storage and smoke rooms. Some of the rooms are kept at about 30 degrees. The locker room is about zero. I just about froze in there, and I think the others did too.

We went out to the barn where there were crates and crates of potatoes being made ready for shipment.

Mr. Taylor answered the rest of our questions out near the barn.

We were then ready to get our bicycles and each person go to his or her home.

We had a wonderful time at the Quick-Freeze Plant.

SARAH MADGE MULLINS.

OUR VISIT TO THE QUICK-FREEZE PLANT

One day not long ago the class was discussing how to use our half holiday, when Mrs. Thomas said, "Had you rather go home or make a trip to the Quick-Freeze Plant?"

"Go to the plant," we at once responded.

So it was decided that the next Friday we would make our trip.

The next Friday almost every pupil was present. We ate our lunches in the school building. Mr. Glenn, the highway patroiman, came in and talked to us before and during the time we were eating.

He said, "I am going to give you a booklet on obeying traffic rules. Study it hard and learn them."

In just a little while we had finished our lunch and we started out.

"I bet this is going to be a lot of fun," I remarked.

We rode for a few minutes. Then all of a sudden, we were there!

Mr. Taylor greeted us and started showing us around. We went into the slaughtering room, the meat curing room and the locker room.

When we had gone into one room, Mr. Taylor said, "This room is fifteen to eighteen degrees below zero."

We saw many interesting things at th plant and learned much about how such a plant is worked.

December Light Bills Are Cancelled

Montgomery, Ala. — All residential customers of Alabama Power Company received a New Year's present, in the form of a refund, ordered by the Alabama Public Service Commission, of the entire amount of their December electric bill. The commission's order, signed by Commissioners Gordon Persons and W. Clint Harrison, affects 131,004 city consumers and 34,434 rural customers, who will receive refunds totalling nearly $600,000, while 87 municipalities will receive refunds totalling slightly over $20,000 for December street lighting. Where December bills have already been paid, the amount will be credited on the January bill, while those who have not paid for December will not have to do so.

The commission's order stated that it appeared after investigation of the rates of the Alabama Power Company and from estimate of its earnings for 1944, that a further reduction in the company's gross revenues should be made and that "in view of the present unsettled business conditions generally, the commission is of the opinion that the reduction should be brought about by a customer refund." The order mentioned that, late in 1944, commercial customers of the Alabama Power Company had already received a $318,000 annual reduction in rates.

Action of the commission followed several months of investigation and came after a number of conferences with power company officials.

FEBRUARY 9 SET ASIDE FOR ARBOR DAY BY GOVERNOR

Sparks' Proclamation Urges Citizens To Recognize Importance Of Trees In The State's Economic Life

In honor of the trees whose existence has made Alabama rank third among its sister states of the nation for the past five years in the production of lumber, Governor Chauncey Sparks has proclaimed Friday, February 9, for the observance of Arbor Day. Pointing out that the forests of the State are the basis for numerous industries which employ many thousands of Alabamians, the proclamation urges citizens, clubs and schools to observe the occasion with programs and tree planting exercises.

The demand upon Alabama's forested acres by wartime needs has increased with the tempo of battle. Not only are the trees furnishing lumber but crating for many types of vehicles, packaging for medical supplies, but plywood and pulpwood for many hundreds of assorted uses. The present demands, plus the added drain to be expected from potwar needs, are placing a heavy strain upon the forests that can leave them in a deplorable state.

It is the purpose of Arbor Day programs to draw attention to the benefits derived from the existence of trees and forests and the damage that may be wrought them and our own economic future by fires and unwise cutting practices. Approximately 19,000,000 acres of Alabama's soil are suited primarily for production of tree crops which provide for the health, comfort, recreation and prosperity of the people.

Alabama celebrated its first Arbor Day in 1887, twelve years after such exercises had originated in Nebraska. Trees stand in hundreds of school yards which were planted by students of bygone years in exercises eulogizing the forests.

A mimeographed booklet containing program material has been prepared which may be secured by writing either the Editor of Publications or the Division of Forestry, Department of Conservation, Montgomery 4, Ala.

A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALABAMA.
ARBOR DAY — 1945.

WHEREAS, the trees of our forests comprise one of the most useful state-wide assets necessary to the health, comfort, recreation and prosperity of the people of the State of Alabama; and

WHEREAS, there are 19,000,000 acres of non-agricultural lands peculiarly suited to the production of tree crops which have established Alabama as the third ranking State in the nation in lumber production and makes possible an annual harvest of large quantities of other necessary and useful forest products; and

WHEREAS, present war demands are making such tremendous inroads upon our forest resources that it become urgent for all of our citizens to recognize and appreciate the need to encourage the growth and proper management of timber and trees in all suitable locations; and

WHEREAS, trees and forests render many other benefits and services to the civic, social and recreational welfare of the State;

THEREFORE, I, CHAUNCEY SPARKS, Governor of the State of Alabama, do designate and set apart the day of Friday, February 9, 1945, as Arbor Day and urge upon our citizens, clubs, patriotic societies, civic organizations and particularly the schools the observance of this day by the planting of trees in suitable places and by such other appropriate exercises as may add to the further understanding and appreciation of the benefits derived from the culture and proper use of trees and forests.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Mongomery, on this 23rd day of January in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Forty-five.

CHAUNCEY SPARKS,
Governor.

MORE LABOR-SAVING MACHINERY IS NEEDED

The drafting of more young men from farms will make the farm machinery problem more difficult in at least two ways. These young men of draft age are often the most capable machinery men on the farm. They know how to operate it and how to maintain it. Furthermore, their strong backs will be missed. Labor-saving machinery will be needed to take their place—that is, to enable the older and younger people to do more work.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain
Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:
1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.
2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

ARMY WITHOUT COWARDS

From Paris comes the statement, in an Associated Press dispatch, that since D-Day "not a single American soldier in France has been executed for cowardice, desertion in the face of the enemy or any other military offenses for which death is mandatory." Our soldiers are not angels. Out of hundreds of thousands of men four have been executed for murder, 12 for attack. We were recently told that a few soldiers had diverted military gasoline into the black market. Many have doubtless drunk more than was good for them. The majority may occasionally use language not suited for mixed company. But where they have faced the enemy they have been good soldiers.

We may have to revise that conception of history which throws the greatest virtues into the past. American soldiers deserted in great numbers during the Revolution. They several times ran away in senseless panic during the War of 1812. On both sides during the Civil War desertion was a major problem. Has the stock improved since then? Certainly it has been enriched by a variety of racial strains. More probably the military qualities which Americans show today are the product of better pre-military education, better military training and the kind of self-discipline which the use of machines and of technical processes develops. But it doesn't have to be explained. There it is. War is more horrible than ever before. Our fighting men are standing up to it more valiantly than ever before, the more valiantly because none of them denies the presence of fear. Pride stands beside sorrow and anxiety as we think of them.—New York Times.

"NUTS!"

"Nuts!" does not sound as grand as the older American reply to the enemy: "We have just begun to fight!" Our early American heroes used dramatic phrases to confound the enemy, phrases which still have a brave and steadfast ring when we come across them in our histories, but their spirit was the same as that of the commander at beleaguered Bastogne when he answered the ultimatum of the German besiegers with the single word: "Nuts!"

The 46-year-old commander, Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, was in a tight spot and he realized it. Yet he followed the example of the ragged Continental soldiers of 1776, of the Yankees who sailed the little wooden ships which challenged the navies of Britain and France, of the frontiersmen who never recognized defeat but turned it into victory, when he sent his eloquent reply to the German commander. The Bastogne episode has quickly become one of those epic adventures which are typical of the American spirit.

The reports of the adventure tell us that, when the general told his men what he had done, thus placing them in a very dangerous position, they seized upon the word and made it a battle cry, a rallying call that kept the entire garrison intent on turning their desperate position into victory. Five German divisions attacked again and again before American relief opened a corridor to Bastogne, and hundreds of battered German tanks remained as mute evidence of the fury of these unsuccessful assaults on the men who cried, "Nuts!"

The holding of Bastogne may have been a deciding factor in the slowing-down of Von Rundstedt's drive toward the Meuse, for this city is the center of several arterial highways and railways. The fact that stubborn Americans held it frustrated the planned rush toward France.

Bastogne will go down with other place-names which are associated with American heroism, places where a few stood bravely against many, where a few elected to stand and fight against odds.—Montgomery Advertiser.

IT CAN BE DONE

Ocie Mims out on Route 1, Clanton, has a success story which reads like a fairy tale. In eighteen months, the Mims family has gone from tenant to landowner with a three thousand dollar farm bought and paid for.

Such a statement may not be significant within itself, but when you look back over the years of this family, still young and anxious to get ahead, it means the difference between a tenant farm family moving every year or two and a farm owner. It means the very thing we claim as our right as Americans—security, freedom from fear of tomorrow, and freedom from want. It means good solid American citizens, with roots in one community and one county.

In 1939 the Mims family had farmed as sharecroppers and cash renters for 14 years and had moved five times. They owned a sum total of $300 worth of stuff if you stretched the dollars a little. That year, Mr. Mims applied to the Farm Security Administration for money to make a crop. In talking about their progress, Mrs. Mims stated, "Getting that loan from FSA was the best move we every made. We just about didn't have anything at all and we owed money." Mr. and Mrs. Mims knew that the Farm Security Administration could lend a worthy man money for better livestock and equipment, and give him one to five years to repay the loan at a low rate of interest. This gave him a chance to rent a good place and produce ample feed and food crops, plus raising enough cotton and truck crops to pay his debts.

In 1942 Mr. Mims had increased his net worth to $1,255 and paid back his full operating loan to Farm Security. They had found out something else about Farm Security. They learned that loans were made to worthy families to buy a farm and make repairs to buildings. These loans were made over a long period of time at a low rate of interest. However, they could be paid back in full at any time the family was able. Since Mr. and Mrs. Mims were tired of moving and not having a home of their own, they applied for a loan to buy a farm. The loan was made and they moved to their farm and made their first crop there in 1943. The whole family worked—part of the time both Mr. and Mrs. Mims worked at Childersburg and made a crop too. By good management and careful application of income to debts and additional livestock and equipment, their farm was paid for in 18 months.

When the last payment was made, both Mr. and Mrs. Mims made the following remarks. "Tonight we will sleep in our own home. We don't owe anybody a penny and we can look over these six years Farm Security has helped us and know we have come a long way. We are proud to have been given the opportunity for getting ahead, and we know that without FSA's assistance, we could never have owned a place like we have. We figure now that with our place paid for, we own about $5,000 worth of stuff."

Farm Security has been able to help 70 families purchase farms in Chilton County and several hundred families have been assisted with loans for farming operations.

One of the necessities that should be kept nearby for convenience is a can of machine oil for use in oiling motors, hinges, sewing machines, and locks.

A small tack hammer kept near at hand will save time for the homemaker when putting up picture hooks, tacking upholstery, or driving small tacks or brads where needed.

Two Committees To Help Veterans Become Farmers

Two distinct committees have been set up in each Alabama county to help returning veterans locate on farms.

One is an advisory committee that functions in connection with the County Agent's Office. This committee will furnish the veteran with information concerning (1) farms that are for sale, (2) individual, banks or other financing agencies where GI loans may be had, (3) best types of farming and farm practices for the area, and (4) other useful information and advice.

The second is a certifying committee and functions in connection with the office of the County Farm Security Supervisor. It will be the responsibility of this committee to size up the veteran personally and also the farm and the general business proposition, to certify as to the conditions and to approve or disapprove the guaranty of the loan by the Government.

Present plans are for the farm land and improvements to be appraised by the Federal Land Bank appraiser.

Coal Conservation Order, Effective February 1, Restricts Use of Electricity

A SERIOUS coal shortage is impending which makes necessary the conservation of coal. Much electric power is generated in coal burning plants; therefore the electric light and power industry has been asked by the Government to cooperate in this coal conservation effort and to acquaint certain electricity users with the requirements of the War Production Board's order, which becomes effective Feb. 1, 1945, as it relates to the use of electricity. That is the purpose of this advertisement. All electricity users affected by the order have also been sent a copy of the order.

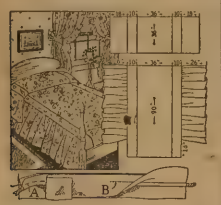
Under the Coal Conservation Order "U-9"

YOU MAY NOT USE ELECTRICITY FOR THESE PURPOSES

(1) Outdoor advertising and outdoor promotional lighting.
(2) Outdoor display lighting except where necessary for the conduct of the business of outdoor establishments.
(3) Outdoor decorative and outdoor ornamental lighting.
(4) Show window lighting except where necessary for interior illumination.
(5) Marquee lighting in excess of 60 watts for each marquee.
(6) White way street lighting in excess of the amount determined by local public authority to be necessary for public safety.
(7) Outdoor sign lighting with limited exemptions specified in the order.

COMPLIANCE WITH THE ORDER IS COMPULSORY

Unlike a previous fuel conservation order, compliance with which was voluntary, order U-9 is compulsory. Certain penalties are prescribed for violations, among which are discontinuance of electric service, at War Production Board direction, to persons who wilfully violate the order.



We feel sure that all our customers, in the interest of fuel conservation, will comply fully with order U-9.

Bed Spread Made Of 36-Inch Goods

THIS spread for a double bed may be made out of chintz or any 36-inch-wide material that you have on hand. Eleven and one-half yards will be required for a bed 54 inches wide and, if you follow the cutting diagram given here, not a scrap of goods will be wasted.

Cut the center parts first; then the 18-inch side sections for the pillow cover; then the 10-inch strips for the pillow cover and spread. This leaves a long strip for the flounce. You may buy seam welting or cover cable cord with bias strips as at A. Use your machine cording foot for the seam so that the stitching will be close to the cord as at B.

MULTIPLE RELIEF EASES COLD MISERIES LIKE A DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION

Many doctors prescribe a combination of ingredients for relief of cold symptoms. Colds don't show up as a single ailment, but as a complex series of miseries. Grove's Cold Tablets are a combination of eight active medicinal ingredients. Work internally and promptly on all these symptoms: relieve headache, reduce fever, ease body aches, lessen muscular pains, ease nasal stuffiness. Take exactly as directed. Get Grove's Cold Tablets.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

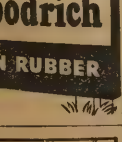
Every gas mask issued by the U. S. Army contains 1½ pounds of rubber.



Even now, with the rubber situation improved, it is important that car owners have their tires recapped in time. In time means when the tread is worn smooth, but before the fabric shows.

It is expected by industry authorities that the early post-war period will bring a demand for from 15,000 to 40,000 long tons of rubber for the production of latex foam sponge used in cushions of various types and in furniture and mattresses.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

THEY'RE telling it on Faye Emerson Roosevelt. Seems she sent Selznick International producer, Dore Schary, a bill for $6.00 as the fee for plugging his picture, "I'll Be Seeing You." The Roosevelt bride got into a taxi at the Warner studio and forgot to tell the driver her destination. But she did shout "I'll be seeing you" to a group of friends.

FAYE EMERSON

Whereupon the driver, asking no questions, drove her straight to the theater where the picture was playing. The meter rang up $6.00, she sent Schary the bill and he paid it. Anyway, that's the story.

Incidentally, "I'll Be Seeing You" is the first of the rehabilitation pictures, which will probably be a cycle before it ends. Joseph Cotten plays the returned soldier, Ginger Rogers and Shirley Temple are co-stars. RKO's "Enchanted Cottage" is another one, with Dorothy McGuire and Robert Young in leading roles. Warner Bros. have three scheduled—"The Very Thought of You," "Janie Gets Married," and "This Love of Ours."

New York fell heels over head in love with little Margaret O'Brien the instant she arrived. But Margaret never lost her head, though two of her pictures, "Music for Millions" and "Meet Me in St. Louis," were being shown at big movie houses, with crowds pouring in to see them. She could have appeared on any number of radio programs, attended any number of parties. Everyone adored her.

Lana Turner and Van Johnson draw the leading roles in Metro's production of "The Pirate," which Lynn Fontaine and Alfred Lunt did on the stage. This will probably be one of those pictures that are so gorgeous to look at that nobody cares whether there's a plot or not. Anyway, who sees about a plot if they can watch the lovely Lana, wearing marvelous costumes?

Though Dan Duryea succeeded Franchot Tone as president of the dramatic club at Cornell, he had no thought of acting professionally; it took six years in an advertising agency to lead him to the stage, and a career of playing men you'd like to choke. He does it again in "The Woman in the Window"—he's cast as a bodyguard who turns blackmailer after his boss is murdered.

William Powell is going to appear again as the late Florenz Ziegfeld, this time in Metro's all-star, Technicolor "Ziegfeld Follies." Powell first played the Follies producer in "The Great Ziegfeld," which brought Luise Rainer an Academy award.

They'll never be able to type Michael O'Shea. A low-brow comic in his first film, "Lady of Burlesque," he then played Jack London in the film based on the author's life; he was "Mulveroy" in "The Eve of St. Mark," and a fictionized character based on Henry Kaiser in "The Man From Frisco." And on NBC's "Gaslight Gayeties," he shares honors with Beatrice Kay in singing old-time ditties.

They rented a $65,000 necklace of white jade for Hedy Lamarr to wear in "Experiment Perilous." Then they photographed it, and it just wasn't white enough for the camera. So they covered it with 40 cents' worth of white, washable make-up!

Audrey Young of the Broadway musical comedy stage, has never yet been seen on the screen; her first picture is Paramount's "Out of This World." She's good enough, though, so Paramount borrowed her from RKO for a leading role in "George White's Scandals of 1945."

ODDS AND ENDS

Ginny Simms, star of "Johnny Presents," recently was chilly at rehearsal and asked for a fur coat—it seemed to walk to her alone, till Johnny stepped out of it. . . . Bob Hope's sponsor announced that Bob's new ten-year contract involved what is believed to be the largest total sum ever negotiated in a single deal for radio talent. . . . Rudy Vallee returns to the screen in "People Are Funny." . . . Fruit, Meringue and Cupcakes . . . Dessert Trio
(See Recipes Below)

Dessert Simplicity

Desserts that are delicious in spite of their simplicity and yet hearty enough to satisfy appetites whipped to their keenest by sharp wintry weather are the order of the day.

We're concentrating on desserts that take up little time and effort, little of the precious, rationed sugar, but use plenty of fruits in season. There are many recipes among them that use eggs or milk to fortify diets shy in these two important foods.

The first is an especially quickly prepared dessert that is satisfying but not too heavy:

Fruit Cupcakes

Slice plain bakery cupcakes into wedges, cutting only half way through. Open gently and fill the cavity with meringue and fruit. Bits of fruit left over from breakfast or lunch may be used. Served with coffee or another hot beverage, these make a tempting climax to heavier fall and winter meals.

Butterscotch Rice Pudding.
(Serves 6)

½ cup rice
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup chopped dates

Wash rice and add salt and rice to the milk. Bring to a boil and then simmer 25 minutes. Meanwhile, melt butter, add brown sugar and cook over a low flame until very dark brown but not burned. Add the caramel mixture to the rice and milk and stir until dissolved. Remove from heat and add lemon juice, vanilla and dates. Pour into a wet bowl and chill. When cold, this pudding can be unmolded. Serve plain or with cream.

Pears are in season and are good to serve with cake or just plain fresh or stewed. Here they are combined into cake:

Pear Cake.
½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon lemon extract
Topping:
10 pear halves, pared and stewed
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Cream shortening, add sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Add eggs one at a time and beat well. Add flour which has been sifted with baking powder, salt and cinnamon.

Lynn Says

Saving Sugar: Syrups may be used in cookies while sugar is saved for cakes. The texture of cookies is not affected enough by syrup in place of sugar so that it is perfectly all right to use it. Use ¾ cup honey or corn syrup in place of each cup of sugar, and add 2 tablespoons of flour to each cup called for in recipe.

Fruits may be sweetened with jams and jellies or honey. Add sweetening last with a pinch of salt to make the most of it.

Prepared pudding and gelatin mixes may be used with unbaked sweet cooky crusts to save sugar in making pies.

Thicken left-over fruit syrup from canned fruit with cornstarch and use as sauce for puddings.

Make use of dried and fresh fruits for their natural sugar content.

Substitute fresh fruits in season and custards for cakes and pastries as often as possible.

Add flavoring. Pour into a well-greased oblong or square pan. Press the cooked pear halves into the batter and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon mixed together. Bake for 30 minutes in a 400-degree oven.

Have you tried cookies and fresh fruits for dessert simplicity and satisfaction? You'll like:

Orange Crisps.
(Makes 7½ dozen small cookies)
2 cups sifted enriched flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
3 tablespoons orange juice

Sift together flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Cream together shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add fruit rinds and juice. Add flour mixture to creamed mixture. Mix thoroughly. Shape into rolls and wrap up in waxed paper. Chill until firm. Slice ¼-inch thick and bake on ungreased baking sheets in a moderate (350-degree) oven 12 to 15 minutes. These cookies may also be shaped by using a cookie press, if fancy shapes are desired.

Spiced Apple Pudding.
(Serves 6)
1½ cups sifted flour
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅓ to ¾ cup milk
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
2 cups sliced apples
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup sugar
Juice of ½ lemon

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Cut fat into flour, using fork or pastry blender. Add one-half cup chopped apples and enough milk to make a soft dough. Melt butter into the bottom of a casserole, then add sugar, remaining apples and lemon juice. Pour the batter over the apples. Steam for 1½ hours and serve hot with lemon juice or cream.

Chocolate is such a big favorite that it should be included in desserts occasionally to add to appetite appeal. Here is a nutritious dessert that is bound to bring cheers:

Chocolate Floating Island.
(Serves 6)
1½ squares unsweetened chocolate
½ cup sugar
3 cups milk
4 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
4 tablespoons sugar

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler, add ½ cup sugar and mix well. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Reserve 2 egg whites for meringue. Beat remaining whites and 4 yolks slightly with salt. Pour hot milk mixture over eggs, then return to double boiler. Cook, stirring constantly until mixture coats the spoon and foam disappears. Add vanilla. Strain into serving dish; cover; let stand until cold. Chill before serving. Garnish with meringue made of egg whites, sugar and a dash of salt.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

Over in Clarke County, Alabama, there was an uneducated old minister of the colored race, and he arose to line that old Hymn that reads, "Judge not the Lord by feeble sense." This is how he read it, "Judge not the Lord by feeble saints." In spite of his inability to read correctly the old darkey was sticking to a truth that should be heeded. What a pity that people everywhere will judge the Lord by feeble saints. God is perfection in spite of our imperfection.

Here is what a famous children's specialist had to say about obedience of children. "When it comes to serious illness, the child who has been taught to obey, stands four times the chance to recover than the spoiled and undiciplined child does." These words should make a lasting impression on the minds of parents. When parents teach their children to obey, it may mean that they are being taught to pull through a serious illness ten years later. It is a fact that obedience often means the saving or the losing of a child's life. It is better to control a child than it is to bury that child.

And it came to pass that there was a knock on the lazy man's door and he stumbled along to open it and meet the caller. "Who are you," asked the lazy man. "I am opportunity, and I have come to tell you of a job that has good pay and plenty of work," said the man at the door. Then the lazy man slammed the door in his face saying, "Huh, you call yourself opportunity, you look very much like Hard Work to me, and I care nothing for your advice." That is why many a person is little, says little and dies little. Opportunity and hard work travel hand in hand.

There were thousands of people sitting on the hillside before Christ as He broke the bread and multiplied the fish. Note that the Disciples did not carry the food supplies alone to the front rows, but they took bread and fish to the back rows and fed all alike. God's food for the soul is for all people, those on the front row and those on the back.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE AND FARM WORK

Since the war began and since farmers have been called upon to raise more food, children have had to work harder, along with their parents, to meet the demands. The majority of the parents of Chilton County have done some careful planning in order for their children to do the extra farm work and to carry on their school work. The short day school has helped to make this possible in many cases. There are some parents in the county who before the war kept their children at home when there was very little work to be done. Those parents continue to keep their children at home to do the odd jobs that come along. The people in high places in our government are urging that every child be allowed to remain in school every day that school is in session. Many men in Chilton County have not been able to serve their country because they were not allowed to go to school or were not made to remain in school as they should. Around two million men in the United States have been turned down because of poor educational opportunities and because of poor physical condition.

The schools of Chilton County are helping the children today build strong bodies by serving good well balanced meals. Lunches are served in all the schools except four one teacher schools one Junior High school and one Senior high.

The schools want every child in school every day, they are doing a fine job helping the child to use his school time well and wisely.

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1945 — NUMBER 5

CENSUS OF CITY TO BE TAKEN SOON

The Census Bureau, at the request of the City Council of Clanton, will conduct a population survey for the City of Clanton during the week of February 18th.

Clanton is a fast growing little city. In 1920 the population was 1,411, in 1930 it was 1,847, and in 1940 it had reached 3,982, according to figures from the Census Bureau. Certain federal and state funds are appropriated according to the latest census. It is believed that in addition to extra funds that may be made available from the new census, it will be an inducement to new families and new industries to locate here.

The results of this survey will give the total number of people by sex and color, the total number of families and the total number of vacant dwelling units in the city.

Every person within the city limits is to be enumerated. All are asked to cooperate. If any family plans to be out of the city during the week of February 18th, please make a list of the names, ages and sex of each member of your household, place in a sealed envelope and leave with a neighbor to give to the enumerator when she calls by. The information given the enumerators will be held in strictest confidence for each is under oath with heavy penalties if any information is divulged.

Because the Census Bureau is conducting this population survey also do not confuse this work with other surveys being conducted by the Census Bureau.

COOPERATIVE CLASS

A class on "Cooperatives" is meeting each Friday night in the Clanton Farmers Union Cooperative store. Successful Cooperatives have been reviewed from their origin in Rochdale, England, in 1844, to the present day of world-wide distribution.

Last Friday night pictures were used to present the relation of Cooperatives to our present economic situation. The Credit Union, one of the most successful American banking institutions, will be studied this Friday night.

The class is free for all and meets for just one hour, beginning at seven o'clock.

MRS. MATTIE L. SCOTT

Mrs. Mattie Lou Scott, age 73, of Jemison, died in a Birmingham hospital February 3rd. Funeral services were held at 2:00 p.m. Monday at Thorsby Baptist Church, conducted by Rev. Nix of Fayette, Ala.; interment in Thorsby Cemetery.

She is survived by one son, W. B. Scott, of Fayette, Ala.; three daughters—Mrs. M. L. Driver of Thorsby, Mrs. Tom Lessley of Jemison, Mrs. R. D. Gibbons of Faulkville, Ala.; two sisters, Mrs. W. W. Williams of Billingsley, Mrs. W. Williams of Clanton; eight grandchildren, four great grandchildren.

Pallbearer were: S. J. Davenport, A. T. Collins, M. P. Davenport, Fred Merchant, Edward Davenport and E. H. Cobb.

BELL HARDWARE CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY

Jimmy Bell, popular Hardware Dealer, celebrated the 10th anniversary of the founding of Bell Hardware Company, last week.

Under the guiding hand of Mr. Bell the store has grown considerably, and is widely known and patronized thruout this section of the state. If they haven't got what you want, when you want it—ask the next time you go in, and they will have it—if war restrictions will allow them to get it.

Bell Hardware Company carries a complete line of hardware and farming tools, building materials, household necessities, paints, etc.

A good policy to adopt for the year 1945, if you want to save on your hardware bills, is: "See Bell before you buy.

Thorsby Civic Club Met Monday Night

The Thorsby Civic Club met in the Town Hall on Monday night with Mr J. R. Ekblad presiding and Mrs. Ella Carter secretary.

Mrs. Anna Phalin, chairman of the Welfare Committee, reported on rooms available for the health clinic and instruction was given to continue negotiations. The secretary was asked to send a letter requesting the town council to investigate certain social conditions.

Miss Lillian McKee reported on the work of the membership committee Mr. Archie Ogburn stated that Directors of the Club and others have been discussing problems relating to the new highway. At the suggestion of Mr. Heida, an agricultural committee for the Club was considered and voted. The Club also considered a sweet potato project, cleaning and beautifying certain areas and post-war planning.

CHILTON COUNTY GIRLS MAKE HONOR ROLL AT ALABAMA COLLEGE

Chilton County girls listed on the Alabama College Honor Roll for the first semester announced by Dean T. H. Napier, are Katherine Bryan of Clanton, on First Honor Roll; and Nina Frances Jones, Verbena, on Second Honor Roll.

HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A. TO MEET

The Parent-Teachers Association of the high school will meet Tuesday afternoon, February 13th, at the high school at four o'clock. All members and patrons of the high school are cordially invited to attend. — Mrs. J. E. Gowan, President.

ERROR IN DATE ANNOUNCED FOR OPENING BIDS

In the announcement that Bids would be received on a tank of diesel fuel by the Commisioner's Court, in last week's issue of the CHILTON COUNTY NEWS, the date appeared as Feb. 19th. This is an error, the date should have been Feb. 10th. The bids will be opened Saturday, Feb. 10th, at 10 o'clock.

Scrambled eggs will be prevented from separating if not overcooked or cooked too fast.

If popped corn becomes tough, heating it thoroughly will restore it's crispness.

A rubber plate scraper will remove bread or cake batter from a bowl more easily than is possible when a spoon is used.

A thick coating of paraffin over the bottom and sides of the garbage pail will prevent the pail from rusting.

A small amount of cold sweet milk beaten lightly into whipped cream will cause the cream to lose it's overwhipped appearance.

A little vinegar stirred into the water used for washing windows in the winter time helps to keep the water from freezing.

Prominent Speaker To Be Guest At Legion Meeting

The next regular meeting of the Chilton County Post No. 6 of the American Legion will be held at 7:30, p. m., February 12, 1945, in the court house, Clanton, Alabama. You are urged to be present.

Col. Millard Westcott, State Service Commissioner of Alabama will be present and make a talk. The purpose of this talk will be to instruct all service men regarding any claims or rights they may be entitled to on account of their service in any of the armed forces from any war. If there are any particular points that you do not fully understand, you are urged to ask questions regarding same.

Col. Westcott is making this trip for our benefit and we will get lots of information that will be helpful.

CLANTON LOSES THE L. J. STEWARTS

The L. J. Stewart family moved to Birmingham last Thursday. Mr. Stewart has been manager of the local Hills Store for the past eleven years, and in that time has made scores of friends in Chilton County. The Stewarts will be missed especially at the Methodist Church where he has acted as Superintendent of the Sunday School for eight years. Clanton can ill afford to lose this fine family.

Mr. Henry Durbin is acting manager of the Hills Store.

Due to the over-all war demands for lumber and to a smaller production last year than was anticipated, the supply of lumber for all uses will be tighter during the next few months than it has been since the war began.

Under a new order issued by the War Production Board, any farmer who cuts trees on his own farm may have them sawed into lumber by a sawmill and may receive up to 5,000 feet of lumber from such trees for the current year. If he wants to receive more than 5,000 feet of lumber he will need to get a certificate for the excess from his County AAA Commitee or give the sawmill a certificate which he has received from another lumber consumer on a purchase order.

Sawmills are authorized to deliver this lumber to farmers without requiring them to give certified orders.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL P.-T. A. MET TUESDAY

The Grammar school Parent-Teachers Association was called to order Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 by Mrs. Tom Kemp, in the absence of the president, Mrs. Walter Fleck.

Pupils from the Fifth Grade interlained those present with several vocal numbers.

Miss Margarite Perry gave the devotional message and bible reading.

Mrs. Frank Scott gave a very interesting paper on "Founders Day," after which the former presidents of the P.-T. A. were recognized.

Room count was made and the Fifth Grade won the half holiday.

The meeting was dismissed by Mrs. Tom Kemp.

AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The regular service in this church will be held Sabbath morning at 11:00 a.m. The pastor was disappointed last Friday night in not having but two of the official board present at a dinner Mrs. McPhail prepared for the official boards of the two churches. We should have had twenty, but only 15 were present.

The pastor, Rev. J. D. McPhail, expects to reach Clanton some time Friday morning and will be glad to know of any sickness among our people that he may see them.

As we are to have but one service, the pastor will be happy to see all our people and all friends and strangers at this service.

You will find a welcome.

MT. PLEASANT P.-T. A. TO MEET FEB. 13TH

The Mt. Pleasant Parent-Teachers Association will meet Tuesday, February 13th, at 3 o'clock at the school. A short program will be given with refreshments later.

Everyone is urged to attend this meeting and see the splendid new paint job on the inside of the building.

LEADING IRISH POTATO VARIETIES ARE LISTED

Ten Irish potato varieties accounted for 95% of the total production of certified seed in 1944 and 1943. Cobbler 25.35% in 1944 and 26.86% in 1943, Triumph 17.15 and 19.48, Katahdin 13.70 and 16.10, Green Mountain 13.18 and 10.75, Chippewa 5.65 and 4.31, Sebago 5.57 and 5.56, Russet Burbank 5.51 and 5.11, White Rose 4.75 and 3.85, Red McClure 2.17 and 1.13, and Russet Rural 1.64 and 1.68. It will be noted that the first four varieties maintained the same order of imporance in 1944 as in 1943.

The use of soft tissue paper by persons suffering from a cold is highly recommended because tissues can be burned quickly after use, lessening danger of infection.

STUDY CLUB ENTERTAINED BY MRS. M. L. WHITE

The Study Club was delightfully entertained by Mrs. M. L. White on last Friday afternoon.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. P. Hayes, Mrs. J. E. Gowan presided. The meeting was opened by reading the Club Collect, and the business session followed. The Club voted to shower the president, who is ill in a Birmingham hospital, with "Get well" cards.

Mrs. J. Watts Moore, program director for the afternoon, presented the guest artists, Misses Molly Megginson and Helen Hayes. They were beautiful cancellia corsages, gifts of the program order.

Miss Megginson, public director of welfare work in Chilton County, spoke most interestingly of the many phases of her work. She received her special training in welfare work at Tulane Versatile.

Helen Hayes charmed her audience with two delightful readings, "The Five-year Old Boy's Prayer" and "Vulnerable."

The hostess, assisted by Mesdames Moore and McSwain served delicious salad plate with [illegible] Club member and guests, [illegible] Nabors of Baton Rouge, La., Miss Megginson and Helen Hayes.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY MEETING

The Baptist W. M. S. held their February business meeting at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with the president, Mrs. Houston Nivins presiding.

The devotional message and opening prayer was brought by Mrs. Percy Minor in a very inspiring message.

The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. W. C. Golden, after which reports of the various committees were given by the chairman: Mrs. Frank Scott, Mrs. Roswell Owens, Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway, Mrs Hattie Allred and Mrs. R. M. Tucker.

Plans were made for a spend the day for Mission Study next Monday, to begin promptly at 11 o'clock. Everybody come and bring your sandwich.

After further business discussion the meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Owens.

Remember next Monday at 11 o'clock at the church. Come and bring someone with you.

EARLY CANCER IS CURABLE

Cancer's power to destroy human life has not been curbed or controlled in proportion to the increased knowledge concerning the control of it. Between 1917 and 1943 the State of Alabama's cancer death rate increased nearly 83 percent. Actually, 1,052 more Alabamians succumbed to cancer last year than in the year of this country's entry into the first World War, an increase out of all proportion to the increase in population.

Surprisingly enough to the uninitiated, this rapidly increasing cancer mortality has come in the face of greatly increased knowledge of the disease and the existence of proceedures which bring a high percentage of cures among early cases.

Successful employment of the life-saving trio—surgery, radium, and the x-ray—has removed from this disease the dark cloud of hopelessness which covered it for many centuries. Not without reason did the American Society for the Control of Cancer adopt as its slogan the hopeful words: "Early Cancer Is Curable."

NEWS OF— VERMONT —SCHOOL

The attendance of our school is still good. The Junior High School got the banner for the highest attendance last week.

Vermont boys played Enterprise in basketball Friday night, February 2, 1945, at Stanton. Vermont won 21-18. The sportsmanship was good between the two schools. Vermont basketball boys watched Enterprise's second team play Stanton's first team.

The Junior I's and Junior II's entertained the Junior III's down at Miss Doris Abbott's Wednesday night. The party was enjoyd by all.

METHODIST CRUSADE - CHRIST

The Yanks are going and wherever they go they find missionaries. They have discovered that the missionaries have done miracles. They know by first-hand knowledge that Christ has been carried by the missionary enterprise into earth's remotest corners. Many thrilling stories have come out of the South Pacific concerning the kindness extended to American soldier and Marines by natives not far removed from savagery. Voluntarily, one-time savages daily risk their lives carrying ammunition to the front lines. Many hundreds of wrecked and wounded aviators and sailors have discovered that the reason they were carried tenderly on stretchers for days across the islands by Fuzzy-Wuzzy natives (as these dark men are called by Yanks instead of being eaten by cannibals) that Christian missionaries had been working among those natives.

[illegible] will see his mother,
[illegible] see their wives,
[illegible] the Fuzzy-Wuzzies carried them to save their lives
From mortar or machine-gun fire,
Or a chance surprise attack,
To safety and the care of doctors.
At the bottom of the trek.

Though they haven't any halos—
Only holes slashed through their ears,
And their faces marked with tattoos
And with scratch pins in their hair,
Bringing back the badly wounded,
Just as steady as a hearse.
Using leaves to keep the rain off,
And as gentle as a nurse.

Slow and careful in bad places,
On the awful mountain Trek,
And the look upon their faces
Make you think that Christ was black.
Not a move to hurt the wounded,
As they treat him like a saint
It's a picture worth recording
That an artist yet will paint.

May the mothers of America,
When offering a prayer
Mention those impromptu angels
With Fuzzy-Wuzzy hair.

New York Herald Tribune

Over and over again American service men have sent money to their home churches for the missionary budget. A church in Georgia received $100 from a soldier; one British soldier gave 65 pounds, another gave 100 pounds. An aviator sent his mother $200 for his home church and specified that 75 percent of it should be for missions.

The Methodist Church has girded itself for the greatest missonary program she has ever known in her Crusade for Christ.

"Set us afire, Lord,
Stir us, we pray,
While the world perishes
We go our way,
Purposeless, Passionless,
Day after day,
Set us afire, Lord,
Stir us, we pray."

—O. C. LLOYD, Pastor.

MR. RICHARD HICKS

Mr. Richard Hicks, age 57, died suddenly at Clanton courthouse Monday a.m., February 5th. His residence is in Thorsby.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at 11:00 a.m. from Thorsby Baptist Church, conducted by Rev. G. G. Williams and Rev. J. O. Dailey; interment in New Cedron Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lula Hicks; two sons, William L., a prisoner of war in Germany, Richard A. of Thorsby; three brothers—Floyd of Billingsley Route 2, Elmore of Jemison, Rufus of Maplesville; five sisters—Mrs. Ida Wilson of Clanton Route 3, Mr. Mary Wilson of Clanton Route 3, Mrs. Lula Keith of Shelby, Ala., Mrs. Lula Rhodes of Clanton, Mrs. Ella Huett of Marbury, Mrs. Beulah Patten of Billingsley.

Hitler Calls for Finish Fight As Russian Drive Perils Berlin; Farm Machine Pinch to Persist

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Carrying on winter drive over snow-clad western front, U. S. troops haul supplies to battle lines on sleds, then remove wounded on them. Sleds are made by service forces.

EUROPE:
Berlin Imperilled

Ironing out the huge bulges formed in the early stages of their breakthrough, and drawing up their forces into an almost solid front, the Russians poised for their next great offensive thrust against Germany while Adolf Hitler called upon his people to ". . . fight on no matter where and no matter under what circumstances. . . ."

In a voice at once calm and then almost hysterical, the Fuehrer said: ". . . I expect every German to do his duty to the last. Every fit man must stake his life and body. The sick and infirm and otherwise dispensable must work to the last ounce of their strength . . ."

It was on the road directly to Berlin that the Russian drive gained its greatest intensity, with Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army not only menacing the capital frontally, but also threatening to swing to the north to cut it off from its ports of Stettin and encircle it from the rear.

Meanwhile, Marshal Konev's 1st Ukranian army swept northward along the Oder from Silesia and threatened to pocket Berlin from the south. Konev shifted the weight of his attack after bitter German resistance slowed his drive across the Oder into Silesia, the "Little Ruhr" of the Reich, much of whose resources already had fallen to the Reds.

Yanks Plough Ahead

With the Nazis' once formidable bulge ironed out, U. S. armies were threatening Reich territory again on a long front, while farther to the south, mixed French and American units reduced the enemy's pocket below Strasbourg in Alsace.

As U. S. troops plodded through waist-high snow to push back into the Reich from Belgium and Luxembourg, the Nazis retreated to the Siegfried line to resist any major attack. The persistence of the U. S. attacks, despite the bitter winter weather, indicated an Allied determination to obtain the most favorable positions for the next large-scale offensive and give the limited German forces no rest.

In Alsace, the focal point of the fighting switched from the Palatinate border region to the German pocket south of Strasbourg, where the Nazis have maintained a foothold ever since their general evacuation of France. In resisting south of Strasbourg, the enemy made good use of the many interlocking canals in the district to put up a defensive stand.

Momentous Meeting

To Confidant Harry Hopkins went the task of sizing up the European political situation for Chief Franklin D. Roosevelt preparatory to the momentous "Big Three" conference, which was expected to result in the drafting of more specific surrender terms to the tottering Reich.

Harry Hopkins

Long the President's closest advisor, Lank Harry made the rounds of Europe's western capitals, conferring at length with Prime Minister Churchill in London and General de Gaulle in Paris, and then reportedly scheduled to talk with the pope in the Vatican before flying on to Moscow.

In the forthcoming conference of the Big Three, indications pointed to formal agreement of Poland's annexation of East Prussia and the Polish Corridor in compensation for other territory taken over by Russia; French annexation of German land west of the Rhine, and administration of the industrial Ruhr valley by an international commission.

PACIFIC:
Continue March

Cheered on by the huzzah of natives clustered in liberated villages, General MacArthur continued his march on Manila, with the Japanese still offering their stiffest resistance on his left flank far to the northeast.

In driving to Manila, General MacArthur executed another brilliant landing operation, this time putting troops ashore above Subic bay to the west of his advancing columns. As a result of the maneuver, Yanks were in a position to cut off the retreat of any Japs to Bataan to the south; squeeze any forces between them and the main U. S. column, and clear Subic bay for U. S. shipping to furnish a shorter supply route than from Lingayen Gulf on the north.

In continuing to put up their stiffest resistance far to the northeast of General MacArthur's advance columns, the Japs clung stubbornly to ridge positions, while other units sought to relieve pressure against their lines with tank-led attacks.

FARM MACHINERY:
To Remain Tight

Although nearly equalling the peak prewar output, production of farm machinery for the year ending July 1 will fall short of operators' demands, the Office of War Information reported, what with the heavy strain on existing equipment and the critical manpower problem.

Quotas on the $697,000,000 worth of machinery, parts and attachments generally will be met, OWI predicted, although manufacturers are experiencing labor shortages and difficulties obtaining component parts, such as malleable castings and lumber. Of the total output, U. S. farmers will obtain 90 per cent, with 7 per cent being available for export and 3 per cent for lend-lease.

Declaring that essential demands will not be met, the OWI said: "No more new tractors, side delivery rakes, combines or other haying or harvesting machinery will be available during the 1945 crop year than . . . during the 1944 crop year."

WARTIME SEIZURES:
Defined by Court

In a decision defining civilian rights in wartime—a decision the government promptly appealed to a higher court—Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan ruled that President Roosevelt lacked the authority to seize Montgomery Ward properties.

Slowly, clearly reading his decision, Judge Sullivan averred that the Constitution permitted seizure of civilian property only in areas in the immediate fighting zones, and that the war labor disputes act allowed seizure only of plants engaged in actual production of war material. Insofar as the properties were not in the war zones, and they are not manufacturing war material, they were not liable to seizure under either authority, Judge Sullivan decreed.

Further, Judge Sullivan said, only congress by the framing of constitutional laws, and not an independent agency like the War Labor board, has the authority to compel either party to a labor dispute to accept its decisions.

WAR FARE

Despite the expansion of military food needs and large shipments to the Allies, U. S. and Canadian food supplies for civilians in 1944 were maintained or increased as compared with 1943. Food supplies for civilians in the United Kingdom also showed some improvement over 1943, but continued below the United Kingdom prewar level for many foods and below 1944 levels in the U. S. and Canada for dairy products, meat, eggs, sugars, and fruit.

Lots of Pay, But—

There are at least 31 different kinds of pay you can get, but 42 or more different kinds of deductions.

Kinds of pay making up the workers' wages include pay for swing shift differential, advance daywork, seven-day bonus, night bonus, individual and group incentives, inventory work, vacation pay, Saturday overtime, and many others. Deductions include social security taxes, war bonds and withholding taxes.

CATTLE CEILINGS:
Purposes Cited

With the imposition of price ceilings on live cattle, OPA looked to the relief of wholesalers and retailers previously forced to buy stock above their own regulated sales prices and bid against black market operators.

Consumers, too, would benefit from the new order, OPA said, declaring that the live ceilings, coupled with tighter restrictions on meat rationing, "should give greater assurance to each housewife that she will receive her fair share of all grades of beef, including the top grades, at fair prices."

From $18.60 at the Spokane marketing center, the top cattle ceilings range to $17.25 for all of Texas save Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, El Paso and San Antonio. Tops for other marketing centers include $18 for Chicago; $17.90 for Milwaukee and Cudahy, Wis., National Stockyards, Ill., and St. Louis; $17.70 for St. Paul; $17.65 for Kansas City, Omaha, Sioux City and St. Joseph; $17.55 for Sioux Falls and $17.35 for Indianapolis and the five cities in Texas previously mentioned.

RAIL TIEUP:
Coal Shortage:

Because of the recent railroad tieup in the Northeast resulting from severe snowstorms, the government clamped down on coal usage in the area until rolling stock once again could bring in supplies.

Although directed to 17 eastern and middlewestern states, the government's order was expected to apply only to those areas where dealers' reserves were low, with deliveries limited to places with less than five days' supply, and curtailments on the heating of recreational and educational institutions.

As an indication of the severity of the weather in the Northeast, which so tied up traffic that only essential war freight was moved, rail cars were frozen clear up to their bodies in many terminals, with pneumatic picks, hammers and shovels needed to free them.

POLITICAL BOSS:
Pendergast Dies

With the death of big, ruddy-faced Thomas J. (Tom) Pendergast at 72 in a Kansas City, Mo., hospital, another of the country's tough, old-line political leaders passed from the picture.

Tom Pendergast

Learning the rudiments of politics in the back room of Brother "Jim" Pendergast's saloon in Kansas City, Big Tom took over the Democratic organization's river ward upon his death, and, by pursuing the policy of getting jobs for his workers, gained control of Kansas City's and Missouri's politics, his most notable achievement being the elevation of the present Vice Pres. Harry Truman to senator.

Too powerful for its own good, Pendergast's machine became the object of heated reformist attacks, with the federal government moving in in 1938 to convict dozens of his stalwarts, and then reaching out to jail him for evasion of income tax on $315,000, received for settling an insurance rate case. He served a year and a day before being placed on probation on the condition he would not participate in politics for five years. A racing enthusiast, Big Tom was known to have bet $2,000,000 on the bang-tails in 1935, losing $600,000.

POSTWAR FUNDS:
Jockey for Control

The bitter jockeying for control of the multi-billion dollar resources of the Reconstruction Finance corporation in the postwar period took a spectacular turn with the senate's commerce committee advising against the appointment of Henry Wallace as secretary of commerce but capital circles intimating that he'd be speedily o.k.'d if the RFC were taken from the department and set up in an independent agency.

To provide for just such action, the commerce committee previously had approved a bill calling for the RFC's separation from the department, with Senator George (Ga.), who sponsored the measure, declaring that congress should exercise its control over the RFC's vast operations instead of leaving them under executive discretion.

Congressional unwillingness to entrust the RFC's resources to Wallace stemmed from apprehension lest he might make use of them on government projects to provide employment in the postwar period. Exemplifying this apprehension, senate commerce committee Chairman Bailey said: ". . . He (Wallace) is for deficit financing to the nth degree. That may be all right as a temporary expedient but not as a perpetual government policy. . . ."

BRIEFS . . .

The original stockpile of 700,000 electric refrigerators frozen in February, 1942, had been reduced to 48,000 at the end of November, 1944. Hospitals and military agencies obtained them.

Labor Draft FDR's Bid For Support of Veterans

Legislation Would Signify Full Backing of War Effort; See Servicemen as Powerful Political Group.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

"If the President really intends to crack down and jam this national service bill through congress one thing is certain—he doesn't intend to run for a fifth term."

That statement made by a seasoned old-timer who is a very good political weather prophet started me off on a journey of exploration which disclosed a number of interesting observations concerning the President's plans for the next four years which can be reduced to four main points:

1. Whether or not the President believes he owes a debt to labor for the activities of the CIO Political Action committee in the last election, he doesn't intend to pay such a debt.

2. He has found a "better 'ole," and he intends to make use of it if he can, namely, another much more important pressure group which will probably be getting up steam long before the next election, but—

3. Mr. Roosevelt is not interested in the next presidential election—for himself, because—

4. He has much larger fish to fry before and after 1948, and something's cooking right now.

How can the President afford to overlook the support of labor (point 1) and hunt a "better 'ole" (point 2)?

Because the most powerful pressure group the country has ever known is now in the making, the veterans of World War II.

Election Indicates Vets' Influence

It is still too early for the men and women in the military service to wield much direct political power, but judging from the vote cast in the last election and the efforts made both to prevent and to obtain it, the prediscarge importance of veterans cannot be entirely overlooked.

Already, there are a number of very clear signs of the stirring of tremendous potentialities of the veteran in the postwar political world. At present, three hundred thousand have already joined the American Legion. We are not allowed, because of security reasons, to print the number of men already discharged, but as of some five months ago it was a million and a half. The Legion does not take any but those with honorable discharges and that would mean that World War II dischargees are joining up at about the same rate that World War I veterans became legionnaires.

The Legion has nearly a million and a half dues-paying members out of the three-million who served in the last war. If the same proportions were maintained we can envision a future veterans' organization (either the Legion or a new group) numbering at least five million persons. And that calculation is based on the armed forces as of today. By the time the war is over the number of those who will have served will be much greater.

That is looking at the potential strength of the World War II veteran pressure solely in terms of numbers. Another highly important factor must be considered. There is much evidence indicating that the present day fighting man is much more politically conscious than we were in 1917 and '18. This is seen in the discussion ("orientation") groups which are carried on by the army and navy all over the world, by the tremendous amount of news which reaches the troops even in remote corners of the world, by their constant call for more, and by their very emphatic and continued gripes about how the civilian front is being run.

I have talked with one of the editors of the present Stars and Stripes, with the head of the legislative division of the American Legion and with a member of the Veterans Administration who keeps in close touch with current veteran affairs. All agreed emphatically to the thesis that the men and women in the fighting forces will come back with a keen interest in how the country is to be run and with a firm intention of seeing that they are going to have their say in the running. This feeling is paralleled by the demands in every liberated country by the people who carried on the resistance against the enemy, who in every case demand strong representation in the new governments.

Vets Demand All-Out Effort

We can see that any man with his eye on the political future will have to woo the veteran. And that brings us back to the National Service bill.

Now one of the chief gripes of the serviceman is the fact that he is drafted to fight where and when he is told but the men who work in the war plants do not have to take orders from anybody. The sorest spot on the G.I.'s soul is the strike of the miners last year. Naturally, he thinks a labor draft law should be passed.

That is the kind of news the President wants to get out. That is one of the reasons why he wants a national service bill passed. He knows its importance to the morale of the fighting men as well as to the production of supplies. That is why he is willing to risk the anger of labor pressure against the measure. He knows that the morale of those boys now will affect their attitude toward the government when they return and their confidence in the leaders of the country.

But where, then, does point 3 (Mr. Roosevelt is not interested in the next presidential election) come in? The answer is in the "Bigger fish" he has to fry (point 4).

When an American reaches the presidency it is usually considered that he has hit the ceiling and from there on there is no place to go but down. True, the United States is a pretty big outfit to boss, but what about the United Nations? Bigger.

Whether or not the United States puts its weight behind a United Nations organization to prevent future wars will depend on the verdict of the men who know more about war than anybody else in the world, the men who are fighting this one.

And anyone who champions this undertaking, whether he is finally chosen as its leader, or whether he merely goes down in history as the man who made it possible, he will have to have the confidence and the support of the veterans, whose opinions on the subject will receive general acknowledgement, it is conceded.

Incidentally, another Roosevelt figured in one of the most ambitious efforts at international organization for the preservation of peace, "Teddy" having prompted Czar Nicholas II of Russia to call the second Hague Peace Conference of 1907.

Here is a little human interest story that will interest you if you have a boy in the service or if you are a psychiatrist.

My friend joined me in the club. He was obviously feeling very proud and happy about something. He told me he had just had a telephone call from his boy who was training to be a paratrooper. It is something to be allowed to take the training—all are volunteers. It is a lot more to make good.

Well, the boy had made his first jump from a plane. It was, he had phoned his father, just like riding on a roller-coaster. The real hard jumps, he said, were the first at about 35 feet from a tower with a cable attachment. And the fifth jump from the plane. That is the one that ends a lot of careers. Some of the toughest-fibered boys can't make that one, even if they have gone through those preceding, including the first tower jump. Then they are "washed up" as the saying goes, and they disappear.

But a lot disappear after the first jump. Men who have come back with medals for bravery in action sometimes stand there, the tears streaming down their cheeks because they just can't dive off into nothing.

But my friend's boy said it was like a roller-coaster. And as the father sat there you could see that that meant a lot to him and at last he revealed why.

"I couldn't help remembering," he said, "when the boy was about five and his older brother had just climbed up on a chair and jumped off. He got up on the chair but he just couldn't make the jump . . . now he's done it."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The day is not far distant when packages of fruit, vegetables, other foods and perishable materials will be sealed with flexible materials in the form of lacquers, adhesives and plastics.

Few sources of substitutes for natural rubber have been overlooked by U. S. scientists. In 1943 more than 2,000 varieties of plants were tested for their rubber possibilities.

Rubber-tired vehicles have been mainly responsible for the development of America's 3,000,000 miles of roads and highways — the largest and finest highway system in the world.

MENTHOLATUM

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field, Texas, and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat flying. After appealing to several Generals he is offered an opportunity to get into the fight. On arriving in India he is made a ferry pilot, but this does not suit Scott, who talks Gen. Chennault into giving him a Kittyhawk for combat flying. Soon he is flying over the skies of Burma and becomes known as the "one man air force." Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group, but he still keeps knocking Jap planes out of the skies.

CHAPTER XXVIII

It looked as if we'd get the chance very soon, too, for the field in western Yunnan had been selected by the newly formed Air Transport Command, which was superseding the Ferry Command, as the Eastern terminus of the route to China.

For the purpose of security in future operations, I will not name our base in western Yunnan. But there was a big turquoise-blue lake less than ten miles away which the General and I called Yeching. To us that meant "good hunting." To ducks and geese abounded. The landmark for our base was just one of the many lakes in Yunnan.

Next morning I went out on Lake Yeching, and from the bow of a native sampan I soon shot eighteen of the biggest geese I had ever seen. Even if we were remote from the loved ones at home, we'd have meat for Christmas dinner that was filled with the vitamins we needed.

I had hurried back to the field before taking off for Kunming with my report on the efficiency of the warning net, and was taking pictures of some little mongoi-appearing Miaows who were holding my geese aloft—when we had an air raid alert. There was heavy engine-noise from the reporting stations over towards Burma. We tossed the eighteen geese into the baggage compartment, winding their necks around among the conduits of the radio so that the cargo wouldn't shift, and I took off for Kunming. Then as I heard more reports from the Southwest, I turned South, joined the other fighters on patrol, and looked for the enemy. In about forty-five minutes we spread out to cover more territory, and I caught sight of two enemy planes—Zeros I thought, at first sight. I called to the others and attacked. Even as I approached the Japs I knew they were too slow and too large for Zeros. Then I saw that they were single-engine reconnaissance-bombers. I caught the rear one and gave it a short burst, keeping my eye on the other. The first one went down with most of one wing gone. The next I chased down every valley on the Mekong, getting in several good shots, but I never did see him go down or crash. From the evidence of the thin trail of smoke that I last saw coming from it as I dove and circled to look around again, I claimed it as a "probable." The first one I had confirmed as a "certain." The others in our patrol engaged four other planes and probably shot down two of them. The General had been correct as usual—the Japs were keeping the end of the ferry route under close surveillance.

Christmas night, while we were enjoying the geese, George Hazelett came in with his Squadron to report that the Japs had bombed our base near Lake Yeching with eighteen ships on that afternoon of Christmas Day, and the first warning the field had was the sight of the enemy bombers in the clear blue Yunnan sky. Luckily the bombing had missed the field and no ships were damaged, but many Chinese in the village had been killed. Definitely the warning net in western Yunnan made the operation of the Transport Command at Yeching hazardous. I could tell by the General's face that he had some plans he would tell me about in private.

The General had been sick with a cold over Christmas and had a fever that night, when he told me what he had to do at Yeching. At dawn the next morning—December 26th in China, but actually Christmas Day in America—I took off with full instructions. When I left, the Doctor told me General Chennault was running a temperature of 103. All of us were worried about him, and knew that the defeats on Christmas Day hadn't helped his spirits.

As I flew West towards Yeching, 145 miles away, in the half light I saw the coolies carrying drums of gasoline on wheelbarrows up the Burma Road. Some of these I knew would go on through Kunming to Chungking, 390 miles away by air. Trundling these crude wooden-wheeled vehicles of the ages gone-by, these patient workers would require seventy days of constant effort, at their dogged trot, to reach the capital at Chungking. The two-wheeled Peking carts with three drums would take a shorter time—44 days. I saw coolie boys plowing in the rice paddies halfway up the sides of the mountains—paddies built like steps from the top of the hill to the valley, so that the irrigation water could be used over and over. I laughed as I saw the ancient means of cultivation—the boy, standing with his feet on the wooden scraper, was using his own weight to make it scratch the mud, but was holding on to the water buffalo, with his hand gripping the tail of the ponderous animal.

Landing at the threatened airdrome, I put the General's plan into immediate effect.

I commandeered the necessary transportation on Yeching field and placed it ready for the instant movement of pilots to their dispersed fighters, which were scattered to all parts of the airdrome. The P-40's were pointed in the direction of a run for immediate take-off. All this was to save even the barest minimum of lost time, for when the alert came we would have to move fast and furious. Every one of the thirty pilots was kept on alert, and constant patrols were begun at dawn. We sent two ships above the field at seven o'clock and doubled the number at nine. At eleven o'clock we doubled again and continually had eight high in the sky.

The Jap had attacked the day before at 2:35 in the afternoon, or 14:35. The General had told me many times of the propensity of the Japanese for the exact duplication of former military operations. We were going to get gradually more vigilant and stronger above the field for the expected blow. At the same time we were going as far as was commensurate with safety to conserve the invaluable aviation gasoline. Most of the fighters kept right over the field or slightly away in the direction of the expected attack from Burmese bases. Four fighters began to patrol from Yeching to the Mekong, on course to Lashio and seventy miles from where we were waiting.

At two o'clock I sent all planes into the sky except mine. I sat in that on the ground, listening for Harry Pike's expected report from his patrol to the Mekong River. I was within shouting distance of the ground radio operator, who would tell me of any developments on the weak-functioning warning net. The Jap would come today, I knew, between two and four—that's 14:00 to 16:00 hours.

At 14:54 I saw the radio operator wildly running for my ship. He yelled, "Report from W-7 says heavy engine noise coming this way—the report is right recent." I was already energizing my starter when Harry Pike called excitedly: "Here they come—fighters and bombers—I'm just east of the river." I knew then that the Japs were close to fifty miles away; we had all we could do to get set and be waiting for them.

When Pike called in, as I got the engine started, I heard that the Japs were at seventeen thousand, and I called to him to take the fighters, for I hoped by that move to make the bombers come in unescorted. From Yeching at its level of 6500 feet I was climbing with full gun, climbing for all the altitude I could grab. I watched the temperature but drew all the boost I could without detonating too badly. At exactly three o'clock I reached twenty thousand feet and picked up most of my Group, which today was made up of Hazelett's Squadron.

Just six minutes from the time I had given the ship the gun, I saw flashes reflected by Japanese windshields in the sun. They weren't far away, but I grinned—for they were below us. I heard from the chatter on our frequency that there was a fight going on towards where Pike had seen the formation cross the river. As the enemy ships materialized on the horizon, I knew that Pike had done his job well, for there was only one fighter with the bombers as escort—one fighter with nine heavy bombers. I think I knew then that we were going to make it tough for the Japs.

I called for the attack, in order to get the enemy before he could bomb the field. As I dove for the attack that I had always longed for, I saw one P-40 take the lone Zero head-on and shoot it down, and I knew from the way the shark-nosed ship pulled up in his chandelle of glory that Dallas Clinger had become an ace with his fifth enemy ship.

We made the attack from three directions simultaneously. Lieutenant Couch led his ships on a stern attack that I did not see, for I was diving on the course of the bombers from the flank where the low sun was. I was going in for a full-deflection shot from out of that sun, for I had planned this method of how I wanted to attack a bomber formation long ago. On my wings were six fighters in two ship elements. In Couch's flight were four fighters, and Hazelett had four coming from above the Japs on the other flank.

I had to dive from 20,000 feet to 17,000 feet to get on the level with the enemy formation, and when I got there I had plenty of excess speed over the Japs. I passed them rapidly from out of their range, but could see their tracers curving short of my flight. When I had overrun them a thousand yards, I turned right into the bombers and we went after the three Vee's of Mitsubishi bombers. By being on the same level with them I'm sure we caused part of the enemy formation to blanket out some of their own ships from firing at us. I opened fire from six hundred yards and led the enemy leader by at least a hundred yards; it must have been just right, for the tracers seemed to go into the top of the wing. I just held the trigger down and kept going into the sides of the Japs—they blossomed out of the sky at me, growing larger and larger, "mushrooming" in my windshield. As the bombers passed by, my bullets were raking them with full-deflection shots, and as fast as my formation turned the other five men were doing the same. I saw the lead bomber climb a little, then settle back towards the formation with one wing down.

As I saw the second Jap in front of me—the left wing man of the leader—I realized I'd have to dive under the enemy very soon or I'd run into them. Things hit my ship now, and with noise like a wing coming off, the side glass of my windshield was shot out. I was three hundred to two hundred yards from the second bomber when I got my long burst into it. There was a flash ahead, and I dove as fast as I could shove the nose down. As I went under the smoke and orange flame, I thought that the Jap I was shooting at had caught fire, but as I pulled around, back to the direction the formation had been going, and climbed, I saw what had happened.

There was only smoke above, and the formation had broken, for I knew the bomber had exploded — the bombs had been detonated by the fifty-calibre fire. Behind, over the trail the Japs had come were four plumes of smoke where their bombers were going down. Below there were bomb bursts all over the paddy fields where bombs had been jettisoned in the unanticipated interception. I pulled up behind one of the lone bombers that I could see and began to shoot at it methodically from long range. Over on the left were three more, and I saw P-40's making passes at them. Over the radio I could hear happy American English, with unauthorized swear words aimed at the Jap that the individual pilot was shooting at, and by the tone of the pilots I knew that we were winning this battle and that the General was also going to be very happy.

From 800 yards I'd squeeze out a short burst at one engine, then skid over and aim carefully at the other engine and throw out another short burst. The Jap ship was diving with all the speed he could get, but the P-40 kept moving up. I think all their ammunition was gone, for I saw no tracers. In my second burst on the right engine I saw some gray smoke—thin, like gasoline overflowing a tank and blowing back into the slipstream. The next time I came over behind that engine from closer range I saw two red dots near the engine, two dots that became fire. The flame ran to the engine and to the fuselage, but by that time I was over shooting at the other engine again. I last saw the bomber diving, with flames that were orange against the green of the mountains below.

There were no more bombers to be seen, but I saw seven P-40's. Clinger came over and got on my wing; as I recognized his ship I slid my hatch-cover back and waved at him. Even before we landed I thought that we had gotten all the bombers. As we circled the field, with me trying to dodge the cold air that was knifing through the hole in my windshield and bringing a particle of glass against my face every now and then, I realized why we still had to wear goggles in fighter ships in combat. Below on the Yunnan hills, I saw eight forest-fires that could have been started only by burning airplane wrecks, for they had not been there when I took off.

I kept some of the planes up for top-cover while we landed those that were shot up or low on fuel. Later, when I had the combat reports made out before the pilots could talk the battle over between them, the "certains" out of the nineteen that had come in—nine fighters and nine bombers and one observation plane—were fifteen.

Van Loon Was Happy to Make Up the Difference

Historian Henrik Willem van Loon attended a birthday party in his honor. He was delighted to discover many celebrities present.

"May I have your autograph?" the writer asked Toscanini.

"Of course," laughed the musician as he scribbled his name.

"Here, you take my autograph in exchange," urged Van Loon, pressing a slip of paper and a coin into the maestro's hand.

"What is this 25 cents for?" asked Toscanini, puzzled.

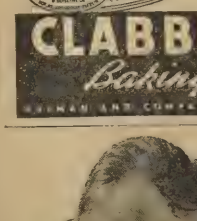
"That's your change," replied Van Loon. 'My autograph is worth 50 cents these days. I hear yours is valued at 75 cents."

This Home-Mixed Cough Syrup Is Most Effective

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.



This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough relief. Promptly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easy. You've never seen anything better for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second-class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897

MRS. MARK L. TUCKER, Owner R. M. TUCKER, M'g'n.-Ed

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

FOR WHOM THEY DIE—

Men are dying in the Phillippines and in the white frozen ground of Germany. Young men who have had to taste life quickly and fiercely and very lovingly. So in Love with life that every nerve and muscle aches with the desire to live, they still face death bravely and with heartbreaking resignation.

And we are those for whom they have died.

Who are we and what are we that we can bear these sacrifices being hourly made for us? Many of us seem hardly conscious that it is any special privilege to be alive. To be alive under the sky and free and whole: that is the gift these men are handing us every instant we breathe.

There is no measuring such a gift in times like these.

Yet we gripe as we always have about the weather and the scarcities, taxes and bureaucracy. Our lives, preserved at so costly a sacrifice, are filled with trivial concerns. Many of us grow tired of it all, complain bitterly of being fed up with this or that, often with life itself.

Suppose then that all the cluttering things like soft rugs and shining tables were swept away. Imagine us, as are so many poor souls of Europe, left with nothing but the stars overhead at night and the cold earth under our bleeding feet. Would not life then, bare and terror-filled, become to us yet so precious that we would cling to it as a dog clings to its master? Would we not value it as we value our possessions today? Our soldiers would be close to us and forever in our hearts. We would face martyrdom for them, or even perhaps death. Must we then lose our souls before they are ours? Must we first face death in order more fervently to embrace life?

Yet we are those for whom they die.—Montgomery Advertiser.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Oh, give me blonds, lots of blonds. 'neith the starry skies above, don't [illegible] in May, everybody is singing.

Jim Levine reminds us to remind you that all stores are closed each Wednesday afternoon through Aug. 1945. Keep this in mind and do your shopping accordingly. The CHILTON COUNTY NEWS has printed small cards for the purpose of hanging in your store and in your front door, reminding all of this fact, and if you will call at our office, we will gladly supply you with the same. Think nothing of it -- courtesy of Folks and Things.

We do not believe that the old Ground-Hog saw his shadow last Friday, February 2nd. That means an early spring and boy, are we ready for it.

A colored warrior was explaining Jujitsu to a friend.

"It's jes a mean, lowdown kind o' wrasslin' you might know a Jap'd think up. When you gits t' close-in fightin' you exten's the glad hand o' fellowship t' the enemy, and whilst yo' is shaking han's yo' sprains his ankle, so he can't run whilst yo' breaks his neck."

Mrs. S A Jones had a most interesting paper this week. She received it from her brother, who is in Holland. It was the "All American Paraglide." A souvenir of Nijmegen, it bore the greeting: "Dutch patriots give brochure to "All American" liberators. This paper is made available to troops of the 82nd All American Airborne Division and their families through the generosity of citizens of Nijmegen, Netherlands." Come to think of it we have a very good friend in the "All American" Division, one Marvin Ellison.

Gordon Dunavant is home on furlough. He was telling us the other day about running into Guy McKee in Hawaii. Having a vivid imagination we can easily picture in our minds the meeting. We can also picture Guy and Gordon making the rounds in that far distant land. Gordon says they had some times t together. Our imagination tells us that, that is putting it mild. It wouldn't surprise us if after Gordon and Guy left, they didn't have to put the Island back together And the day after those two left, should the Japs have flown over again, they would have looked down and said, "Dam Island one blig mess. Don't know whether earthquake stlike, or Guy McKee and Gordon Dunnavant been here."

We like that "public address" system that Millard Lancaster has at the Bus Station. We were dining there this week when someone wanted us on the telephone. Did Millard come after us? He did not. He just took the loud speaker and said, "Mr. Tucker wanted on the telephone." As we said, we like that public address system -- and especially did we like that "Mr."

You know you'ed be suprised who you run into dining out. We have an "Old American Custom" of dining at home, but, there was ex-mayor Cohen Stapp, Rose Farley and the husband, our good friend S E Scott dining alone, another favorite of ours. Dovie Armstrong, grabbing a late snack, -- boy what a snack. Later bumped into an old friend, Sgt. Bernice Vance. Bernice is reporting this week to Redistribution Center, at Miami, and really glad to be returning to active duty. You know he has been in the hospital for several months. L J Stewart was there waiting for a bus to take him away from Clanton. He's moving to the Magic City. Hate to see him and his, go. Very, very fine people. All Clanton and Chilton County will miss the L J Stewarts. Mrs. Sophia Jones was in, and out, for lunch. But doggone it, if Millard Lancaster is going to call us "Mr. Tucker" on his public adress system, we're going to eat there regular.

UNDERGROUND SAVES CLANTON AIRMAN AFTER ACK-ACK IGNITES SHIP

An airman who owes his life to effecient underground workers was in Clanton this week on furlough, visiting brothers and sisters. He had only a slight limp from the leg he broke parachuting from a burning transport plane over Nazi-held territory, as outward reminder of real life thrills in the European theatre.

Visiting his brother here, Marvin Durbin, Tech. Sgt. Woodrow Durbin is a veteran of more than 1,100 hours of flying through combat areas as aerial engineer on an unarmed transport plane that ferried supplies and men to troops in Greenland, Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Belgium and Holland.

Young Durbin reached the climax of his 26 months of overseas duty with the crash of the C-47, on which he was an engineer, into enemy territory.

"We were hit by enemy ground fire before we even had a chance to drop our load of paratroops," Sgt. Durbin said i nan interview this week. "I was at my station in the back, and felt the plane being shaken, so I looked to see if the gas tanks had been hit by the explosion.

"When I saw fire coming out of them, I called the pilot over the interphone to tell him. As soon as he learned that the damage was so serious, and that the gas tanks were burning, he gave the order to jump, and pushed the bail-out bell, the sound of which can be plainly hear above the noise of the motors.

"We had enough altitude for everybody to bail out—even the one wounded man aboard. One of the paratroopers had been hit in the arm and was so nervous that he refused to jump. We kenw, however, that he would be killed in the burning plane if he didn't bail out, so we picked him up and threw him out. He got to ground safely, as all of us did."

On this one and only forced parachute jump, Sgt. Durbin automaticlly became a member of the Caterpillar Club—though a broken leg was the price. He and other members of the plane's crew scattered, and all of them were later picked up by the underground, given medical treatment and helped back to Allied lines.

Sgt. Durbin is one of the comparatively few members of another Army Club, with membership composed of all men who walk out of enemy territory, and whose emblem is the Evader Boot, a white boot embroidered on the dark background of a small badge.

After escaping through the underground, Durbin was brought from England back to the States. He will report to Maimi at the end of his leave, which he is spending with his sisters and brother. In addition to three Combat Stars, and the Purple Heart, he wears the Air Medal for work done by his plane as the lead ship of their elem[illegible] of Normandy, and the Presidential Unit Citation won with [illegible] of his unit for outsta[illegible] ment in that action.

Mac Junior (with visitors present)—Dad, may I have a dime?

Mac Senior—Why, sure, son.

Mac Junior—And this time you won't make me give it back after the company's gone, will you?

Occasional Headaches

The strong man was explaining his act to his agent.

"I place a heavy stone on my head," he asserted, "and then my assistant picks up a 16-pound sledge hammer, swings it with all his might — and cracks the stone in half."

The agent grew dizzy at the thought.

"That's marvelous," he enthused. "But, how about your head—don't you ever feel it?"

The strong man waved a hand.

"Yes," he admitted. "That's why I carry aspirins!"

Socko!

Maisie—At the dance, I won the prize for being the homeliest girl.

Daisie—Why did you go to the dance?

Maisie—Because I thought you'd be there.

But Is It Meat?

Diner—And how do you account for this piece of rubber I found in the meat pie?

Waiter—That just goes to prove the motor car is replacing the horse everywhere.

UNIVERSAL has given us something more than a topnotch picture in "The Suspect"; we get food for thought right along with abundant entertainment. A man commits two murders, and has such good reasons for doing so that you can't bear to have him punished. You keep rewriting the ending, figuring out ways of saving him. Charles Laughton gives one of the best performances of his life; Ella Raines is excellent, Molly Lamont caused men spectators to ask

CHARLES LAUGHTON

"Who is she?" Robert Siodmak's direction couldn't be improved upon. It's a picture with murder but no horror, a picture with charm and beauty. No matter what movies 1945 brings, "The Suspect" will be one of the best.

Bette Davis is back in Hollywood after quite an absence, to begin story conferences on her next picture, "Stolen Life." The picture is set to go before the cameras early in February, with Curtis Bernhardt directing.

When Martha Holliday reached Hollywood, after dancing in night clubs, she was made assistant dance director. She had to give up the job and go over to RKO to satisfy her desire to act; she'll act and dance too in "George White's Scandals," starring Joan Davis and Jack Haley. RKO likes to push promising newcomers along, and give them a whack at really important roles.

Lauritz Melchior, who makes his screen debut in "Thrill of a Romance," Metro picture starring Van Johnson and Esther Williams, has signed a new contract with the studio. The famous singer has an important singing role in "Brighton Beach."

Shortly before the war, when the U. S. fleet was on maneuvers, Art Linkletter ("House Party," CBS) almost broadcast a unit of the navy into a general court martial. When word came that the fleet was due in San Diego harbor, he arranged to broadcast its arrival from a motor launch. Fog delayed the fleet some miles away, and it anchored, but Art didn't know that. He broadcast his script—and the Admiral, listening in, thought his orders to anchor had been disobeyed, and was ready to court martial all offenders. Art can laugh about it now.

Boris Karloff recently completed "The Body Snatcher" and "Isle of the Dead" for RKO, and is booked to go right on scaring us into shivers. The studio has signed him to make three horror pictures during the next two years.

When Phil Kramer, NBC comedian, tried out for his first radio show, with Edward G. Robinson in "Big Town," Robinson stopped him and said severely, "Don't clown, young man. Use your natural voice." The only trouble was that Kramer was using his natural voice. He was doing all right in pictures till his vocal chords tightened up, the after-effect of an illness; his comedy voice resulted.

That baby on the "Eddie Cantor Show," "Eddie Canton Von Zell," is a handsome chap of about 30, who's probably the only male baby impersonator on the air. His name is Billy Gray, and as a pioneer in his profession he deserves a rattle, at least.

Barry Fitzgerald played his role as Bing Crosby's father in Paramount's "Duffy's Tavern" with his hand in a cast; he broke a finger the night before he started work on the picture. That man could give a fine performance even if he had a broken neck!

ODDS AND ENDS—Ellery Queen, gentleman sleuth of the CBS series bearing his name, has a new "Nikki," Barbara Terrell. . . . When Lieut. Robert Taylor was a guest on the Kate Smith hour, his wife, Barbara Stanwyck, watched the program from the client's booth. . . . One of New York's big department stores is featuring a dress named "Gaslight Gayeties," named for the radio show starring Beatrice Kay and Michael O'Shea. . . . Sonja Henie's highly-trained feet are among the smallest in Hollywood; she wears a size 3½ shoe. . . . Alan Ladd once played six characters on a radio show, that was when he was trying to get his start as an actor; and he did it well, too.

Bet on the APO

By MARION TAYLOR

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

I DON'T know by what stroke of fortune three boys who grew up together in the same little town of Prairie Junction, Iowa, should land in the same flying outfit in the Pacific, but here we are. And one of us has become an ace with more knocked-out enemy planes to his credit than any other Yank in this theater. That's Roger Barnes. But Tom Norris still has the handsomest face and the most devilish eyes and the most broken hearts along his trail of all men on our island. That is, he did until Roger's fame and daring made headlines in most of the American newspapers.

Roge is a big fellow, awkward and shy as a newborn colt. That's why he never even had a girl back in the old home town, I guess. Although I know plenty who would have been glad enough to step out with him, if he'd given them a chance. Especially Polly Meacham. And Roger was plenty fond of Polly, too. But the only time he ever scraped up enough nerve to ask her for a date, she already had one with Tom Norris. And he was too darn bashful ever to ask her again.

For weeks Tom had been bragging about getting the most letters from dames of all the guys in our gang. On the other hand, Roge probably got the least mail of all of us. But after all those high-powered write-ups about Roge and his bravery, and his Gary Cooperish face appeared in all the newspapers and magazines, things sure changed.

"Dearest Roger," it said.

Of course the fellows in our tent weren't slow to let Tom know that there was one guy in the outfit getting more mail from dames than he was. Tom bet Roge two hundred dollars that, given a month's time, he could still be top man so far as such missives were concerned. Roge took him up, stipulating that everything must be on the up and up or the wager would be off.

I offered to help Roge with his answers, and didn't spare the roses, I described the moonlight and the wide sweep of sand and said how lonely I was, and how I wished they were here beside me, and we signed Roge's name. And the results were good.

But the strangest thing was that letters started pouring in by the bucketful for Tom, too. He let us examine them, and they all seemed to be the McCoy.

The worst of it was that there was a letter to him from Polly Meacham. Beside those she sent poor old Roge, it sizzled and scorched.

Things went on like this for a while, with Tom gradually nosing Roger out.

I dropped a personal note to Polly, telling her about the bet and how Roge really loved her and asking her please to do a little sleuthing about Tom at her end.

Two days before the month ended, Roger sat on his bunk reading a long letter from Polly with smiles chasing themselves all over his face. And, after he had finished, he handed it to me with a wide, bashful grin.

"Dearest Roger," it said. "Yes, I'm going to begin my letter that way because I've been in love with you almost forever, and I think you care a little about me.

"But I have another important thing to take up with you first. The bet you made with Tom Norris.

"About a month ago a letter came from Tom, asking me to marry him. Naturally I was flabbergasted. But men are pretty scarce here, and your notes were pretty stiff and formal, so I wasn't too definite in my refusal. I—well, I thought I'd stall a bit.

"One afternoon at the Red Cross Lucy Beemis came in, her face shining like a Christmas candle. 'Girls,' she shouted, 'I'm engaged to Tom Norris and I want you to be the first to know it.'

"'Like heck you are,' glared Gertie Simons. 'He just proposed to me via air mail, and I accepted him.'

"There were ten girls in that one group Tom had proposed to by A.P.O.

"So, Roge, you really win. You can tell the boys that Tom violated the terms of the agreement by asking more than fifty girls to marry him just to beat the bet on the A.P.O. . . ."

Dutch Designs for Painting, Stenciling

BRIGHT designs in typical Dutch colorings are just the thing to decorate your kitchen cupboards, the chair or table you have just repainted or that old chest of drawers in the children's room. Never mind if you are not a free-hand artist, you can cut a stencil for the most difficult parts or just trace outlines and then fill them in.

Here is a set of designs especially planned so that you will have no difficulty in using them either for stencils or tracing. Tulips, hearts, flowers, fruits, borders and other motifs large and small—even the dove of peace with an olive branch is included. The designs may be used again and again and, if you are not satisfied with your first effort, all you have to do is to paint it out and start over.

WHY QUINTUPLETS use this great rub for SORE THROAT COUGHS for the COLDS
Wonderful for Grown-Ups, Too!
Ever since they were tiny tots—whenever the Quintuplets catch cold—their chests, throats and backs are immediately rubbed with Musterole.
Musterole gives such blessed prompt relief because it's more than just an ordinary "salve." It's what so many Doctors and Nurses call a modern counter-irritant. It not only relieves coughs, sore throat, aching chest muscles due to colds, makes breathing easier—but it actually helps break up congestion in upper bronchial tract, nose and throat.
And Musterole is so much easier to apply than a mustard plaster. White, Stainless. Just rub it on! No fuss. No muss with Musterole!
IN 3 STRENGTHS: Children's Mild Musterole, Regular, and Extra Strong.

Alabama Power Company to Build Model Village for its Coal Mine Employees

Above is landscape architect W. H. Kessler's layout of a portion of a model coal mine village to be built in Walker County by Alabama Power Company for its Gorgas coal mine employees. Insert shows sketch, by Miller, Martin & Lewis, architects, Birmingham, of one of the proposed homes. Each house will have running water, sanitary facilities, bath room and other modern conveniences, and will be located on a plot of approximately an acre.

This is part of the substantial program by the Power Company to provide additional housing facilities and to improve housing and living conditions for its employees at Gorgas Mine and Gorgas Steam Plant which is one of the largest steam electric generating plants in the Southeast, consuming about 3,400 tons of coal per day when operating at capacity. Total employment at the mine and steam plant is 575.

The cost of the improvements, including streets, water and electric systems and sanitary facilities will be approximately a half a million dollars. "We will not wait," said T. W Martin, president of Alabama Power Company, "until the entire project can be built as a unit, but will build as materials and skilled help become available. We hope to start construction of some houses as soon as weather permits." When built, the homes will be offered for sale on easy terms to the Company's employees.

The new community will offer city advantages in a rural setting. Employment will be nearby; reasonable local shopping facilities exist, and those of Jasper and Birmingham can be reached over good roads. Churches and schools to minister to the spiritual and educational needs are already established near the new community, and energetic efforts are under way to bring about construction of a new centralized school.

The setting, near Goodsprings, Alabama, is one of the kind that for years artists and writers have painted and written about. One interested in outdoor sports such as fishing and hunting can enjoy himself to his heart's content almost at his back door because the Warrior river abounds in fish; the rugged and beautiful hills surrounding have sufficient small game to give one repeated week-ends of hunting.

On the economic side, garden and poultry enthusiasts will be able to indulge in those hobbies without being cramped for space and on the good gardening soil can produce on a scale which will go far toward keeping the family pantry well supplied at low cost.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

The long train on which I was traveling stopped at an inland station and as I looked down the string of coaches I could see men with lanterns as they moved along, examining the wheels. In the darkness I heard a man say, "It is alright here." Another and another voice sounded, "It is alright here", and then the conductor waved the engineer to go ahead. My friends, examine every part of your character and life and see if it is all right. If you find no trouble, then go ahead. Take no risk. See that the rolling stock of life is functioning.

There was a clear, cool spring in a farmer's field, but he was so selfish that he woul dnot let his neighbors come and drink of his water. The land was parching and wells were dry in all directions, but this man refused to let the villagers cross his land-line for water. You say that he did not merit the ownership of that well. Think for a moment about yourself. Do you not have something that is needed by your fellowman, and yet you refuse to give it. It may be a kind word, it may be some kind of talent, it may be a crumb of bread. Why be so selfish in a world that has in it so much need?

One night a bright young man was lifting a glass to his lips in a low saloon, when the bar-keeper chirped out, "Young man, you never tasted anything in your life better than that." From i nthe corner where a drunken sot lay on a pile of rags came this answer, "That is a lie sir, the water that young man drank from his fathers well, tasted better than that." Memory came to the young man's mind and he set the glass down and walked out of the saloon. That night he wrote that old poem, "The Old Oaken Bucket," Perhaps you did not know this story of that poem.

How to INCREASE ALABAMA FARM INCOME

Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station's Farm-Size Experiments Point the Way

Chickens?

Yes but in suitable numbers, depending on your market for eggs and meat.

Cotton?

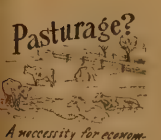
Yes, but not too much.

Cows?

Sure, how many and kind depends on type farm and market etc

Hogs?

Certainly, but not too many for your type of farm.



Electrical Equipment?

Only as much as will pay its way in labor saving, increased production, preservation of produce.

Home Garden?

By all means- adequate to be determined by family requirements.

Pasturage?

A necessity for economical live stock production.

Hay and Grain Crops?

Enough to supply farm livestock needs.

FOR YEARS the Agricultural Experiment Station has been conducting experiments to determine the requirements for successful production of suitable crops on the various soils of Alabama. Drawing upon these results, this Station several years ago began farm-size experiments to combine land, crops, livestock and labor into systems of operations. In this type of experiment, the Alabama Station has gone several steps farther than customary field plot work, the aim of which is greater income for Alabama farms.

For example, at one location it combines cotton, corn, hogs, improved pastures, and temporary grazing, the income from which was practically double the average income of the same size farms in the State during the same years. At another one of these farms, the Station put together cotton, poultry, feed crops, and some meat animals to greatly increase the income. At still another, cotton, peanuts, corn, and hogs are combined.

The results of these experiments are impressive. The use of similar methods by Alabama farmers generally can have no other result than to gradually increase the income of Alabama farmers and to equip them to meet the threat of probable future dwindling cotton markets.

Alabama Power Company realizes that the future welfare of Alabama agriculture depends not only on industrial development but also on the practical application to Alabama farms of practices similar to those so successfully applied by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station in its farm-size experiments. Therefore, in a series of advertisements which will appear from time to time during this year, we will outline these experiments to assist in giving them broad publicity.

The Great Pasteur

Never Saw Chile's Nitrate Desert, But...

His bacterial research, which gave his name to the pasteurization process, provided the basis for one of the widely accepted explanations of Chilean Nitrate's origin.

VAST beds of Natural Nitrate in Chile's desert region are natural deposits—enough to last hundreds of years—of one of the oldest and best known fertilizer materials. Mystery of their origin long has challenged science. Many theories have developed.

Some say prehistoric plants were "nitrified" by bacteria in the soil. That's what Pasteur's work suggested. Others say they are decayed vegetation.

There is a belief the nitrate beds are droppings of billions of birds. Another, that electricity formed them through centuries of violent storms. Some think the beds are rotted rocks; some think they are a crust pushed up from underneath.

Perhaps the right theory combines parts of all of them. Who knows? But there is one point on which all agree:

Chilean Nitrate of Soda was created by tremendous natural processes. It is completely natural . . . the only natural nitrate in the world.

Because of its natural origin, Chilean Nitrate of Soda contains, in addition to nitrogen and sodium, small amounts of boron, iodine, manganese, copper,—34 elements in all—many of which are essential to healthy plant growth.

Yes, a hundred years of research and experience agree on the importance of Chilean Nitrate's natural qualities and their outstanding performance in continued profitable farming.

Easy to Handle . . . Easy to Use

Natural Chilean Nitrate comes in two forms—Champion brand and Old Style. It reaches you in fine mechanical condition, in even-weight bags, for easy storage and handling.

JESUS AND THE TWELVE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 10:1, 5-8; 11:1, 25-30.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15:14.

Service for Christ has not always been as impressive and effective as it should be because it has lacked conviction and spiritual power. God did not intend it to be the weak and faltering thing that it often is, because of our failure to go God's way.

The sending out of the twelve had special significance, and yet it brings forth principles which have a bearing on the service of every believer in Christ.

The Servants of Christ—

I. Have a Divine Commission (10: 1, 5-8).

The twelve disciples had already been called into the Lord's service. Now they were to be prepared for the service which was ahead. It was a time of commissioning and empowerment for service.

God calls men today to serve Him. In fact, there is a very real sense in which every Christian is called to serve. Let no one try to excuse himself from that responsibility and privilege.

To some comes a special call to leave their accustomed daily work and launch out into a broader service for Christ. When that time comes, we may go forth with the assurance that the power of a divine Saviour goes with us. The twelve disciples had some special powers which we do not have and do not need. God suits the power to the need, and that means that in every circumstance we may look to Him with assurance, and go on.

One of our difficulties in dealing with such matters as spiritual power is that we interpret the things of the realm of the spirit by physical standards and measurements. We are so quick to say "I cannot" on the basis of our logical human reasoning, when an appreciation of the power of God which is operative on our behalf would make us say with confidence, "I can." But, sadly enough, having left God out of our reckoning, we find that it is indeed true that we cannot.

Serving Christ means doing so in His power, and with His grace upon us. Nothing less will do! Nothing more is needed!

II. Declare a Divine Revelation (11:1, 25-27).

The messenger's responsibility and importance are largely determined by the nature of the message he has to convey. Particularly is that true where the message must pass through his personality and thus be proclaimed. The nations of the earth choose their most able men to be their ambassadors and grant them full power.

The glorious thing about being a messenger for God is that we carry no ordinary communication. What we have to present is far above the most important message any earthly ambassador could possibly have to carry.

We, the children and servants of God through Jesus Christ, have something direct from the throne of God. He has revealed it (v. 25), and it seemed good in His sight to give it to those who had the childlike faith to believe Him.

God's revelation is hidden from those who are wise in their own conceits, who are too proud to come by way of humility and faith. Thank God, some of the wise and mighty of this world have been willing to become as little children and learn at the feet of Jesus.

The encouraging thing about it is that the door is open to the simplest believer to trust God, to take the revelation of God's truth in His word, and give it out with grace and power.

III. Extend a Divine Invitation (11:28-30).

"Come"—what a blessed word for the needy and sinful! They are not to be shut out by their sin, nor to be hindered by their weakness. The door is open, and the invitation is to come. Why not respond?

To whom are they to come? To Jesus. There are times when men can help us, when friends or church officers or the pastor can give us an uplifting word of counsel and encouragement. But for salvation, for a real lifting of the burden from the shoulders of those "that labor and are heavy laden," there is no one like Jesus.

We are privileged to invite people to Jesus, knowing that if they "learn" of Him (v. 29), they will not only have their loads lifted and find rest, but will enter into a blessed yoke, fellowship with Him in life and service.

His is a wholesome or a kindly yoke. That is the meaning of "easy" in verse 30. It is not always easy to serve Christ, but being yoked with Him in a kindly fellowship of service makes the burden light.

The world is full of tired and discouraged people. We who know Christ have the adequate answer to their need. Shall we not go in His name to present the truth to them and invite them to come to Christ?

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Crown the Table With Unrationed Foods
(See Recipes Below)

Menu Makin's

Meal fixin's are a problem these days when foods are scarce or carry a high point value. Today all of us are going hunting for foods that are within easy reach, and easy to fix.

With no points to spare, no time to waste, today's housewife perches her thinking cap neatly on her head and goes right to work. If she can't have fancy foods—or even hearty substantial ones she's accustomed to having, she's going to take what's available, stir in a dash of her ready imagination and come forth with something that will do much better than just tide the family over.

The War Food administration urges her to fix fish, and since there are ways to prepare fish delectably, Our Mrs. America will do it. A scrap left over from the roast? She can disguise it so well, that even she will not know it's made over.

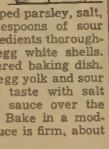
When you make use of these fish recipes which I've collected for you, you can serve good food at a point-saving:

Halibut a la King.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds boiled halibut
6 slices toast
5 tablespoons fat
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup sliced, stuffed olives
4 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon onion juice
1 teaspoon vinegar
½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce

Arrange mounds of finely flaked fish on toast and mask with the following sauce: Melt 2 tablespoons of the fat and blend in flour and salt. Stir until frothy, add milk and stir until sauce boils. Set over hot water. Cream remaining fat with yolks of eggs which have been beaten, onion juice, vinegar, paprika, worcestershire sauce, and stir into hot mixture. Continue stirring until egg is set, then add olives, chopped. Pour sauce over fish and serve.

Baked Stuffed Fish.



1 medium sized fish (whitefish, haddock, carp, flounder, pike)
Salt and pepper
Flour
6 strips bacon
1 small can of tomato soup
1 cup water

Wash fish carefully in cold water, dry and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Stuff, sew up with twine and place in a pan. Dredge lightly with flour and place several strips of bacon over the top. Add enough water to keep from scorching, about ½ cupful. Baste frequently with water. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for about 1 hour. Serve with tomato soup, thickened with a small amount of flour.

Baked Stuffed Eggs and Salmon.
(Serves 5)

10 hard-cooked eggs
1 can salmon
1 tablespoon melted butter
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 raw egg yolks
1 cup sour cream

Remove shells from eggs. Cut off both ends and carefully remove the yolks from the rounded end. Chop finely the salmon, yolks and pieces of white that were cut off. Add the melted butter, one of the raw egg yolks, chopped parsley, salt, pepper and 2 tablespoons of sour cream. Mix all ingredients thoroughly and heap into egg white shells. Place eggs in buttered baking dish. Mix the remaining egg yolk and sour cream. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour sauce over the eggs and salmon. Bake in a moderate oven until sauce is firm, about 25 to 30 minutes.

There are some meats for which points will not have to be spent. Here are recipes for some of them:

Boiled Smoked Tongue.

1 smoked tongue
Cold water to cover
6 bay leaves
1 teaspoon whole pepper
1 teaspoon cloves
1 onion, sliced

Wash the tongue, and if salty, soak in cold water overnight. Place in kettle with seasonings and let simmer slowly until tender, from three to five hours, or until skin curls back. Then remove from the brine, pull off outer skin, cut off root and let cool in the brine. This may be served hot or cold with horseradish sauce.

Sweetbreads, Broiled.
(Serves 5)

1 pound sweetbreads
½ cup chili sauce
6 to 7 tablespoons bacon drippings
Celery, parsley, lemon and onion

Soak sweetbreads in water for 20 minutes. Cook in boiling, salted water for 20 minutes with a bit of celery, onion, parsley and lemon. Let cool in liquid. Drain; place in shallow pan and pour over melted drippings and chili sauce. Broil about 20 minutes, turning occasionally. Serve in a rice ring or with mushrooms, broiled, if desired.

Kidneys.
(Serves 4)

6 lamb kidneys or
4 veal kidneys
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons fat or drippings
1 tablespoon onion, minced
Brown sauce

Plunge kidneys in boiling water, remove skins and soak in cold salted water for 20 minutes. Slice kidneys, remove tubes and tissue and season with salt and pepper. Heat fat and add onion. Add kidneys and let cook for 5 minutes. Serve with brown sauce.

Lynn Says:

Ration Pointers: Baked stuffed heart is a rare treat. Make your favorite bread stuffing and sew it up in the cavity. Bake heart in tomato sauce for extra flavor.

Lamb patties are delicious and make a quick easy meal. Wrap the patties with bacon and broil until browned on both sides. Halves of fresh pears may be sprinkled with cinnamon and butter and broiled along with the patties.

Veal stew is a delicious supper dish. Make with plenty of colorful vegetables riding on top of the smooth gravy and top it off with some light, fluffy dumplings. When ready to serve, stir soured cream into the thickened gravy.

Pork liver is richest of all the liver in food value. It contains an excellent supply of thiamin.

Lamb tongues are tender and delicious. Serve them with a dinner of baked noodles and creamed spinach.

Surviving is one daughter, Bertha Hobson, Brent, Ala. Two brothers, Sam of Jemison and Jim of Randolph.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH—THORSBY

The World Day of Prayer service will be held at 3 p. m. on Friday. Everyone is invited. This is an interdenominational enterprise which every christian should share in. It is our opportunity to join in prayer with millions of others around the world.

The Linten season of six weeks before Easter has begun. It is a growing custom in this period to read our Bible and pray every day. "The Fellowship of Prayer" will be given to all who wish to follow this devotional outline.

The services next Sunday will be held at the usual hours. Values of the Bible will be considered in the morning Worship. "Am I My Brother's Keeper" will be the text of the evening Service.

On next Wednesday at 7:30 the prayer meeting will be held in the Fellowship Room of the church unless the weather is extremely cold. If cold in the Studio Cottage. The church cabinet will meet at eight o'clock.

JOINT F F A AND FHA GATHERING

The Future Farmers of America and the Future Homemakers of America had a joint Valentine Party in the gymnasium of the Chilton County High School, Friday night, February 9. The Agriculture Teacher, Mr. Tyler, and the Home-Economics teacher, Mrs Kinney, and several other teachers attended.

Every person was given a valentine on the back of which was an immitation for each to do. These were used to match partners for the grand march which immediately followed.

The refreshments were prepared by the Home-Economics girls which, as everyone knows, would make any party a success.

All beginners and old dancers alike enjoyed the hour of dancing, which brought the party to a close.

The members of both clubs are already looking forward to the spring social which will be held later in the school term.

TRIBUTE PAID TO NATIONS PRODUCERS

Chilton County residents who played a part in the job of growing, conserving, harvesting, distributing and processing the state's food supply should be inspired by the following tribute paid to the nation's producers, points out Mattie Jo Barber, Home Demonstration Agent.

"As we enter a new year, the demands for our food at home and abroad are so great that it is essential for every man and woman to do everything to help in the huge task of getting the food produced and seeing that it is conserved and shared," emphasized President Roosevelt. "Many of our favorite foods are scarce.

"To this end, I ask the people in cities, towns and villages to assist our former in every possible way to reach the food goals which have been set for this year.

"I call upon the millions of victory gardeners who have done so much to swell the nation's food supply in these war years to continue their good work.

"I ask those people who can spare the time to assist the nation's food processors in the task of preparing the food for our armed services, our civilians and our allies.

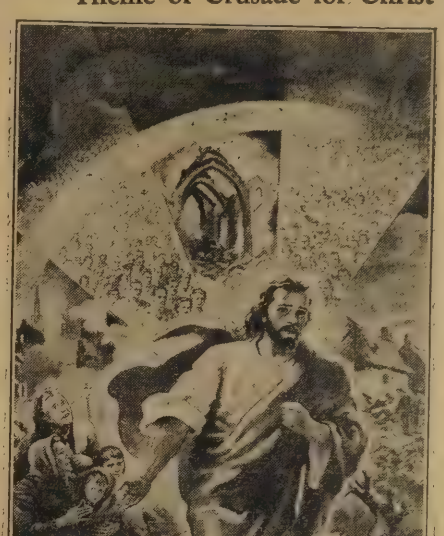
"I ask the millions of women who have preserved food at home so that our armed services could have the fruits and vegetables they need, to carry on until the war is won.

"I ask every American to share our available food by observing the rules of rationing and by cooperating with food merchants in the observances of food price ceilings.

"I know I can count on the American people to respond to these calls to action, so that we can all truly continue to say when the war iswon that our food has played an important role in the fight for freedom."

SPEND THE DAY AT CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

On Monday of this week the Baptist W. M. U. of Clanton Baptist Church held a spend-the-day at the church to study a Mission Book in preparation for the Week of Prayer.



Mrs. Hattie Alred was in charge of the days program and the following ladies taught chapters in the Mission Book during the day to 38 members. Mrs. Frank Scott, Mrs. W. C. Golden Mrs.. Luther Little, Mrs Reedie Taylor and Mrs G. C. Burks.

Luncheon was served at the noon hour.

NOTICE!

New Sallman Painting Depicts Theme of Crusade for Christ

CHICAGO — Warner Sallman, whose portrait of Christ has sold 4,500,000 copies, depicts here the support of millions of Christians to the determinaiton of their Leader that there be no more war. Methodists are among those who are working for liberty and justice for all men, through their four-year, five-fold Crusade for Christ.

Posters of the Sallman painting, now appearing in more than 41,000 Methodist churches across the nation, appeal for sacrificial contributions to the $25,000,000 Crusade relief and reconstruction fund, more than half of which will go for food, clothing and other aid for peoples of war devastated and occupied countries. Other phases of the Crusade for Christ call for support of cooperation among nations in the post-war world, renewed evangelism efforts, education for Christian stewardship and improvement of Sunday School attendance.

CLANTON HAS NEW BEAUTY SHOP

Mrs. Willie Easterling Moore and Miss Marie Robinson have opened a new Beauty Shop here. It is located next door to Broadhead's Market and is known as the Glamour Beauty Shop.

Both operators of the new establishment, are beautians with many years experience and each has a large following among the ladies of Clanton and Chilton County.

The News wishes for them much success in their new undertaking.

FARM AGENT URGES CARE OF MACHINERY

In view of the farm machinery supply outlook, the wise Chilton County farmer will check and repair every old machine he possibly can keep in operation, County Agent, M. R. Glasscock, asserted this week.

Care, share and repair of farm machinery again will be essential farm practices during the 1945 crop season, Mr. Glasscock continued.

To have approximately as much new machinery available for use in 1945 as in 1944, production would have to keep right on schtdule, he said. But at last report, production of machinery in general—with the exception of tractors— was running 20 to 25 percent behind schedule, and emphasis on military production was making it difficult to overcome the lag.

MRS. FADRY ROBINSON

Mrs. Fadry Robinson, age 86, died at the home of her son in Thorsby Tuesday. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock conducted by Rev. G. G. Williams. Burial was in Verbena cemetery.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs Callie Morris of Verbena; Mrs Fannie Bell Connell of Birmingham. Five sons A. L., Lee, J. R., Jim and Ethon. 33 grand-children; 38 great-grand-children. J. Mell Martin and Sons were in charge.

TO HOLD DEMONSTRATION OF HARVESTING AND CUTTING KUDZU CROWNS

In carrying out their plan with the Soil Conservation District Leo M. and J. J. Headley prepared about 20 acres for kudzu early in January, and they expect to set the plants in this field next week.

The crowns for this planting will be plowed from the terrace ridges in a field belonging to W. L. Henderson, another District Cooperator, who will use a part of the crowns harvested to increase his acreage of kudzu.

Farmers interested in kudzu are invited to go to Mr. Henderson's place about one-half mile southeast of Shiloh Church next Tuesday afternoon, February 20, to see a good method of harvesting kudzu crowns.

Selection of good planting stock will be explained and correct planting method demonstrated by the Work Unit Conservationist assigned to Chilton County to assist farmers in carrying out the Ditrict program.

GLENDA JEAN MIMS

Glenda Jean Mims, 10 months old, died February 9th,. Funeral services were held at Refuge Church Saturday conducted by Rev. N. E. Cook.

Surviving are the mother and father five brothers and four sisters. J. Mell Martin and Sons were in charge.

ENTERPRISE SCHOOL NEWS

In spite of the bad weather the attendance of Enterprise School has been holding up extremely well. Everyone regrets the illness of Mrs. Docia Vinson, our lunch room helper. She is i nthe hospital at present.

On February 8, Enterprise basketball team played Vermont. Enterprise had bad luck. The score was 25-19 in favor of Vermont. Great interest was shown by the fans on both sides. This game was played at Clanton in the high school gym.

Enterprise fared better on Friday. The teaf from Concord clashed with Enterprise on Enterprise Court. We won by a score of 40-17.

The greatest interest shown during the game was when Concord B Team played Enterprise 3rd team. The boys played as valiently as they would have played if it had been the Taurnament. Enterprise won by a score of 17-0.

The Seventh Grade, under the direction of Mrs J. D. Broadhead, had Chapel last Friday. The first play given, "The Squander Bug's Mother Goose," appealed to the patriotism of everyone present. The second play, "My First Hair Cut," was of special interest to the younger members of the audiance. Both plays were well given.—Evelyn Johnson.

CREDIT UNION ORGANIZED

Organization of a credit union was considered last Friday night by a group of farmers meeting in the Farmers Union Cooperative store in Clanton. There will be another Union meeting on this Friday at 7:30 p m. There are more than 10,000 Credit Unions in the United States and the movement is growing rapidly.

The Credit Union operates under a charter from the national or state government with strict regulations. It is democratically administered by Rochdale cooperative principles. Occupational groups such as government workers, employees in an industry and teachers in a school system are sociational groups such as fraternal orders, churches and cooperative neighbohoods and other groups with a common bond are usually the Credit Union to develop the habit of saving and to make small loans to their members, especially in times of emergency.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Manila's Fall Sets Stage for Next Phase of War in Pacific; Russ Press Assault on Berlin

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

U. S. and Chinese troops view huge marble buddha in Namhkam, Burma, following capture of town in drive to link newly opened Ledo road with Burma road leading to China.

PACIFIC:
'Mac' Looks Ahead

"On to Tokyo!"

Thus called General of the Army Douglas MacArthur as U. S. forces freed the Philippine capital of Manila and strengthened their hold on the main island of Luzon.

In a statement as jubilant as the march of his gallant army across Luzon's central plains, MacArthur proclaimed:

"The fall of Manila was the end of one great phase of the Pacific struggle and set the stage for another. . . . We are well on the way, but Japan itself is our final goal. . . . We are ready in this veteran and proven command when called upon. . . ."

With all eyes turning toward Tokyo itself now, MacArthur's statement was looked upon as his bid for continued leadership of Allied forces in future operations against the Japs, who are expected to put up their stiffest large-scale resistance in Asia proper, thus dodging the necessity of trying to run the supply blockade of the powerful U. S. navy.

EUROPE:
Beyond Oder

Even as German military commentators told their people that additional territory would have to be given up before the great Russian drive could be stopped, powerful Red forces maintained the initiative and smashed across the Oder river in strength at numerous points.

By going over the Oder on a broad front to the southeast, Marshal Ivan Konev's 1st Ukrainian army not only bit deeper into the rich Silesian industrial district, but also pointed menacingly at another important production center around Dresden to the west, and threatened to develop a wide outflanking movement on Berlin to the northwest.

Meanwhile, Marshal Gregory Zhukov's 1st White Russian army pressed its all-out assault on Berlin, still smouldering from a gigantic U. S. and British air raid which ripped up transport and communications in the battered capital. As Zhukov's armored columns and infantry drew up for the assault under cover of a fierce artillery bombardment, the Germans rallied for a desperate defense planned to carry right into the city itself and make it another Koenigsberg and Budapest.

Yank Push

With their lines already strained in the east, the Nazis looked anxiously to the west, where they said General Eisenhower had massed large forces along the Roer river for a breakthrough attempt to the Rhineland, with Cologne as the immediate goal.

Nazi apprehension was publicly expressed as strong elements of the U. S. 1st and 3rd armies pushed deeper into the Siegfried defense belt, encountering moderate opposition as the enemy apparently withdrew to stronger rearward positions.

In a further effort to economize their dwindling forces, the Germans were moving from Alsace in southeastern France, with mixed U. S. and French units exerting strong pressure.

Historic Meeting

As the "Big Three" met in one of history's epochal conferences, Nazi propagandists feverishly sought to steel the German people against consideration of Allied offers of surrender, with declarations that U. S. and British statesmen would be unable to fulfill "Wilsonian promises."

Meanwhile, rumors were rife over the "Big Three" parley, with reports that the Allied leaders discussed the question of French claims to German territory west of the Rhine; Polish angling for East Prussia and land clear up to the Oder river in the reich, and cession of German districts to Denmark as part of moves to internationalize the Kiel canal.

The "Big Three" reportedly were in agreement on plans to occupy the reich, with the British taking over the northwest, including the Ruhr and seaports; the U. S. the southwest, and the Russian the east and northeast. All three powers would jointly occupy Austria. Discussion also was said to concern plans for providing supervision over German industry to prevent future armament.

MANPOWER:
Discuss 'Work or Fight'

Passed by the house, the administration-backed "work or fight" bill encountered rough going in the senate, with industry and labor continuing to offer strong resistance to compulsory provisions.

As finally approved by the house on a 246-155 vote, the "work or fight" bill provides that all registrants between 18 and 45 not otherwise deferred by law, such as farmers, can be frozen into essential jobs or ordered to take more important positions by their local draft boards. If they refuse, they can be inducted into the services, and, if found physically unfit, fined and imprisoned.

With the senate largely lukewarm to compulsory labor legislation, Senators Bevercomb (W. Va.), Taft (Ohio), and Robertson (Wyo.) pushed for adoption of an amendment under which draft boards would only be called upon to ferret out surplus manpower in plants and channel it into more sorely pressed establishments upon threat of inducting the hoarded help.

The senators' proposal was warmly supported by the AFL, whose executive council, meeting in Miami, Fla., declared that no actual manpower shortage exists and any crisis could be attributed to hoarding of labor.

Elaborating on the charges, AFL Pres. William Green released a report in which the organization contended that many war plants operating on cost-plus basis are keeping skilled workers in enforced idleness to hold expenses up for greater profit returns; military purchasing agents are awarding business to concerns in tight labor areas while permitting other plants with workers to close down, and many production lags are due to technical bottlenecks rather than manpower shortages.

William Green

Declaring that manpower shortages approximate only 150,000 men, the National Association of Manufacturers said that establishment of lower ceilings on the number of workers in less essential plants could help to ease any stringency. Coupled with this, the NAM urged further emphasis on labor-management programs to eliminate practices retarding production and shifting of skilled men to urgent jobs.

FARM PRICES

Prices received by farmers in mid-January averaged more than twice their pre-World War I level for the first time since August, 1920, the USDA reported. At 201 per cent of the August, 1909-July, 1914, average, the January index of prices received by farmers was 5 points above a year ago. Parity prices were at the highest level since 1920, 117 per cent of parity on January 15, the same as a month earlier and a year ago.

Prices of most major farm crops were up during the month, raising the all-crop index 4 points to double the 1909-14 average. Most pronounced increases were in truck crop prices which advanced 34 points to 262. Food grains rose 2 points to 169; feed grains and hay 3 points to 163. The fruit index declined from 206 in December to 205 in January. Supplies of other farm crops, although seasonally lower than in December, were available in larger quantities than in January, 1944.

CANADA:
Political Crisis

In a crisis which Premier MacKenzie King said he wished to avoid during the present critical stage of the war, the Grey North parliamentary district of Ontario, Canada, voted down as its representative in commons Defense Minister A. G. L. McNaughton, who conceived the idea of the limited overseas draft to appease bitter French-Canadian resistance to conscription for foreign service.

With the result of the voting indicating that English-speaking Canada might favor unlimited overseas draft instead of the government's present compromise program, King declared that a general election may be necessary to provide for a clean-cut decision on the question, to strengthen officials' hands in dealing with the situation.

Adopted with the aim of preserving unity in the dominion, the government's compromise conscription policy avoiding a wholesale overseas draft sought to partially meet the French-Canadians' cherished traditional privilege of self-government.

SPORTS:
Fight Gambling

With the gambling fraternity reportedly looking for new fields of operation with the closure of the nation's race tracks upon government order, both college and professional sports are moving firmly to prevent bettors' activities in basketball and baseball.

With the danger brought into the open with disclosure that Brooklyn college basketball players took money to throw a game, college officials tightened secret policing of stands and forbid coaches to release pre-game information on players' conditions, etc.

Especially touchy over the gambling question since the notorious "Black Sox" scandal of 1919, organized baseball was reported taking particular precaution against bettors' operations, with officials advising clubs to withhold such information as starting pitchers, etc., to provide the basis for wagering. Said the National League's Ford Frick: ". . . With a lot of youngsters in the big show for the first time, we will have to be extra careful. . . ."

Noted Dry Dies

World famous as a crusader against "Demon Rum," and a U. S. official who was quick on the trigger against bootleggers violating anti-liquor laws in Indian territory at the turn of the century, Prohibitionist William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson died at 82 in Binghamton, N. Y., of a bladder ailment.

Upon retiring to his home in Smithville Flats, N. Y., in 1939 after 50 years of ardent campaigning for the dry cause, including a round-the-world tour, Johnson sadly acknowledged that America was ". . . nowhere near ready for another try at prohibition."

Supposedly nicknamed "Pussyfoot" because of his stealthy manner of coming upon violators, Johnson engaged in many gun duels with bootlegging elements in the Southwest, no less than eight of his deputies being shot to death.

SURPLUS FOOD:
U. S. Sales

Continuing its policy of disposing of surplus foods in ready wartime markets to prevent unnecessary accumulations extending into the post-war period, the government recently put substantial amounts of fresh and canned goods up for sale.

Although canned goods constituted the bulk of the sales, it was revealed, 20,216,317 pounds of lard were offered, along with 450,000 pounds of cheddar cheese and 110,000 cases of shell eggs.

Other offerings included 119,000 cases of canned peas; 67,156 boxes of seedless raisins; 41,274 cases of canned tomatoes; 40,157 cases of canned snap beans; 8,231 cases of tomato catsup; 121,756 gallons of concentrated orange juice; 24,850 gallons of concentrated lemon juice; and seven 200 pound barrels of dry skim milk.

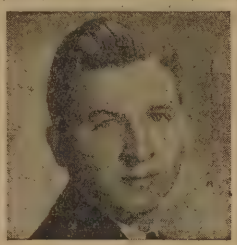
FRANCE:
U. S. Aid

Knocked out by the Germans, and a battlefield of World War II almost from the start, France will receive appreciable assistance from the U. S. in the reconstruction of her military might and civilian economy so that she may become a stabilizing force in European affairs.

Having equipped eight full divisions and about 300 supporting units of the French army at a cost of $700,000,000, the U. S. has agreed to outfit eight more divisions, it was revealed. In addition, substantial numbers of planes have been delivered and over 100 warships turned over

While U. S. Military aid to France is on a lend-lease basis, it was said, the French are expected to pay for civilian supplies, including foodstuffs, clothing, industrial materials and transportation equipment.

LIQUOR TAXES



Over 2½ billion dollars was laid out last year by consumers of alcoholic beverages in the form of federal, state and local taxes, according to an analysis prepared on the basis of treasury data just made available. Despite the increase in tax collections alcoholic beverage per capita consumption showed no change last year as against 1941, the last prewar year, consumption in both years being the same, or 1.19 gallons per person, studies showed.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

IT SEEMS like sheer inspiration to team Eddie Bracken and William Demarest on the air as well as on the screen. Nobody who saw them together in "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek" and "Hail the Conquering Hero" will ever forget the hilariously funny scenes they played together. Now, at 8:30 Sunday evenings, E.W.T. on NBC, we have "The Story of Eddie Bracken," supposedly scenes from his life, with

EDDIE BRACKEN

Eddie playing the bewildered youth caught in a whirlpool of events beyond his control, and Demarest as the bull-voiced, irascible older man, goads Bracken into asserting himself, finally causing the worm to turn.

Jerome Cowan reported on the set of Republic's "Return at Dawn" one morning recently in high spirits. He'd gotten up early enough to have a real breakfast, said he—fruit, cereal, ham and eggs. "That's too bad," said Director John English, sympathetically. "Because in the first sequence this morning you've got to eat a full turkey dinner, from soup to dessert."

Claudette Colbert is in for another of those ageing screen roles. It's the second time in her screen career that she's been shown going from youth to advanced age, which is none too early; it's a matter of so much more than just make-up, and only a good actress can do it convincingly. But Claudette succeeded in "Remember the Day," and repeats in International's "Tomorrow Is Forever."

—*—

When Shirley Temple was to appear on that coast-to-coast radio salute recently, casting trouble arose; Shirley's career was to be traced from her first picture to her latest one—and who'd play Shirley at the age of seven, in "Baby, Take a Bow"? A casting director finally solved the problem—and the impersonator, letter perfect, turned up in the person of Mary Jane Wong, aged twenty, a full-blooded Chinese!

—*—

Bing Crosby was painting a liferaft as part of his sailor chores in "Here Comes the WAVES." As the scene progressed he laid on more and more paint. Finally a gob visiting the set remarked, "If he puts another coat of paint on that raft it'll sink the second it hits the water!" And what good news that Ingrid Bergman will do "The Bells of St. Mary's" with Crosby. She'll portray a nun, he a priest.

Making That Problem Window Fit Perfectly Into the Room Setting

By Ruth Wyeth Spears

THE smart plaid curtains shown herewith match the window seat and several slip covers, and the wooden curtain pole, rings and draw cord match the dominant color in the plaid repeating the color of small cushions and lamp base. The window lets in the maximum of light and you would never guess that originally it looked like a postage stamp in the middle of a blank wall. At first it seemed impossible to curtain it because fixtures could not be screwed to metal casements or the plaster.

The built-in book shelves helped that. A space a foot wide was allowed at each side of the window so that the curtains could hang over the wall, and the painted wooden pole was then screwed to the sides of the shelves. The diagram shows this and how the draw cord was knotted so that the curtains could be pulled back and forth.

Household Hints

Put a few rubber bands around the handle of your bath brush to insure a firm grip upon it.

A few drops of lemon juice gives added flavor and also helps tenderize ground beef.

To prevent your piano wires from rusting, tack a small bag of unslacked lime just inside. This will absorb the moisture.

Add a bit of vinegar to the dishwater to cut the grease.

Keep your household sponges fresh by soaking them in cold salt water.

To flatten rug corners that curl and slip on the floor, cut out L-shaped pieces of cardboard, and glue to the underside of the rug at the corners.

A temperature of from 60 to 65 degrees F. is suitable for most plants.

To prevent corks from sticking in bottles containing glue or polishes, coat the cork with vaseline.

To rid the chimney of soot, burn potato peelings or the tops from mason jars or other bits of zinc. Keep the damper open while cleaning.

Cover the top of your bedspring with oil cloth. This will be a good protection for your mattress and will make it easier to turn your mattress.

Use the top of a lipstick container over the ends of your curtain rods when pushing them through freshly starched curtains.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By Col. Robert L. Scott

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field, Texas, and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat flying. After appealing to several Generals he is offered an opportunity to get into the fight. On arriving in India he is made a ferry pilot, but this does not suit Scott, who talks Gen. Chennault into giving him a Kittyhawk for combat flying. Soon he is flying over the skies of Burma and becomes known as the "one man air force." Later he is made C.O. of the 23rd Fighter Group, but he still keeps knocking Jap planes out of the skies.

CHAPTER XXIX

But from the patrol that had been at the Mekong and from the "probables," we knew that we had not let one Jap escape from the December 26th attempted bombing of Yeching. I felt so good I wanted to radio the General, but I waited until we checked up on those who were missing, so that I could go and tell him in person.

Our victory had not been without loss. Lieutenant Couch, who had led the rear attack on the bombers, had failed to return. His wing man had seen him pulling up over the tail of the bomber formation after shooting down one of the Japs; but they had concentrated their fire on him and had shot him down in flames. No one knew whether or not the Carolina pilot had gotten out. In the speed with which that attack had moved you didn't have time to see parachutes opening.

Another pilot, Lieutenant Mooney, had been seen to shoot one bomber down, and then, in another head-on attack, had either collided with another of the enemy or had exploded it so close to his own ship that the observing pilot had not been able to see Mooney's P-40 again.

Sending out the usual search parties, I took off into a setting sun for Kunming. My heart was heavy with the loss of two fine pilots, but there was still hope that they had gotten out. And at the same time my spirits were singing with victory.

I landed at headquarters in the dark and went to the General's house. Over the rough road that led there, my mind was on the speedy happenings since I had driven out to the ship that morning. Then I drove past the guard at the gate, who smiled and yelled, "AVG — ding-hao." I called a cheerful greeting to him, for everything was good now. There was a full moon rising in the sky—a "bombing moon," the Chinese call it—and the cedar trees around the house that the Gissimo had built for the General were casting long shadows in its light.

I tossed my flying gear on the bed in my room and hurried to the General. I saw "Gunboat" the houseboy coming out of the General's corner room. He said softly, "General still feel pretty bad."

General Chennault was in bed, propped up by pillows. He glanced up from a map and looked at me. "Well, Scotty," he said, "I hear there was a fight over Yeching this afternoon and I see blood on your face, so I know you made contact. What happened?"

Trying to look real stern, I told the General that nineteen Japs had come in, just as he said they would, at the same time as the day before—only this time we were higher than they and were waiting for them. "General," I said, with a tremor of pride in my voice, "we shot 'em all down."

The General was looking more like a well man every moment. He asked about our losses and I told him about the two missing pilots. He thought a minute, then started to get up.

"Scotty, if you'll look over behind you in that pretty box, you'll find a bottle of Haig & Haig, pinch bottle, that the Soong sisters sent us for Christmas. We're going to open that and celebrate."

We were celebrating when Doctor Tom Gentry came back and began to ask the General why he wasn't in bed with his fever. The General looked so happy, I guess, that Doctor took his temperature again. Then he gave me a funny look. "Normal," he said. "Sometimes I think if you all shot down a few Japs every day, the General would even get to where he could hear as well as he could when he was a boy in Louisiana."

The General filled his glass again and handed me the bottle. Then he raised the glass at me and said, "How!" We drank to the victory of the afternoon.

Early next day I went over again with Holloway, just in case the Jap came again. We learned that the victory had not been without cost. Lieutenant Mooney had been found dead, close to the wrecks of two burned airplanes—a Mitsubishi Japanese bomber and his P-40.

Couch had had better luck and was in the hospital. I went up to see him as soon as we assigned the "aerial umbrella" of P-40's that were going to patrol the skies for a recurrence of the Jap raids. Lieutenant Couch was badly burned but was resting easy. He told me that the bomber he had fired on had begun to smoke and he'd taken his plane in very close to make certain that the Jap burned. This had been a mistake, he knew, for the guns of three or more of the enemy had converged on his fighter, and when he dove out he was on fire; the flames streaming out of his engine covered the canopy. From some reflex action he had done the wrong thing again—he'd rolled the canopy open and the flames had been sucked into the cockpit, into his face. He had already unlatched his safety belt in order to jump, and in dodging the flames he was thrown about in the pilot's compartment, though he must evidently have got the canopy closed again, for the flames were held out by the glass.

Couch went through long seconds of torture as he was thrown about in the bottom of the spinning plane—the rudder pedals struck his burned face, and sharp projections hurt his shoulders and back. He struggled to his feet again, rolled the hatch back and was thrown out and away from the burning ship.

We tried the same defense to hold the advantage over the Japs if they should come again. During the first hours of the morning I flew low over the surrounding hills and saw the forest-fires set by the burning of the enemy planes that we had shot down the day before. From over one village West of Yeching, I could see the wreckage of the two ships that had flown together; the natives were standing about looking at what had come out of the skies. As I took my formation into the air and followed out the instructions the General had given me, I realized that for all practical purposes he was in the fighter with me; I was merely privileged to press the trigger and send the enemy into the ground and destruction. Yes, the General rode with me on those flights in more ways than one. If we kept following out his tactics we'd hold our ratio of twelve-to-one over the Japs as we battled them in China.

None of us in China was fooling himself—we knew that what little we had accomplished against the enemy would have very small bearing on the outcome of the conflict. But under General Chennault we had made the most of what we had. We had developed fighters with an urge for combat and the aggressive spirit of battle. We had bases in China from which to attack other bases in China, that were Japanese. With more equipment we could hold our bases and we could take the bases farther East, from which we could bomb the heart of Japan.

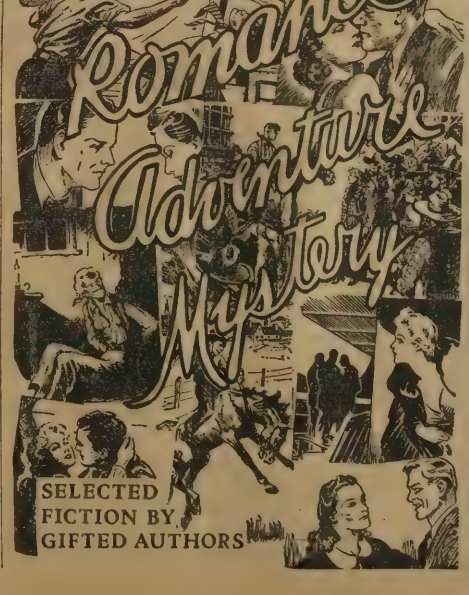
I expect I wouldn't have been much good in combat that day if it had come, for I was doing too much thinking, and fighter pilots can do only one thing at a time. Even when I landed and walked about among the Chinese dead from the Christmas Day bombing, I just kept on thinking.

That afternoon at two o'clock I got all our ships in the sky again. I rode on Holloway's wing over the top of them all, and we watched and waited for our interceptors on the Mekong to yell, "Here they come." Nothing happened—I guess General Chennault was right again. "You destroyed their group yesterday," he had said that morning. "We've got them worried, and they'll have to wait for their long supply line around to Burma to send some more planes."

When the sun got low on the blue hills of Yunnan, I began my thinking again. There was no use fooling ourselves — the situation in China was bad. All of China that was developed at all was in the hands of the Japanese. The Jap had worked with extreme foresight in preparing for this war, and the "heart of the octopus" was going to be hard to get at. But it could be done more easily from China—and it had to be done. These people, who with their stoical bravery had seen their cities bombed for over six years, deserved more help. We must equip their land armies, help train them—and give them air support.

I got to thinking about something that had occurred a few days before, when the Christmas season was approaching. I had just had my twelfth little Jap flag painted on the fuselage of my P-40K. Each of these represented a confirmed victory over the enemy, and my crew chief was as proud as I was. But I learned that day that some one else was sharing in that pride too.

On my way to work that day, driving from the General's house to the operations shack, I had seen a crowd of Chinese around my ship. They were sitting there silently and waiting, and I wondered at them. But the old American answer came to me—"We never can figure them out"—and I went on. As I passed by during the morning the Chinese people were still standing around my plane in the drizzling rain.



Finally I called for my crew chief and asked the meaning of the crowd. With a puzzled look, he replied that he didn't know: they had told him through an interpreter that they just wanted to sit there and wait for the pilot of the ship. I sent one of my interpreters to investigate and learned that they were really waiting for me; they had received permission from the Chinese Commandant to enter the field.

Some time later I walked over to where they were still standing in the slow rain. As I approached my ship they bowed as the Chinese do, by standing at what we would call "Attention" and nodding the head in respect. As I smiled at them—ragged children, old men and women, coolies from the fields, and several who I thought were school teachers—they raised their thumbs high towards me and yelled, "Ding-hao, ding-hao!" And they pointed with pride to my twelve flags.

The sun was going down now, even from our vantage point up there at twenty-five thousand, where Holloway and I were patrolling. We called to the other ships to land, and as we saw them go into the Lufbery circle and the rat-race that fighter pilots like to land from, Holloway rolled over and dove straight for the ground. I started to roll with him—then I turned back for one more look at the setting sun. Down on the earth, to those earthbound creatures, the sun was down. There the shadows of the approaching night covered the ground, but up here I could see above the mountains, and the sun still shone on my fighter. I pulled almost straight up in the steep climb that I like to make before driving home, and looked into the vivid blue of the Yunnan skies. Some verses were running through my thoughts. Against the drumming of the engine I heard my own voice repeating the words of another fighter pilot, John Magee, who had died with the RAF in the battle of Britain.

"Up, up the long delirious burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace
Where never lark, or even eagle, flew,
And while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God."

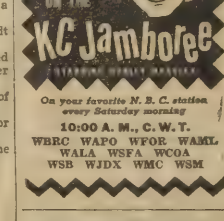
For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.



This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Through the Red Cross the American people serve the men of their Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

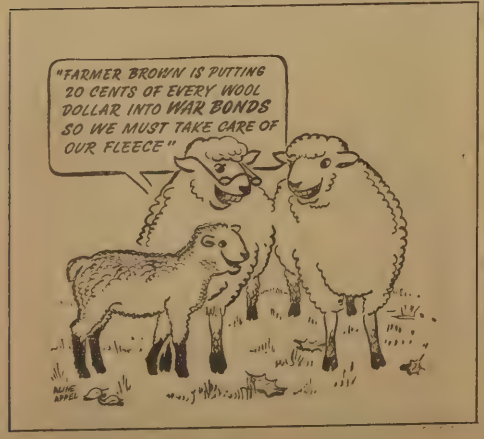
Red Cross Faces Greatest Task in Fourth War Year

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Facing the greatest task in its history in serving American fighting men on advancing war fronts overseas, their families at home, their buddies returning to the United States after discharge, and the American people in emergencies on the home front, the American Red Cross will launch its third War Fund campaign March 1.

That the American people will respond with overwhelming generosity to the appeal for $200,000,000 to carry on this world wide program is already indicated in the nation-wide determination to meet all its war needs and to bring the five-year struggle to an early and successful conclusion.

In every invasion during the past year, Chairman Basil O'Connor of the American Red Cross said, Red Cross workers have either gone with the troops, or have followed within a very short time. Red Cross field directors were with General Eisenhower's men in the great amphibious invasion of France, and with General MacArthur's forces when they returned to the Philippines.

Ten thousand men and women wear the Red Cross uniform overseas, serving in every theatre of war and with every command. They work in leave clubs, clubmobiles, rest houses, hospitals. Red Cross men attached to fighting units are with those outfits even in actual combat. Red Cross girls dispense snacks at air fields, along trucking supply routes, behind front areas and in liberated cities.



Many, both men and women, are on duty at scores of isolated outposts throughout the world, and give aid to wounded men in hospitals and on hospital ships, planes and trains. Away from the battle areas, thousands more serve at military and naval installations within the United States.

Red Cross service on the home front has expanded with the ever-increasing demand upon it, Mr. O'Connor said. In addition to collecting more than ten million pints of blood for plasma since the beginning of the war, the Red Cross has met requests of the Army and Navy for whole blood shipments to European and Pacific battle areas. Ten centers on the East and West coasts already participate in the collection of Type O whole blood, while others stand ready to join in that program as military needs warrant.

At four packaging centers, manned by volunteer workers, more than 20,000,000 food parcels have been turned out in a steady stream for shipment to prisoners of war and civilian internees in Germany and the Far East. Surgical dressings—775,000,000 of them—were prepared in the past year alone for front line and hospital use. Production workers in hundreds of communities have continued the never ceasing program of making warm garments for destitute civilians in war-torn countries overseas, and in those countries the Red Cross has assisted the Army in caring for refugees and homeless people.

Nor has its service to the armed forces on a global scale caused any relaxation on the part of the Red Cross to carry out its traditional service to the American people in time of disaster. More than 200 domestic disasters—floods, high winds and fires—have found Red Cross workers on the job to relieve stricken families and to aid in the rebuilding of communities.

"The need for Red Cross services in the coming year will be greater than ever before," Mr. O'Connor said. "In fulfilling the Red Cross appeal for $200,000,000, the American people will indicate its wholehearted backing of men in the front lines."

NEWS FROM SARDIS

Health of this community is good at present with one exception. Mr. W. W. Klinner is in the hospital at Clanton suffering from a heart attack. We learn he is some better at this writing. We hope he will soon be able to come back home again.

We have our new church building under way. They are hauling the brick already from Montgomery with which to build the church.

We are sorry to have to report this, but our Sunday School is almost dead There were not enough people out Sunday to have Sunday School. Now we say without contridiction this is a shame for Christian people to fail to attend Sunday School. Listen Mr Church member if you fail to go to Sunday School and church how in the name of common sense can you expect to win the world to Christ. Don't you know the sin of ommission is as bad as the sin of commission. I hope you will think this over and attend Sunday School next Sunday.

Mr. Jeremiah Donovan left this morning (Monday) to return to his Camp. He is stationed in Texas.

EVERY purchaser of a War Bond gives up something to aid his fellowmen with the same spirit that Pfc. William P. Bowes of West Roxbury, Mass., showed in risking his life to save a comrade on a Pacific Island, though in a lesser degree. Though previous attempts to reach three wounded men had failed, Pfc. Bowes crawled through the jungle in the face of intense enemy fire and dragged one of the men 35 yards to cover. The action won him a Silver Star.

Political Trend Points Return to Conservatism

Wallace-Jones Fight Indicates Movement in Congress; 'Regular' Democrats Vie With 'Leftists' in Party.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

As we contemplate the second month of the political calendar one thing is clear and that is the strong conservative trend in the congress as a whole and within the structure of the two major parties as well.

Many straws show clearly the way the prevailing winds have been blowing. One was the Jones-Wallace controversy which soon became a senate versus Wallace - Roosevelt controversy. Another was the turn taken in the battle over the national service bill which developed into a fight against the fair employment practices policy and the closed shop. Behind both these moves there was a play of forces which marks the beginning of a struggle which will make the biggest post-war story on the domestic front.

The opposition to Wallace had many and complicated ramifications but it revealed the conservative trend both in congress as a whole and within the Democratic party.

Within the party it was a struggle between the "regulars" and the CIO political action committee adherants, something which is being reflected in the conduct of the party organization, too. When Democratic National Chairman Hannegan was questioned as to whether he was going to work with the CIO-PAC he answered that he would welcome their assistance, but in the same breath added: "and other independent organizations." The inference drawn by the reporters was that the two groups would pursue their separate ways. It is reported that Wallace was offered a deal by which his confirmation as secretary of commerce would be assured and perhaps RFC powers left under the department of commerce, if he would agree to put a "safe" man in to administer the government lending. This would have meant breaking with his CIO-PAC following and Wallace naturally refused.

That illustrates what rivalry there exists between liberal and conservative elements within the Democratic party. It is also whispered that a campaign has begun by which the Democrats hope to pare down the influence of the CIO-PAC. The scheme is to build a strong coalition between the southern Democrats and the northern big city bosses.

Compare Wallace To Bryan.

The Democratic "regulars" claim they have no fear of Wallace as a successful contender for the presidential nomination in 1948, although they admit that he is the one man in public life, now that Willkie is gone, whose leadership would be most likely to unite both liberal and radical support. But they claim he is another William Jennings Bryan, much more intellectual but with the same fate in store for him: often a bridesmaid, never a bride.

The Wallace supporters talk quite differently. They say any man who could rally 429½ votes last summer at Chicago could get enough of the necessary additional 105½ by 1948 and that every time bad, big business assaults him as it did through the friends of Jesse Jones, his stock with the "common man" and "little business" whom and which he constantly champions, will go higher.

In other words, the louder the Wall street "wolf-pack" howls the more the CIO "pack" grins. This reasoning is based on those two somewhat paradoxical observations "we love him for the enemies he makes" and "every knock a boost."

That is the "leftist" reasoning, and whether or not the "regulars" think it is sound, they have to take it into consideration. In any case the opposition to Wallace on both sides of both houses of congress shows the conservative color of the legislative body.

As to the party organizations, they have indicated that they intend to put their faith in works. On the same day (January 23) both Republican and Democratic national chairmen announced that their respective political machines would start running on a full-time basis.

As I said, Mr. Hannegan revealed his attitude toward the left-wingers of his party by implying that Messrs. Hillman, Murray, et al would paddle their own canoes.

GOP Stays To Right

There was a significant development at the Republican committee meeting, too. The single challenge to Mr. Brownell dealt with the question of thunder from the left and it apparently fell on entirely deaf ears. The one unfriendly voice at the meeting came from a supporter of Harold Stassen of Minnesota, the prospective liberal candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. The revolter arose to charge that Mr. Brownell had alienated the labor vote because of his connection with a law firm which handled the business of large corporations. Nobody in the committee denied the soft impeachment publicly.

It is whispered that the Republicans are not worrying about an appeal to labor for they have a theory that they can attract the vote of the returned soldier because they say he will lean to the right. This is the way one of the "regulars" expressed it to me.

"There is something about a uniform," he said, "that makes a man patriotic and conservative. He is anxious to settle down and raise a family. He wants to have property of his own. He's tired of being housed and fed and clothed on government issue. Also he is through taking chances; over there he thought of America as home and home means something solid, sane and safe. The Republican party is the natural place for him," the bigwig concluded.

I am not saying that the reasoning of either party is correct but I am reporting what appears to be the general atmosphere both on Capitol hill and elsewhere where the politicians gather to mull over affairs.

As to the temper of congress as a whole as illustrated in both the Wallace and the national service controversies we can see that the former southern Democrat-Republican coalition is working as smoothly as ever and keen observers predict that its hand will be shown whenever similar questions are at issue in the future.

Just where the President stands is not yet discernible. But there again, there is a strong feeling on Capitol hill that when he replaced "Dr. New Deal" with "Dr. Win-the-War," as he himself put it, he had no intention of placing the country under the care of the former medico when peace returned. This is the way one old timer who has supported the administration on most issues for the last 12 years put it to me:

"The President says he is still steering a little left of center. He may think so. But I can tell you that whether he knows it or not the old ship of state is going to nose to starboard this session."

And that would seem to be what is happening if we judge from the first leg of the voyage. In any case there is going to be a fight to keep a conservative hand on the old ship's tiller.

SHANGRI-LA IN PACIFIC

The army air force has discovered a new nation, a tiny little community, high up in the mountains of New Guinea. No white man is known to have visited it before, and not even neighboring natives had been there. Surrounded on two sides by mountains rising to the height of 15 or 16 thousand feet, the third side by an impassable swamp, the valley is cut off on the fourth side by a jungle-like forest several miles wide. The river runs through the valley, which is about 5 by 20 miles, and then disappears, apparently into the earth. The lost tribe living in the valley has developed an extensive irrigation system, army observers report. At first they were frightened by planes — now they wave at our airmen, who come quite low and are able to report that the native clothing consists entirely of strings of beads worn around the neck.

Because the land is so extensively cultivated, there is no large stretch suitable for a landing, and the air force has enough to do these days to prevent it from landing troops by parachutes. But ethnologists and other scientists will make a beeline for New Guinea as soon as the war is over.

2-MULE FARM WITH $550 INCOME
Converted into
1-MULE FARM WITH $2,022 INCOME

This barn was inexpensively built, but served its purpose.

shelters provided the only shelter for 250 laying hens and pullets.

Saw mill strip were made into fence panels on rainy days, producing portable fencing which was moved from crop to crop during the year.

This is a brief story of how a typical run-down 70-acre, two-mule farm in the Alabama Piedmont section, yielding $550 annual cash sales, was in three years converted to a one-mule farm that produced cash sales of $2,020 in 1943, and a net cash income of $909.48 after taking out all cash expenses. The two amounts of annual cash sales are based on the same farm price levels.

The land of this particular farm—bought by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station for one of its farm-size experiments—was steep, rough and gullied. Badly located bench terraces grown up in briars and honeysuckle were broken in numerous places, with washed furrows stretching down across the fields. Much of the top soil and some of the sub-soil had been washed away.

The year before the purchase of the farm by the Station, the tenant's cotton crop amounted to $450, or 82 per cent of his total cash sales for the year. The same farm three years later under Station management produced about the same amount of cotton—$445—BUT, in addition the farm was made to yield nearly $1,600 in sales of poultry, eggs, and some meat animals. Cultivated acreages were about the same in both years. However, management leading to larger farm business, fuller use of the land, improved yields, and year around productive work resulted in these increased cash receipts.

In this experiment, which was completed last fall, the Station began its operations just as any good farmer would—with a minimum of expense. Only such improvements and purchases were made that contributed directly or indirectly to production of farm products for market and for family living. At the close of the three-year period of Station operation, livestock and poultry, feed and supplies, and tools were valued at $2,781. At the beginning of the experiment the Station had only land, a few buildings, and a little fencing. The costs of necessary tools, largely second hand, livestock including one big mule, additional fencing, and the construction of an inexpensive barn, laying shelters and range brooders were paid for out of the earnings of the farm. Fertility of much of the soil has been increased.

For more detailed information about this farm-size experiment, write the Agricultural Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala. Also ask for a copy of special leaflet, "Alabama Agriculture After the War," by M. J. Funchess, director of the station.

This advertisement published by ALABAMA POWER COMPANY in cooperation with the Agricultural Experiment Station of Alabama Polytechnic Institute to help bring about greater income for Alabama farms.

The Agricultural Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute wants to, and can, help the farmers improve farm income. It knows from experience what CAN be done. What WILL be done will depend largely on the realization of Alabama farmers themselves that something MUST be done to offset the expected postwar decline in the importance of cotton as a profitable crop.

129 MILES ELECTRIC LINES CONSTRUCTED IN COUNTY BY CENTRAL ALABAMA ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE

In November, 1938, a group of men met in Montgomery, Alabama for the purpose of organizing a rural electric cooperative for the counties of Autauga, Chilton, Coosa and Elmore. This cooperative was to be organized in accordance with the Rural Electrification Act of 1935. In this meeting two men from Chilton County were elected as directors; namely: S. D. DeLoach and N. H. Harrell. Since that date these men have represented Chilton County in all matters pertaining to getting the necessary funds for constructing electric lines, making recommendations on operating problems, and all general procedures relative to what is now known as the Central Alabama Electric Cooperative.

Since the Central Alabama Electric Cooperative was organized it has constructed some 129 miles of lines in Chilton County, and the mileage thus far constructed was made possible through the efforts of Mr. DeLoach and Mr. Harrell. They have devoted much time, as well as personal expenses, without compensation toward the promotion of electricity to farmers in this County.

The Ctntral Alabama Electric Cooperative proposes to construct more than 223 miles of new lines in Chilton County when materials and labor are available after the war. In keeping with the Rural Electrification Act the directors from Chilton County are making every effort possible to see that every farm home in this County has electricity made available, either by a cooperative or private utility.

If the bill is passed which Senator Lister Hill introduced in tht 78th Congress to provide funds for rural telephones, Mr. DeLoach and Mr. Harrell will have the same interest in seeing that farm people have telephonts as well as electricity. Whether or not telephone service would bt provided by an electric Cooperative or a private telephone company has not been determined, but regardless of whether telephone service is rendersd by a cooperative or by a privately owned telephone company the farmers in Chilton County are entitled to this service and it is believed that many farmers would be interested if such service could be made available.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

TWO GREAT COMPANIES NOW JOINED TOGETHER

LIBERTY NATIONAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY and Brown-Service INSURANCE COMPANY

Creating Alabama's Largest

INSURANCE COMPANY

WITH RESOURCES OVER 27 MILLION DOLLARS

This financial statement reflects the merger of two great Alabama insurance companies. It presents the picture of a financial institution of exceptional strength and scope of service. To the policyowners of both Brown-Service and Liberty National, this union brings many added benefits. It reinforces the financial structure of both companies. It provides facilities for more efficient service. Now more than 600 well-trained agents throughout the State can offer neighborhood service to policyowners of both companies whenever the need arises. Liberty National will continue to write ordinary life and industrial insurance with Brown-Service operating as the Company's burial and vault insurance division. The Brown-Service Division will offer the same low-cost funeral policies and maintain the same high standard of service that has resulted in enrolling more than half of Alabama's total white population among its policyholders.

More than $300,000,000 Insurance in Force!

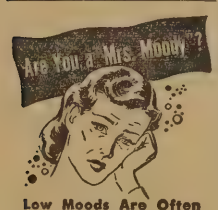
SORE THROAT due to colds

Let a little Vicks VapoRub melt on the tongue. Works fine, to soothe sore throat due to colds and helps relieve irritation in upper breathing passages.

To Ease Spasms of Coughing: Put a good spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Wonderful relief comes as you breathe in the steaming medicinal vapors that penetrate to cold-congested upper breathing passages . . . soothes the irritation, quiets fits of coughing, helps clear head.

For Added Relief, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, back. Let its famous double-action keep on working for hours as you sleep. VICKS VAPORUB

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



The first use of motor trucks — and that means rubber tires — by the U. S. Army in active campaigns occurred during the Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916. About 800 motor vehicles were in use on the Mexican border.

B. F. Goodrich's latest analysis of the rubber situation shows that after the war annual potential rubber production of the world should be 2,800,000 long tons. This is more than twice the amount of rubber used by the entire world in 1941, the record year, when consumption totaled 1,300,000 long tons.

TREASURES OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:44-46; 14:13-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—James 1:17.

Hidden treasure!—there is something about it that catches our imaginations and stirs our expectancy of discovering great riches. Men are constantly going on expeditions to seek out lost treasure. Others are engaged in study and research to bring out new treasures in nature or in the realm of learning or art.

Why not stir up a little excitement about the unbelievably rich treasures which are hid in Christ and in the life of faith in Him? It is not hidden, except to the eye of unbelief, but it is greatly neglected and all but forgotten by many.

The Scripture portions assigned for our lesson are not as well adapted to it as one could wish, but we may make good use of them. We learn here:

I. The Cost of Redemption (13:44-46).

Undoubtedly the lesson committee had in mind the usual interpretation of these parables, which presents the sinner as the one seeking the treasure and giving up all that he may have Christ.

While it is true that our redemption is worth more than anything else in all the world and that the Christian would gladly set aside (or would he?) everything for Christ's sake, yet that does not fulfill the thought of this parable. After all, what has a sinner (whose own righteousness is described in Scripture as "filthy rags") to sell in order to obtain redemption? And is it for sale? (See Eph. 2:8).

Obviously, we here have the Saviour with His all-seeing eye and loving heart noting in fallen humanity the pearl of great price, His own Church. He then gives up all the glory He had with the Father, comes to the earth, and even becomes sin for us that He may bring us to God.

Salvation in Christ is no little thing, not something which was purchased with gold or silver, but with the precious blood of Christ. We ought to value it highly, and because we are bought with such a price we ought always to glorify God (I Cor. 6:20).

II. The Heart of Compassion (14: 13-16).

The One who was willing to die that men might have eternal life was not unmindful of their need of His mercy and grace for their daily problems. Jesus not only died that we might have redemption from sin, but He lived (yes, and lives now!) with tender-hearted compassion toward those in need.

He who is the living Bread was not willing that men should hunger for their daily bread. The disciples saw only one solution—to send them away, but Jesus said, "They need not depart."

One is fearful that the church has been all too quick about sending the needy away to some social agency or community charity, when it should have won their confidence by its compassion, and then brought them to Christ.

Little is much when God is in it, and by the divine touch of Jesus the multitude was fed. Could we not do far more for Christ if we would only use the little we have, with His blessing, for the help of our fellow men?

III. The Miracle of Provision (14: 17-21).

We pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," and it is only as God provides it that we have it. He gives life to the seed, and multiplies it in rich harvest, and we eat, we trust, with thankful hearts.

That is a miracle—so oft repeated that we have lost a bit of the wonder and glory of it. Here in the story of the feeding of the five thousand and more (v. 21) with five loaves and two fishes, we have such a miracle of provision taking the little and making it enough for the multitude.

The Lord may not work in exactly the same way today, but do not God's servants see Him multiply their meager store as they give it out in His name? That is true whether the gift be of material or spiritual things. God can and does bless those who trust Him. Letting what we have pass through the hands of Christ results in transformation and multiplication. Try it!

Men and women are value-conscious in our day. While money is plentiful, goods of real quality are scarce, and one must look for that which has durability and worth. The treasures which Christ offers are enduring. He says, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal" (Matt. 6:20).

By contrast, "the things Satan offers are temporary. In a few years most earthly honors and wealth must be laid aside. But the treasures of the kingdom are treasures which God intends that we should possess forever.

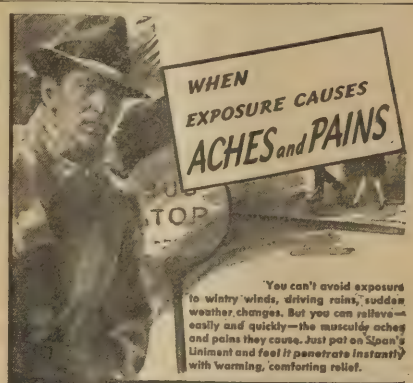
Sun's Weather Studied in Relation to That of Earth

Since 1941, a unique study to determine whether there is any connection between the weather of the sun and that of the earth has been carried on at Harvard's observatory near Climax, Colo., says Collier's. As photographs of the solar corona taken during a natural eclipse could not be used, a special movie camera had to be developed.



Called the coronagraph, it creates an artificial eclipse with masking screens, and automatically takes a picture in color every 10 seconds.

Meet the Men

WHO USE YOUR BATTERIES!

The Navy and Merchant Marine send rapid ship-to-ship messages by battery-powered flasher signal lights when radio communication might give a ship's position to the enemy.

It's difficult to locate men drifting in the sea! Water-tight battery lights on buoyant lifesaver suits have meant the difference between life and death for many Merchant seamen.

For emergency communication by voice, the Merchant Marine uses a portable megaphone to broadcast orders and instructions. Dry batteries give necessary power to the megaphone.

Two men and a bazooka make a winning team! But it takes large quantities of ammunition and dry battery power to keep these portable, hard-hitting weapons firing at the enemy.

Deadly flamethrowers are blazing the road to Victory! Dry batteries help to create the spark that sends these efficient weapons into instant, flaming action against the enemy.

The Signal Corps man with a Walkie-Talkie has freedom of speech as long as he has plenty of dry batteries! Handie-Talkies also use thousands of war batteries to power vital communications.

When they come Home— Burgess Batteries will be back again, too . . . powering flashlights, radios, telephones, instruments and controls for millions of homes, farms and industries throughout America.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

VOLUMN XXIII CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22 1945 NUMBER 8

TEACHERS BADLY NEEDED IN SCHOOLS

To People With College Training:

I would like to appeal to people with college training to offer their services as supply teachers in the public schools. It is often impossible to secure substitutes for teachers who are absent because of sickness or other emergencies. Almost every day children have to be sent to other classrooms because of absent teachers.

The great need is for college trained persons who can be reached by telephone and who have cars to use in going to schools. The pay is based upon training and teaching experience and is very low in comparison with salaries paid by business and industry. The services rendered, however, will be a direct contribution to the war effort and are of vital importance.

I appeal to housewives, ministers and others who have college training and whose duties will permit them to do substitute teaching to register with our office.

Sincerely,
D. P. CULP,
Superintendent
Chilton County Board of Education.

MRS. J. P. HAYES ILL IN BIRMINGHAM HOSPITAL

Mrs. J. P. Hayes, who has been in the South Highland Hospital, in Birmingham, for the past several weeks, has undergone another operation and will be there for several weeks more. It is reported, Her condition is "fair" and if no further complications arise she will soon be on the road to recovery.

RESOLUTION:

WHEREAS—God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved friend and colleague John M. Parrish, and

WHEREAS—The teaching profession of Alabama and Chilton County has lost a faithful worker and friend, and the school children of this state have lost a good teacher and counsellor, and

WHEREAS—We the teachers of Chilton County feel this loss so keenly. Therefore—

BE IT resolved by the Chilton County Teachers Association that we go on record as deploring this death of our beloved friend and co-worker as it removes from our midst one of our best teachers and friends of education in our state—and

BE IT further Resolved—That our association express to the family our deepest sympathy in the loss of this fine man, and

BE IT further Resolved—That a copy of these resolutions be given to each of the Clanton papers for publication, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the Chilton County Teachers Association.

LOCAL GIRLS HAVE BEEN CHOSEN CABINET MEMBERS AT ALABAMA COLLEGE

Miss Betty B. Hollis, Miss Helen Parrish and Miss Katherine Bryan of Clanton have been chosen to serve as Cabinet Members for the 27 Annual College Night at Alabama College, February 23-24.

Miss Hollis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hollis, is a pep leader for the Purple Cabinet.

Miss Parrish, daughter of Mrs. R. N. Ranson, is serving on the Writing committee for the Gold Cabinet.

Miss Bryan, daughter of Mrs. Beatrice Bryan, is a musician on the Purple Cabinet.

FARMERS ASKED TO INCREASE PRODUCTION

Standard Oil Helps In Program To Keep Farm Machinery "Fit And Fighting."

If our boys at the front are to be adequately fed and clothed, American farmers must produce more (even than last year's record crops) with less help, and with fewer replacements of farm machinery.

The supply of farm labor is shorter than ever. Agricultural deferments are being cancelled. Machinery replacements are harder to get. This means that tractors, farm trucks, and equipment—old and overtaxed though they may be—must be kept working every possible minute, if farm production quotas are to be reached.

"Our organization," says J. P. Lawrence, local agent of the Standard Oil Company, "is endeavoring to aid this program by helping the farmer keep his trucks, tractors and farm equipment in fighting trim."

SPECIAL NOTICE!

There will be a special class held at the Baptist church next Tuesday, February 27th, for those who did not get to attend the spend-the-day last Monday and study the Mission Book, "Pray Ye," in preparation for the week of prayer. Those who taught the book are being very gracious in giving of their time to present it again and everyone who possibly can should attend this meeting. This is a wonderful opportunity to hear and study one of the best Mission Books.

You don't have to be a member of the Baptist W.M.S. to attend, but if you are a member you are urged to be there Tuesday, February 27th, at 3:00 p.m.

Come and bring some one with you.

JAMES C. (Jack) ROBINSON

REPORTED MISSING LAST WEEK

James C. (Jack) Robinson, 19, has been missing in action against the enemy in France since December 16, 1944, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Robinson, of Clanton Route 5.

He entered the Service in June, 1943, going overseas in August, 1944.

Within the past few months, marketing specialists and county agents of the Alabama Extension Service assisted producers in marketing over 600,000 bushels of sweet potatoes valued at $1,208,000, an average of $1.94 per bnshel at the farm or shipping point.

White sauce blends well with plain cooked onions, carrots, parsnips or turnips.

HOYT TAYLOR PURCHASES SINCLAIR AGENCY OF COOSA AND TALLAPOOSA COUNTIES

Hoyt L. Taylor, former Clanton business man, and who has a wide host of friends here who will receive with interest the announcement that Mr. Taylor has purchased the Sinclair Refining Company Agency for Coosa and Tallapoosa Counties, with headquarters in Alexander City.

Mr. Taylor was the Sinclair Agent for the Clanton District from 1935 to 1942. He volunteered for the U. S. N. R. in 1942 and was in service approximately two years. After 14 months overseas he received a medical discharge. As Mr. Taylor goes to Alexander City, the good wishes of our community go with him for success in his new business.

INSTALLATION MEETING Y W A

The Y.W.A. met last Monday at 7:30 p. m. at the First Baptist Church This was an installation meeting for the new officers. The devotion was a scripture reading by Miss Marguerite Perry. The special songs for the meeting were: "Forward, Baptist comrades" and "Neath the Old Olive Tree." The latter being sung by Doris and Dorothy Bossinger.

The installation readings by Mrs. Earl Gray made each officer see more clearly the steps she should take as an officer and gave each a good determination to do her best.

Our most honored guest for the evening was Mrs. Roswell Owens, who gave us some "pep" talks on the duties of the Y.W.A. We also enjoyed the very nice refreshments prepared by Mrs. W. D. Hocutt and Mrs. William Arthur Willis of Circle 6.

We are to have a special meeting Monday, February 26, at 6:30 p.m. at the church for our mis[illegible] "Pray Ye." This will be pre[illegible] for the Week of Prayer [illegible] Mr. sons.

The regular meeting [illegible] following Monday, [illegible] Francis Bean. All m[illegible] ed to attend [illegible] Alex Johnson, Reporter.

USERS OF V-MAIL AID IN WAR EFFORT

"Each person who uses the facilities of V-mail is making a [illegible] tribution to the war effort, [illegible] Hartley B. Dean, Headquarters, [illegible] th Service Command Postal Officer, stated today. "Because it weighs only 1-140th as much as ordinary mail and conserves 98 per cent in cargo space, the use of V-mail releases thousands of cubic feet of space on both aircraft and surface vessels for vitally needed munitions, weapons and other war supplies.

"At this critical point of the war in both Europe and the Pacific area when supplies of all kinds are so urgently needed, it seems little enough for the American people—safe here at home—to cooperate to the extent of providing additional cargo space to speed victory, by the use of V-mail."

ALABAMA SCHOOLS TO RECEIVE 6,000 FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

More than 6,000 fire extinguishers are in process of being distributed among the schools of Alabama by the Alabama Defense Council, according to a report made to its director Haygood Paterson by Burt Andrews, Chief of Protective Services of the organization.

"Every school building in Alabama will have one or more of these extinguishers when the distribution is completed," says Mr. Andrews. "This will mean a great deal towards the protection of school buildings in Alabama. Even the remotest school building will have a fire extinguisher, which will be of invaluable service where incipient fires are discovered."

The extinguishers were furnished the Alabama Defense Council by the national organization and their distribution is a part of the widespread and effective work being done by the Alabama Defense Council at this particular time.

FFA BOYS MAKE TOUR OF CALF PROJECTS

The members of the Clanton and Isabella chapters of the FFA that are feeding calves for the livestock show in Birmingham next May made a tour of inspection of the projects Wednesday afternoon, February 14.

The boys making the trip were: Francis Bryant, E. J. Klinner, Tommie Joe Fox, Jerome Conway, Billy Hayes and Joe Earl Bray from Isabella, and Hoover Moatts from Clanton. Accompanying the group was their advisor, James D. Tyler, Vocational Agriculture teacher at Clanton.

These boys should be complimented on the splendid work they are doing in getting the calves ready for the show. Only one of them, E. J. Klinner, has had previous experience in fattening calves for the show, but they are all working like veterans. Their competitors will [illegible] get on their toes to take [illegible] prizes.

Besides the profit they are expecting to realize from [illegible] the boys are learning the [illegible] selection, feeding, ca[illegible] and breeding of livesto[illegible] Wednesday gave the [illegible] tunity to observe, compare and discuss some of their problems and a chance to get a bird's eye view of the competition they will be [illegible] Birmingham. The greatest problem discussed were fe[illegible] training the calves.

JONES SEED AND FEED COMPANY BUYS RECORD NUMBER OF HENS

There is also money for farmers in chickens and produce as proven by S. A. Jones, of Jones Seed & Feed Co last week when he paid more than $1100.00 out to the farmers of the County in less than six hours. That is the amount he paid for nearly 5000 pounds of hens. According to Mr. Jones the price paid the farmers was 5 cents per pounds higher than the local market on the same product.

6,000 GARDENS COUNTY GOAL FOR SPRING

M. R. Glasscock. Co. Agent

Food production cannot be overemphasized. The National Garden Council set as a goal 20,000,000 victory gardens for 1945. The goal for Chilton County is approximately 6,500 gardens. These should be divided equally between rural and urban families. It is felt that a large number of families living in the towns of Alabama have suitable areas for growing a garden and that they can make a real contribution to our food production program by planting these areas in vegetables

If there is a time to START gardening, the month of February is the time. A Stanton 4-H Club boy, when asked to give the date the [illegible] should be planted, [illegible] Valentine's Day [illegible] are started the [illegible] are a number of vegetables [illegible] should be in the ground [illegible] or February. In all parts [illegible] such crops are beets, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, endive, lettuce mustard, onions, English peas, Irish potatoes, radishes, spinach, and a mixture of turnips should be planted [illegible]

There are a number [illegible] must be [illegible]

[illegible] der if it has been brok[illegible]

[illegible] Finally, mark the rows by making a furrow about 4 inches deep, and put in the commercial fertilizer and [illegible] it. A 4-10-7 fertilizer is ideal for most vegetables. Apply 10 pounds on each [illegible]

Good seed, of varieties that are known to be adapted to Alabama conditions are very important. However, [illegible] in most cases are not [illegible] sible for poor stand[illegible] are due largely to the [illegible] placed [illegible] deep. With the exception of English peas and potatoes, early spring vegetables should be planted on a low bed. The garden rake is the only implement that is needed in planting these vegetables. When ready to plant freshen the soil with the rake. Do not make a furror with a hoe, but simply sprinkle the seed on top of the loose soil, walk on them, and cover with just enough soil so the seed cannot to be seen. To emphasize this point carrot plants will never show above the ground if the seed are planted more than one-half inch deep.

SCHOOL DAZE

Fond Mother (visiting school) — My son has such original ideas, don't you think?

Teacher—Yes, especially in spelling.

She Aims to Help

He—When we are married, darling, I'm never going to be like those husbands who get cross and ugly just because the coffee is cold.

She (sweetly)—Well, if you ever do, honey, I'll make it hot for you.

Practical Viewpoint

Sunday School Teacher (explaining the principle of turning the other cheek)—Now, John, what would you do supposing a boy hit you?

John—How big a boy are you supposing?

No Handicap

A young woman and a handsome farm lad were walking along a country road together in the evening. The farm lad was carrying a large pail on his back, holding a chicken in one hand, a cane in the other, and leading a goat. They came to a dark lane.

Said the girl: "I'm afraid to walk here with you. You might try to kiss me."

Said the farm lad: "How could I, with all these things I'm carrying?"

"Well, you might stick the cane in the ground, tie the goat to it, and put the chicken under the pail."

Matrimonial Parable

Old Bachelor—Why is marriage like a cafeteria?

Young Benedict—I don't know. Why?

O. B.—Because men grab something that looks good, and pay later.

Among the Veterans

Soldier (back from Europe) — I understand there are an awful lot of unmarried girls in Australia.

Comrade (back from the Pacific) —Yes, but the worst feature of all is the fleas.

SUBURBAN CHATTER

Mr. Smith—By the way, Brown, how many controls are there on that radio set you have at home?

Mr. Brown—Three, my wife and the two children.

Love's Tender Illusions

He—Honey, I'm going to love you till the cows come home.

She—Are you, Johnny dear? But what made you think of cows?

He—Cows? Why, you have such big eyes!

Magic Touch

Cook—I hope you enjoyed your game with the sergeant. He's awfully clever at cards.

Corporal—I'll say he is. He started by telling my fortune. Now he's counting it.

Washington Digest

Calls 'Hydromania' Threat To U. S. Water Resources

Expert Charges Disregard for Natural Values In Engineering Projects; Sees Danger To Wild-Life Especially Acute.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

As the prospects of fat public works budgets for the postwar area arise on the Washington scene, the planners, big and little, rush up to drop their pet blueprints into the hopper.

Recently, I witnessed the preliminaries of a counter-balancing move, something that might be called a prophylactic effort to save some of the beneficiaries of governmental projects from being killed by too much kindness. This effort is embodied in a bill presented by Rep. Karl Mundt of South Dakota, and I heard a sort of informal preview of some of the testimony that will be offered before the committee on rivers and harbors in its behalf.

The bill is H.R. 519 and it deals with protection against pollution of the country's waterways. It was in the course of the preview discussion that I heard another affliction, "hydromania," a cure for which may be harder to find. It is said to result from "overindulgence in damming." It is not mentioned in the Mundt bill but the connection is obvious.

The purpose of Mr. Mundt's measure is as follows:

"To prevent pollution of the waters of the United States and to correct existing water pollution as a vital necessity to public health, economic welfare, healthful recreation, navigation, the support of invaluable aquatic life, and as a logical and desirable postwar public works program."

As I say, Mr. Mundt doesn't mention hydromania in his bill, but one of his close friends who had much to do with writing the legislation has. He is Kenneth Reid, executive secretary of the Isaac Walton league. Since the proposed legislation has also to do with the problem of protecting our piscatorial and aquatic life, I want to quote a few of Mr. Reid's observations on one kind of "killing with kindness" which frequently accompanies over-generous government spending.

Mr. Reid I should call a "hydrophile," for he ardently pleads the case for what he refers to as "the orphan stepchild" of our natural resources—water. Conservation of the land is pretty well understood but water, says Mr. Reid, "has been dammed and diverted, drained and polluted, stolen and wasted, with utter disregard of existing natural values, with bland unconcern for its biological functions and its public, aquatic and recreational values."

"From the early days of our nation down to the present time," he continues (and this is where hydromania comes in), "water has run the gantlet of a horde of engineers (whether private or governmental, makes no difference) who see in a running stream or a sparkling lake only the material uses to which the water can be put."

Existence of Fish Menaced

Reid is an engineer himself and is not unsympathetic with the great achievements of his profession. But his colleagues sometimes outrun their zeal and he appears perturbed lest postwar public works activities threaten our lakes and rivers, their natural beauty and all that is in them.

What he is fighting is the kind of engineering activity, stimulated by grants-in-aid from the federal government, which will damage the waterways and their inhabitants, flora and fauna. On the other hand, he is all for the encouragement of constructive construction which will work in the opposite direction.

He thinks we have overdone the damming; he questions the economy of reclaiming land at a great capital cost per acre with certain irrigation projects. These, Reid opines, likewise often destroy fish by cutting them off from their spawning grounds. He mentions the dams in the Columbia river which, he says, threaten a ten million dollar annual salmon take.

That is the effect of hydromania resulting from well-intentioned and unselfish but unwise use of the engineering art. He points out that anything which kills fishes and interferes with the nation's wildlife is interfering with one of the nation's major industries. He estimates that the total expenditure in hunting and fishing, including licenses, equipment and other incidentals, reaches a billion dollars a year and therefore constitutes a major American industry and one which should be protected.

Reid also stresses the esthetic and recreational values destroyed in the building of great dams and reservoirs as well as by the pollution of streams.

Pollution Health Peril

The security feature which has been emphasized in the present war when the bombing of dams has caused such destruction, is another argument seized upon by Mr. Reid. His specific example of this phase of the argument sent a shudder down my back when he offered as an illustration the construction of 14 major dams in the Potomac watershed which was strongly advocated recently. If this project had gone through, he told me, my home town and the seat of our government would have been made "extremely vulnerable to air attack through breaching of the big dams that would be immediately above Washington."

"The engineer's desire," says Mr. Reid solemnly, "to pour concrete in prodigious quantities, impound great areas of water behind magnificent monuments to engineering, dig ditches and canals, bore tunnels and otherwise remake the landscape of America, is quite irrepressible."

However, what he and his colleagues are now most concerned in eradicating is pollution and that, I think, will meet the approval of most people even if they won't go all the way with Mr. Reid concerning hydromania.

Protection against pollution, the proponents of the Mundt bill insist, "won't cost a thin dime" because the money saved by eliminating the need of purifying polluted water will more than make up for it.

Besides destruction of aesthetic and property values, it is pointed out that pollution is a growing menace to health. The Mundt bill would give the states every chance to clean up their own situations but, it is argued, "since streams flow by gravity without any regard for state boundaries pollution is logically and constitutionally a matter for federal control."

Provisions to take care of these various angles are included in the Mundt bill. Such measures in the past have been opposed by some communities which thought it was cheaper to dump their sewage in the rivers, and by industrial plants that felt the same way.

Although machines compete with humans and with horses and mules in this war, the dog, never before used officially by American forces, has become the competitor of mechanized devices.

A dog, by his sense of smell, can detect a strange presence at 500 feet. Up to October 1 of last year the army, coast guard and marines had used over 9,000 trained dogs.

The first thing a K-9, as they are called, learns, is to be a one-man dog. They won't accept food from any but their masters nor will they allow anyone else to pet them. Then the training gets more complicated and includes even parachute jumping. But there is one thing that these otherwise clever animals cannot be taught, namely, to tell enemy troops from their own. This has one advantage, however — they don't treat a German wearing an American uniform any differently than if he weren't an enemy in disguise. Soldiers sometimes do.

Demand for farm products is likely to continue at present wartime levels throughout most of 1945. Regardless of the course of the war the demand for many farm products, at ceiling prices, may continue to exceed supplies in 1945.

Consumers' food costs in large cities in recent months have been slightly lower than they were in midsummer. The index for November, 1944, was 136.5 as compared with 137.7 in August and the peak of 143.0 in May, 1943. Nonfood costs have been following a somewhat different trend.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber does not enter into the making of tents, yet the demand for military tents has reduced the manufacture of passenger car tires. Tire cord and yarn for tent duck are made with the same machinery.

Assuming that the trees are in reasonably good condition when the Far East rubber plantations are reoccupied, experts anticipate that within two years some 1,600,000 tons of natural rubber will be made available, enough to fill one year's estimated needs. That is why B. F. Goodrich officials believe civilians will still have to depend upon synthetic rubber tonnage in addition to that required for natural security.

Less Than a Cup of Sugar Solves Dessert Problem

Dessert Fancies

When your tables aren't set with just exactly the meat you'd like to serve, or when meals tend to become monotonous then give your family a dessert that's really elegant. It'll make up for a lot of omissions in the easiest way.

No, I'm not going to give you a lot of recipes calling for sugar or high-point canned fruits. I'm going to tell you of simple but fanciful desserts that will make it seem like you're splurging.

A bit of the right tang in a pudding, a colorful cake with an unusual icing or a sweet tidbit like marmalade scones are some of the sweets I'm recommending. They'll keep the sugar budget in trim condition and still satisfy sweet-seekers:

Pudding Princess.
(Serves 5-6)

3 egg yolks
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
⅔ cup sugar
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
¼ cup lemon juice
3 stiffly beaten egg whites

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add lemon peel; gradually beat in sugar. Soften gelatin in cold water. Add lemon juice and gelatin to egg yolk mixture. Fold in whites. Pour into an oiled mold. Chill. Unmold, and serve with stewed dried fruits or stirred custard sauce.

Sponge cake with two eggs? Baked in 30 minutes? Yes, it's possible if you'll follow this recipe. It doesn't have to be iced but you'll like it with the simple baked-on icing:

Lightning Sponge Cake.

2 eggs
¾ cup sugar
1 cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup hot milk

Beat eggs until thick and light. Slowly add sugar and beat with a spoon for five minutes. Fold sifted dry ingredients into egg and sugar mixture all at once. Melt butter in hot milk and add all at once. The folding of the milk and dry ingredients should take only about 1 minute. Bake in a waxed-paper-lined 8-inch square pan in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 minutes.

Baked-On Frosting.

1 egg white, beaten stiff
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¼ cup brown sugar or honey
¼ cup chopped nutmeats

Add baking powder to the egg white which has been beaten. Add the sugar or syrup gradually, blending in gradually, then spread over cake while it is still hot. Sprinkle with ½ cup nutmeats. Bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned.

Minimum is the description of ingredients for these delectable scones made into a whirl. A coffee cake dressed up like this one will go nicely for dessert:

Marmalade Scone Whirl.
(Makes 1 10-inch coffee cake)

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ cup shortening
1 egg
¾ cup milk
1½ cups citrus marmalade

Sift together all dry ingredients. Cut or rub in shortening. Beat egg and add milk. Add to flour mixture. Stir only enough to moisten. Spread dough into greased 10-inch pan. With fingertips press dough down in grooves an inch wide, making a circular pattern. Make first groove one inch from edge of pan and second 1½ inches from first. Fill grooves with citrus marmalade. Bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven 20 minutes.

In a recent survey among homemakers, it was discovered that the biggest leftover problem was that of stale bread. Combined with healthful eggs and milk, this leftover bread can make a delectable pudding:

Bread Pudding.
(Serves 8)

2 cups dry bread cubes
4 cups milk scalded
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
4 slightly beaten eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Soak bread in milk for 5 minutes. Add butter, salt and sugar. Pour slowly over eggs; add vanilla extract and mix well. Pour into a greased baking dish. Bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate (350-degree) oven until firm, about 50 minutes.

Variations of Bread Pudding.

Raisin Pudding: Add ½ cup seeded raisins before baking. Serve with lemon sauce.

Butterscotch Bread Pudding: Substitute brown sugar for white.

Chocolate Bread Pudding: Melt 1 ounce unsweetened chocolate in hot milk before adding bread. Serve with butter or foamy sauce.

Lemon Sauce.

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
1½ teaspoons lemon juice

Mix dry ingredients in order given. Gradually add water and cook over low heat until thick and clear. Add butter and lemon juice and blend thoroughly.

Victory Cookies.

1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
2 cups broken walnuts
1½ cups each, pitted dates - raisins
⅔ cup shortening
½ cup brown sugar firmly packed
2 eggs

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Toss together with fruits and nuts. Cream shortening; beat in sugar, then eggs and flour mixture. Drop by spoonfuls on greased sheet and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 12 minutes. These cookies become soft after several days.

JESUS, THE SON OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 16:13-17; 17:1-9.
GOLDEN TEXT — Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 10:32.

"What think ye of Christ?"

There is a question that every human being must answer. Jesus asked it (Matt. 22:42), and each of us makes some kind of reply.

It is the touchstone that tries men, and churches, organizations and movements. The answer to it is of deep importance, for it determines character, condition, and destiny for time and eternity.

Jesus, the Christ, the Son of the living God, is the center of the entire lesson.

I. Jesus Confessed (16:13-17).

With His crucifixion now only six months away, our Lord in preparation for it is about to make a more definite claim to Messiahship, and thus to establish the truth in the minds of His disciples. He therefore asks this all-important question about Himself.

First, it is a general query, "Whom do men say that I am?" The answer (v. 14) indicates that the common opinion concerning Christ was a very high one. He had made an impression on the people of His time, and this has been true down through the ages. Even those who do not believe on Him admit that He was "the ideal representative and guide to humanity," or the person before whom "everyone would kneel." But beautiful tributes to His character and leadership are worse than meaningless unless they lead to a personal confession of Him as Lord and Saviour.

The question becomes personal as He asks, "Whom do ye say that I am?" That question no one can escape. We cannot refuse to answer. Neutrality is impossible. Whatever we do or say, or do not do or say, is a decision.

Peter's answer is really the sum and substance of Christian doctrine. He recognized Him as the Messiah, the fulfillment of all Hebrew prophecy, and as the Son of the living God, the Redeemer and Saviour of men, the One in whom centers all Christian faith.

II. Jesus Transfigured (17:1-3).

As His amazed disciples looked on, the eternal, divine glory of the Son of God could no longer be hidden by the human body and the humble garments of our Lord, and "His face did shine as the sun and His raiment was white as light."

They saw their beloved Master now for what He really was, the Son of God. The testimony of Peter was no longer mere words, although ever so blessed. His speech had been confirmed by sight and they knew their Master as the Lord of glory.

It is essential in both the life and service of a Christian that he clearly understand the truth about Christ, His person and His work. When that understanding is tied up with a personal vision of His glory, there is assurance and power.

The want of such a vision explains the lack of zeal for soul-winning, the ineffectiveness of witness, the unwillingness to suffer or sacrifice for Christ's sake. "Where there is no vision, the people perish" (Prov. 29:18) for want of a witness concerning the Saviour.

III. Jesus Triumphant (17:4-8).

The crowning point of the transfiguration came when the voice spoke out of the bright cloud and gave not only the Father's unqualified approval of Christ, but also His command that men should listen to Him and heed His message of redemption.

Note how this word of the Father completed the transfiguration. In itself it might have been likened to that which happened to Moses (Ex. 34:29, 30). We say likened to, because the glory which showed forth in Jesus was from within, not just a reflected glow.

But the words from heaven provide the conclusive and final witness. They so impressed Peter that he talked of them as a cherished memory and a transforming power in his life, even when he was an old man (II Pet. 1:16-18).

How do they impress you? Are you ready to acknowledge Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God, and take Him as your Saviour?

IV. Jesus Only (17:7-9).

Having seen Him in His glory, they now saw Him alone. True, the others had gone, but is there not also the thought that He, the blessed God, now filled the vision of their souls?

Surely we find it right at hand to make that application to our own lives. When we really see Him as He is, then He fills our vision, and when He does that, we have reached real satisfaction of life.

"Jesus only" is more than a motto or a theme for a song. It is the epitome of a life worth while. It makes one want to ask everyone, "Do you know Him?" Well, do you? If not, will you take Him as your Saviour right now? Christian, will you let Him fill your life?

Ignorance Paid a Big Dividend to Tom Edison

When Thomas Edison first began to attain fame, his innocence in money matters often worked to his advantage.

"Will you take 30 thousand for the patent?" cabled an English company, referring to one of Edison's inventions.

"Don't accept that offer," urged his friends. "It's not enough."

"Nonsense," disagreed Edison. "The thing isn't worth a third of that. They can have it."

A few weeks later Edison received a check for $150,000 which made him sputter. For Edison had been thinking in terms of American dollars.

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

To Those Who Grieve

"It is better to break your heart than to do nothing with it."

I read that line once and it has stayed in my memory. I talk now not to those whose dreams come true—but to those who have been hurt—to those who dread to look ahead—to all those whom war has bereft.

To them I say—nothing can take away what you have had. Even though you have lost what was dearer than life, would you rather never have had it?

Suppose you have lost what you dreamed of having? So what? Would you rather never have dreamed?

Can you truthfully say that you would rather never have loved—than loved and lost? Can you truthfully say you would rather have no memories?

Is your heart broken—or bruised? Remember, a bruised flower gives the sweetest fragrance.

I say to you—wake up—life is richer because of what you have had. Stop bewailing. Be grateful for what happiness was yours—that is one thing no one can ever take from you.

"This day I've lived," Horace wrote centuries ago.

However deep your grief, however great your loss, you had something out of life. Would you, to protect yourself from hurt—never have lived? Only those who do not live do not suffer. Shut your heart from those things that are worth caring for and you shut your heart to any reason for living.

What if you have lost? Face your sorrow! Be glad for what you have had! You can overcome sorrow—but you can never fill the vacuum of a hermit heart!

Brace up! "It is better to break your heart than to do nothing with it!"—Alex City Outlook.

LISTER HILL AND THE POLL TAX REPEAL

Georgia has set Alabama a splendid example in repealing the poll tax. The poll tax is on its way out. A year ago the Legislature of Tennessee attempted to repeal the tax in Tennessee, and South Carolina the poll tax has nothing to do with voting in the Democratic Primary.

The Alabama poll tax because of its cumulative requirements, is the most burdensome, restrictive, and undemocratic of that of any state.

In Alabama we have exempted from the poll tax all members of the Armed Forces in World War One and in the present World War. But the mother of a boy on the fighting front may have to go back and pay thirty-six dollars to cast her vote and have her say as to what kind of government and nation her boy is fighting to save.

In Southern states like North Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana where the poll tax has been repealed for many years the fears of the opponents of repeal proved groundless and the repeal has proved so wise that there are none who are seriously advocating a reinstatement of the tax.

The fitness and eligibility of citizens to vote in Alabama is determined under state registration laws and by county registration boards and not by the poll tax. The effect of the poll tax in Alabama, however, is to disenfranchise several hundred thousand white men and women who are fit and qualified to vote. There may be some who wish these white men and women to be disenfranchised and want an electorate limited and circumscribed by the payment of a poll tax, knowing that such a limited electorate increases their power and their chances for control of our state and its government. I believe that Alabama needs the vote of these white men and women and that her welfare will be greatly served by their enfranchisement.

Alabama is one member of the family of the United States and I am confident that it is to her interest to have the approbation and good feeling of the other members of the family which her repeal of the poll tax will bring her. The power to repeal the poll tax rests with the people of Alabama. The people of Alabama have a right to vote on the question and make the decision. Knowing the Legislature of Alabama as I do, I am sure at its forthcoming session in May it's members will not deny this right to the people of Alabama. The poll tax in Alabama must go.

Farm foreclosure sales have been made on a steadily descending scale over the last 10 years, according to estimates compiled by the Farm Credit Administration, U. S. Department of Agriculture. The number of foreclosure sales for 1943 totaled 5,800, as compared with 11,000 in 1942 and 65,000 in 1934.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Wouldn't this world be better,
If the folks we meet would say:
I know something good about you,
And then treat us just that way.

Wouldn't it be fine and dandy,
If each hand-clasp warm and true
Carried with it this assurance:
I know something good about you.

Wouldn't things here be pleasant,
If the good that's in us all,
Were the only thing about us
That folks bothered to recall.

Wouldn't life be more happy,
If we'd praise the good we see!
For there's such a lot of goodness
In the worst of you and me.

Wouldn't it be nice to practice
This fine way of thinking, too;
You know something good about me,
I know something good about you.

We believe City policeman Leon Brown has a real sense of humor. The other morning when it was so terribly foggy, policeman Brown tells us that while coming to town he saw a rabbit feeling his way across the street with a walking cane trying to find the other side. It being so foggy he didn't tell us how he was able to see the rabbit.

Little Johnny's mother had just presented the family with twins, and the household was in a state of excitement. Father beamed with pride as he took Johnny to one side.

"If you'll tell your teacher about it, I'm sure she will give you a day's holiday," he said.

That afternoon Johnny came home radiant. "I don't have to go to school tomorrow," he announced proudly.

"Did you tell your teacher about the twins?" asked his father.

"No, I just told her I had a baby sister. I'm saving the other for next week!"

Melvin Mims has returned home with an honorable discharge from the armed forces. When we asked Melvin how he liked wearing those 'civies' again, he said that he liked it fine but all of his clothes had out-grown him while he was away. They are all too large for him now. He has lost a little weight and looks like he needs a little 'fattening', but we hope that a few well-placed, home-cooked meals will fix him back like new again.

Speaking of helpless feelings—which we don't think anyone was—did you ever get into your automobile and start off somewhere, then look into your rear-view mirror to see what might be following you, and look into a brownish-grey void, which incidently happened to be the top of your car, instead of a view of the highway behind you? Some Service Station attendants delight in twisting your mirror in some outlandish position and leaving it that way, so it will give you a start when you look into it.

Two WACs were being followed by a lone G.I. Finally one of the gals could stand the suspense no longer, turned to the G.I. and ordered, "Either go get another soldier or quit following us."

Gene Gore is interested in these war wives who want to work getting jobs. He tells us that two of the ladies came to see him the other day and complained that there was nothing to do here and they wanted work. We understand that one of these young ladies was well experienced in her line and capable of holding down a very important place in a position in critical need of employes at this time. We will have to agree with Gene. If there is a place in your business for one of these ladies look her up and offer her a place first. They're doing a big job themselves, keeping the home fires burning while their husband is away fighting our battles.

NEWS FROM SARDIS

There is not very much to report this week from Sardis, unless some one else sends in some more news than this. I have a few items to mention.

We learn that Mr. Earnest Scott of this community has suffered the loss of one of his horses. The other one was just alive according to a report we got Saturday morning. Now, I think the people of this community should help Mr. Scott buy two more horses or one at least.

We also learned that Mr. Tommie G. Rucker is in a hospital at Tuscaloosa undergoing treatment. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. James Edward Donovan of this community will leave home Tuesday of this week to go to Fort McClellon of Anniston, where he will be assignment to the army.

We hope the weather will soon break off good so people will attend Sunday School and Church. — George Anderson, Reporter.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors and Drs. Moore and Franklin, Mr and Mrs Bob White the undertaker, and the Thorsby Quartet, for their courtesy and kindness shown during our darling mother's illness and death, Mrs Sarah Blankenship who died Wednesday at 9 a. m., Feb. 14, 1945. We do especially thank the friends and neighbors for the beautiful floral offerings, also Rev. Homer Carroll. May God's richest blessings attend each of you is our prayer.

HIGH SCHOOL GLEE CLUB HAVE VALENTINE PARTY

Last Wednesday evening, members of the High School Glee Club and a number of invited guests, enjoyed a well planned Valentine Party, in the High School Gym. The party started with a grand march, followed by games, which included every one. Games of every kind from ping-pong to checkers were enjoyed and those who wished to dance were allowed to do so.

The Glee Club is well organized, with committees appointed to take care of every detail, making this a very successful and enjoyable entertainment for the young folks.

Mrs Raymond Mims, who is leader of the Glee Club, was assisted in chaperoning the girls and boys by Mrs. J. E. Gowan and Mr and Mrs Patterson Hicks.

LETTER FROM MARVIN ELLISON IN BELGIUM

An interesting letter comes this week from Marvin Ellison. Here is a part of the letter, we'll just let you read what he says.

Dear Ben:

How's the boy? And the family? By golly they aren't going to keep me over here, away from all "those things so dear to me"—over 4 or 5 years—I mean I hope they don't! They are sending a few of my outfit home every month on rotation. I figure my time will come up in about 100 months That's about the odds right now. So--I'll hobble in on my cane by then.

Tell all my friends hello for me and write sometimes, best wishes to all,

Your Friend,
Marvin Ellison.

REPAIR FARM BUILDINGS for greater production

How to do it with CONCRETE and save scarce materials

To increase food production to meet war requirements it is essential that buildings used to house livestock and store crops be in good repair.

Concrete foundations under barns, hog houses or poultry houses will restore these buildings to usefulness and provide protection against rot, termites and waste and damage caused by rats.

Free booklet, "Restoring Old Farm Buildings With Concrete" tells how to make "essential" repairs with the use of little or no steel or other scarce materials.

If you need help, see your concrete contractor, ready-mixed concrete producer or material dealer.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

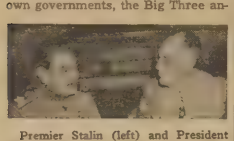
German Militarism Doomed As Big Three Chart New Europe; Allies Spear Deeper into Reich

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Bearing personal possessions, Filipinos pass through smouldering ruins in Manila after Jap fight to slow Yank advance.

BIG THREE:
Europe of Tomorrow



Although details necessarily must be left until after the war, the general pattern of the Europe of tomorrow loomed as a result of the Big Three's conference at the Crimean watering resort of Yalta.

As the outline emerged, there was the prospect of a Europe consisting of an expanded Russia; of smaller countries promised the right of picking their own governments, and of a Germany emasculated to prevent the conduct of another war.

Determined to stamp out German militarism:, the Big Three planned to break up both the general staff and army; do away with all wehrmacht equipment; eliminate or control all Reich industry that could be used for war production, and wipe out all Nazi and Junker influence in the life of the state.

In conceding Russia's claim to eastern Poland, Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill compromised with Premier Stalin on the question of a government for the recently liberated nation, agreeing on a regime to include members of the present Red-sponsored Lublin committee and other Democratic elements, with a free election to be held later for final settlement of the problem.

In addition to promising the smaller nations the right to choose their own governments, the Big Three announced their willingness to assist these countries in carrying out measures to assure such a step. On the all-important question of an organization to preserve the peace, there was said to be understanding on a formula for determining an aggressor, with details to be worked out at a United Nations meeting in San Francisco, Calif., April 25.

With Russia adamant on demands for the use of both German labor and material for reconstructing devastated Europe, the Big Three arranged for the establishment of a commission in Moscow to decide on amounts due and methods to be employed in exacting payment.

Under Big Three plans for post-war occupation of Germany, Russia would take over the east, the British the northwest and the U. S. the west, with France invited to share in the control of the Rhineland.

Reacting violently to the Big Three's program, German propagandists raved: "Never — this is our sacred oath in this hour in which the enemy has dropped his mask and in which we Germans now see the devilish grimace of the Jew—never will this murder be practiced on our people."

THE WAR:
Allies Gain

With much German industry already overrun in the east, and with much more threatened by the Russian drive on Saxony and the U. S. and British assault on the Ruhr, the Nazis tried to bolster their people's resistance with promises of a military miracle.

What the miracle would be, of course, no one knew, although observers speculated on possibilities of a German plan to suck the Russians deep into the Reich and then counterattack when the spring thaws bogged long Red communications.

Sensing such a plan, himself, Russia's Marshal Gregory Zhukov maintained heavy pressure on German lines to the north of his forces bearing down on Berlin, in attempts to unsettle Nazi designs on a great flanking drive southward.

If Germans placed their faith in a miracle, however, that faith was being sorely tested by Allied operations, with the latest Russian menace being a drive on industrially important Saxony, following a quick dash westward across Silesia. Not only did the Reds threaten to seal off this production center, as they had moved to seal off the lower Silesian area, but they also threatened to swing to the north and outflank embattled Berlin, periled by Zhukov's armies pressing forward from the east.

Meanwhile, Marshal Bernard Montgomery's Canadian and British Tommies pressed their attack on the northern anchor of the Siegfried line in an attempt to swing behind German defenses and then break south for the Ruhr, trapping Nazi forces facing U. S. armies on the Rhineland plain from the rear.

As Montgomery's forces headed for the Ruhr, the Nazis opened the floodgates of the Urft and Schwammenauel dams farther to the south, inundating the western banks of the Roer river and bogging the British 2nd and U. S. 1st and 9th armies in their smash through the Siegfried line to the Rhine. Rain added to the floodwaters released at the rate of 1,000,000 cubic feet an hour to slow the Allied advance.

MEAT:
Growing Shortage

Because of decreased cattle and hog slaughter and big government demands, civilian meat consumption may drop to the lowest level since 1935, when emergency butchering of stock in drouth areas and the pig reduction program forced the per capita supply to 116 pounds.

Short now, meat may become even more scarce during the spring and summer, when the government, unable to stock up during the winter months, may be compelled to go into the market during the slack seasons. With the normal increase in fall butchering, supplies could be expected to become more plentiful then.

In a further effort to get its share of meat now, the government recently ordered federally inspected packers to set aside 70 per cent, instead of 50 per cent, of their utility grade beef production for use in canned goods for the military and lend-lease.

PACIFIC:
Mop Up Manila

As Yanks moved to close up the last pockets of Jap resistance on battered Manila, other U. S. forces spread out to the east and north of the central plain to tighten their grip on the main Philippine island of Luzon.

With its modern business district gutted by fire, Manila long rumbled to heavy gunfire, as die-hard enemy units, fighting to the last, mounted artillery and mortars in buildings in the south end of the city and peppered advancing U. S. liberation forces.

Replying in kind, famed U. S. artillery pulverized Jap strongpoints, with ground forces pushing their way forward through rubble-strewn streets, still infested by light-armed enemy remnants. As the 37th infantry, 1st cavalry and 11 air borne divisions closed in on the Japs, they pressed them tighter and tighter against the dock area.

Jap Ghosts

Although the starving Jap stragglers on Guam constitute neither a menace nor a threat today, it is still a surprise to come on them without warning in banana and coconut groves or to catch them at night trying to pilfer from a ration dump, marine correspondent Alvin Josephy Jr., says.

With the development of the island and with the arrival of army and navy nurses, women correspondents and congressional groups, the presence of Japanese is annoying.

LUMBER

Most of the lumber being produced in the United States today is used as shipping boxes and crates for materials destined to the fighting fronts.

Shipping boxes and crates for overseas delivery last year required as much lumber as all other uses combined, the National Geographic society points out. Three-fourths of the several hundred thousand items shipped to the fighting fronts are packed in wooden boxes.

LABOR:
Back in Fold

After prolonged negotiations, the AFL was ready to receive John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers back into the fold after a long absence brought about by Big John's departure to organize the CIO, with which he broke following its refusal to vote against President Roosevelt in 1940.

Lewis' return to the AFL was based upon both parties' acceptance of terms fashioned by Big John and AFL Chieftain William Green in a recent conference, in which the UMW would be allowed to maintain its District 50, made up of all kinds of workers, and the AFL would later decide if any of these workers properly belonged to other of its affiliates.

An AFL hookup with Lewis would provide it with powerful leadership in its drive to assault the War Labor board's "Little Steel" formula, limiting wage increases to 15 per cent of the January, 1941, level, which both say is inadequate since living costs have risen higher than that figure.

POSTWAR FINANCE:
Asks U. S. Leadership

Declaring that it was time for the U. S. to take the lead in economic cooperation to establish the foundation for expanded world trade, President Roosevelt asked congressional approval for the Bretton Woods monetary plans stabilizing foreign exchange and providing long-term reconstruction loans.

At the same time, the President said that the Bretton Woods program was just one phase in a broad effort to promote world prosperity, with others to include an allied food and agriculture organization, expansion of the reciprocal trade agreements act of 1934, reduction of trade barriers, control of monopolies and orderly marketings of surpluses.

Under the Bretton Woods plans, the U. S. would contribute about 25 per cent of the money for the $8,800,000,000 stabilization fund enabling nations to obtain foreign exchange for world trade, etc., at par values instead of open market rates. For the reconstruction fund, the U. S. would contribute about 33 per cent of the $9,100,000,000 capital, to be largely used in guaranteeing private loans to foreign countries.

FRANCE:
Industry Control

Claiming that the gravity of France's reconstruction problems called for central direction in rebuilding the shattered economy so that all phases might develop evenly, the De Gaulle government assumed state control of private enterprise.

Gen. De Gaulle

With De Gaulle proclaiming that ". . . We wish France to be a state that directs the economic effort to the profit of all in order that life will become better for each Frenchman . . ." it was indicated that government control might well be established as a permanent institution.

Under De Gaulle's program, the government will instruct provisional commissioners, selected after consultation with labor and industry, in the supervision of every branch of business. So far, most commissioners have been drawn from the ranks of labor, thus tending to liberalize the program.

WAR COSTS:
Taxes

Reflecting the tremendous cost of the war, Uncle Sam took nearly a third of the nation's earnings in taxes in 1944, with income and corporation levies accounting for the bulk of the payments.

While total income in 1944 was estimated at 156½ billion dollars, taxes were set at 42 billion dollars, with individual payments of over 17 billion dollars and corporation returns of over 16½ billion dollars. Of the corporation taxes, it was said, almost two-thirds came from excess profits.

Cigarette, liquor, luxury, etc., taxes yielded over 6 billion dollars.

Life

Costly in treasure, World War II has been equally costly in life, too, with total U. S. fatalities to date approximating 200,000 compared with 53,000 for all of World War I.

Compilation of statistics, however, show that Germany and Russia have suffered the greatest number of fatalities, with Japan next with 600,000.

By comparison, Britain's and France's losses have been far below World War I fatalities, with the former suffering 325,000 to date as against 900,000, and the latter only 150,000 as against 1,250,000.

FARM CREDIT

The farm mortgage debt of the country is the lowest in 30 years and much of the reduction is due to repayments on loans made through the Federal land bank system, the USDA reports. The volume of land bank and commissioner loans made in 1944 was the largest since 1938, totaling $105,292,000, but for every dollar borrowed more than 3½ dollars was repaid on loans made in prior years, thus reducing the volume of loans outstanding about 17 per cent in the year.

FOR the first time Hollywood can remember, two actors, in different studios and different productions, are playing the same character. In "Murder, My Sweet" (RKO) and "The Big Sleep" (Warners), the author, Raymond Chandler, has as central character a hard-fisted detective, Philip Marlowe. That was right up Humphrey Bogart's alley, and Warners gave it to him; at RKO, apple-cheeked Dick Powell got it. Off the screen they're good friends, go sailing and play bridge together. It was Powell who took Bogart under his wing when the latter came to Hollywood from the New York stage; today Bogart is Powell's biggest booster for success in his own field.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

FOREWORD

Major Victor Joppolo, U. S. A., was a good man. You will see that. It is the whole reason why I want you to know his story.

He was the Amgot officer of a small Italian town called Adano. He was more or less the American mayor after our invasion.

Amgot, as you know, stood for Allied Military Government Occupied Territory. The authorities decided, shortly after the happenings of this story, that the word Amgot had an ugly Germanic sound, and they heard that the two syllables of the word, when taken separately, were Turkish words unmentionable in translation.. So they decided to call it A.M.G. and forget about the Occupied Territory.

That was later, though. When I knew him, Major Joppolo was Amgot officer of Adano, and he was good.

There were probably not any really bad men in Amgot, but there were some stupid ones (and still are, even though the Turkish embarrassment has been taken care of). You see, the theories about administering occupied territories all turned out to be just theories, and in fact the thing which determined whether we Americans would be successful in that toughest of all jobs was nothing more or less than the quality of the men who did the administering.

That is why I think it is important for you to know about Major Joppolo. He was a good man, though weak in certain attractive, human ways, and what he did and what he was not able to do in Adano represented in miniature what America can and cannot do in Europe. Since he happened to be a good man, his works represented the best of the possibilities.

America is the international country. Major Joppolo was an Italian-American going to work in Italy. Our army has Yugoslavs and Frenchmen and Austrians and Czechs and Norwegians in it, and everywhere our army goes in Europe, a man can turn to the private beside him and say: "Hey, Mac, what's this furriner saying? How much does he want for that bunch of grapes?" And Mac will be able to translate.

CHAPTER I

Invasion had come to the town of Adano.

An American corporal ran tautly along the dirty Via Favemi and at the corner he threw himself down. He made certain arrangements with his light machine gun and then turned and beckoned to his friends to come forward.

In the Via Calabria, in another part of town, a party of three crept forward like cats. An explosion, possibly of a mortar shell, at some distance to the north but apparently inside the town, caused them to fall flat with a splash of dust. They waited on their bellies to see what would happen.

An entire platoon ducked from grave to grave in the Capucin Cemetery high on the hill overlooking town. The entire platoon was scared. They were out of touch with their unit. They did not know the situation. They were near their objective, which was the rocky crest not far off, but they wanted to find out what was going on in the town before they moved on.

All through the town of Adano, Americans were like this. They were not getting much resistance, but it was their first day of invasion, and they were tight in their muscles.

But at one of the sulphur loading jetties at the port a Major with a brief case under his arm stepped from the sliding gangway of LCT No. 9488, and he seemed to be wholly calm.

"Borth," he said to the sergeant who followed him onto the jetty, "this is like coming home, how often I have dreamed this." And he bent over and touched the palm of his hand to the jetty, then dusted his palm off on his woolen pants.

This man was Major Victor Joppolo, who had been named senior civil affairs officer of the town of Adano, representing Amgot. He was a man of medium height, with the dark skin of his parents, who were Italians from near Florence. He had a mustache. His face was round and his cheeks seemed cheerful but his eyes were intense and serious. He was about thirty-five.

The sergeant with him was Leonard Borth, an M.P., who was to be in charge of matters of security in Adano: he was to help weed out the bad Italians and make use of the good ones. Borth had volunteered to be the first to go into the town with the Major. Borth had no fear; he cared about nothing. He was of Hungarian parentage, and he had lived many places—in Budapest, where he had taken pre-medical studies, in Rome, where he had been a correspondent for Pester Lloyd, in Vienna, where he had worked in a travel agency, in Marseille, where he had been secretary to a rich exporter, in Boston, where he had been a reporter for the Herald, and in San Francisco, where he sold radios. Still he was less than thirty. He was an American citizen and an enlisted man by choice. To him the whole war was a cynical joke, and he considered his job in the war to make people take themselves less seriously.

When the Major touched Italian soil, Borth said: "You are too sentimental."

The Major said: "Maybe, but you will be the same when you get to Hungary."

"Never, not me."

The Major looked toward the town and said: "Do you think it's safe now?"

Borth said: "Why not?"

"Then how do we go?"

Borth unfolded a map case deliberately. He put a freckled finger on the celluloid cover and said: "Here, by the Via Barrino as far as the Via of October Twenty-eight, and the Piazza is at the top of the Via of October Twenty-eight."

"October Twenty-eight," the Major said, "what is that, October Twenty-eight?"

"That's the date of Mussolini's march on Rome, in 1922," Borth said. "It is the day when Mussolini thinks he began to be a big shot." Borth was very good at memory.

They started walking. The Major said: "I have lost all count, so what is today?"

"July tenth."

"We will call it the Via of July Ten."

"So you're renaming the streets already. Next you'll be raising monuments, Major Joppolo, first to an unknown soldier, then to yourself. I don't trust you men who are so

"I don't trust you men who are so sentimental."

sentimental and have too damn much conscience."

"Cut the kidding," the Major said. There was an echo in the way he said it, as if he were a boy having been called wop by others in school. In spite of the gold maple leaf of rank on the collar, there was an echo.

At the corner of the third alley running off the Via of October Twenty-eight, the two men came on a dead Italian woman. She had been dressed in black. Her right leg was blown off and the flies for some reason preferred the dark sticky pool of blood and dust to her stump.

"Awful," the Major said, for although the blood was not yet dry, nevertheless there was already a beginning of a sweet but vomitous odor. "It's a hell of a note," he said, "that we had to do that to our friends."

"Friends," said Borth, "that's a laugh."

"It wasn't them, not the ones like her," the Major said. "They weren't our enemies. My mother's mother must have been like her. It wasn't the poor ones like her, it was the bunch up there where we're going, those crooks in the City Hall."

"Be careful," Borth said, and his face showed that he was teasing the Major again. "You're going to have your office in the City Hall. Be careful you don't get to be a crook too."

"Lay off," the Major said.

Borth said: "I don't trust your conscience, sir, I'm appointing myself assistant conscience."

"Lay off," the Major said, and there was that echo.

Borth said: "Maybe it was a crook's house, how can you tell? Better forget the house and concern yourself with that." He pointed into an alley at some straw and melon seeds and old chicken guts and flies. And Borth added: "No question of guilty or not guilty there, Major. Just something to get clean. You've got some business in that alley, not in that house there."

"I know my business, I know what I want to do, I know what it's like to be poor, Borth."

Borth was silent. He found the seriousness of this Major Joppolo something hard to penetrate.

They came in time to the town's main square, which was called Piazza Progresso. And on that square they saw the building they were looking for.

There was a clock tower on the left hand front corner. On top of the tower there was a metal frame which must have been designed to hold a bell. It was baroque and looked very old. But there was no bell.

On the side of the clock tower big white letters said: "Il Popolo Italiano ha creata col suo sangue l'Impero, lo fecondera col sua lavoro e lo difendera contra chiunque colle sua armi."

The Major pointed and said: "See, Borth, even after our invasion it says: 'The Italian people built the Empire with their blood, will make it fruitful with their work and will defend it against anyone with their arms.'"

Borth said: "I know you can read Italian. So can I. Don't translate for Borth."

The Major said: "I know, but think of how that sounds today."

Borth said: "It sounds silly, sure."

The Major said: "If they had seen any fruit of their work, they would have fought with their arms. I bet we could teach them to want to defend what they have. I want to do so much here, Borth."

Borth said: "That sounds silly too. Remember the alley, clean up the alleyway, sir, it is the alley that you ought to concentrate on."

The Major walked across the Piazza up to the big black door of the Palazzo, put his brief case down, took a piece of chalk out of his pocket, and wrote on a panel of the door: "Victor Joppolo, Major, U.S.A., AMGOT, Town of Adano."

Then both men went inside and up some marble stairs, looking all around them as they climbed. They took a turn and went through a door marked Podesta. The office on the other side of that door took Victor Joppolo's breath away.

In the first place, it was so very big. It must have been seventy feet long and thirty feet wide. The ceiling was high, and the floor was marble.

"Say," said Major Joppolo, "this is okay."

"Looks like that office of Mussolini's," Borth said. "Come to think of it, you look quite a lot like Mussolini, sir, except the mustache. Will it be okay with you to be a Mussolini?"

"Cut the kidding," the Major said. "Let's look around."

They went out through the white door at the end of the room and walked through several offices, all of which were crowded with desks and files and bookcases. The files had not been emptied or even disturbed. "Good," said Borth, "lists of names, every one registered and all their records. It'll be easy for us here."

The Major said: "What a difference between my office and these others. It is shameful."

All Borth said was: "Your office?"

When the two went back into the big office there was an Italian there. He had evidently been hiding in the building. He was a small man, with a shiny linen office coat on, with his collar buttoned but no tie.

The small Italian gave the Fascist salute and with an eager face said in Italian: "Welcome to the Americans! Live Roosevelt! How glad I am that you have arrived. For many years I have hated the Fascists."

The Major said in Italian: "Who are you?"

The little man said: "Zito Giuseppe. I have been well known as anti-Fascist."

Major Joppolo said: "What do you do?"

Zito said: "I greet the Americans."

Borth said in an Italian which was heavily accented: "Idiot, what was your job before the disembarkation?"

Zito said: "Zito Giovanni, usher in the Palazzo di Citta, native of Adano."

Major Joppolo said: "You were the usher here?"

"Every day from eight to eight."

"Why did you work for the Fascists if you hated them?"

"I have hated them many years, I am well known as anti-Fascist, I have lived under a great suspicion."

The Major said: "Usher, I love the truth, you will find that out. If you lie to me, you will be in very serious trouble. Do not lie to me. If you were a Fascist, you were a Fascist. There is no need to lie."

Zito said: "One had to eat, one had to earn a living. I have six children."

Major Joppolo said: "So you were a Fascist. Now you will have to learn to live in a democracy. You will be my usher."

The little Zito was delighted.

The Major said: "Do not salute me that way."

Zito bowed and said: "The fascist salute, no sir."

Oak Leaf Heirloom Quilt From Nebraska

THIS handsome quilt belonged to Mary Gregg McCollum who lived in Kearney, Nebraska, sixty or more years ago. Faded to a soft pink on white, it was doubtless a bright turkey red "oak leaf" when as a bride she went from Berea, Kentucky, to Nebraska. The twenty-inch block is put together in four separate sections—the leaf itself is 7 inches.

Hirohito's Wealth

While the Japanese look upon their emperor as a god with no thought of earthly things such as money, Hirohito has made the greatest fortune in history since attacking China in 1937, says Collier's.

Through war profits and increased values of his personal holdings in every important enterprise in his empire, Hirohito has enlarged his wealth, according to an informed source, from about $1,600,000,000 to $6,000,000,000—and in that land in which the average wage of skilled workmen is still 80 sen (19 cents) a day.

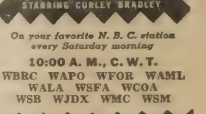
To Relieve Bad Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Add your syrup and you have a full pint of medicine that will amaze you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.



This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

One of the Earth's

Natural Treasures...

Chilean Nitrate Ranks with Gold, Oil, and Other Substances, In Value to Mankind

Huge electric shovels—made in the U.S.A.—rip natural nitrate ore from the earth in Chile. This is the raw "caliche" just as Nature created it.

You think of Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda as a granulated substance, nicely bagged for easy handling to help you make better crops.

Right . . . but this is a picture of the finished product. Behind it are dramatic pictures of production.

Like other natural treasures of the earth, Chilean Nitrate is mined, refined and processed before it is ready to use. The supply of this natural treasure is virtually unlimited. Beds already known contain enough nitrate ore to last for hundreds of years.

Men who produce nitrate are a hardy lot. They live and work in areas where almost nothing grows and it practically never rains. Many of the engineers and executives are American. Most of their machinery is too.

Today Chilean Nitrate is so finely processed, thanks to new plants and methods, that it is shipped in bulk from Chile, bagged at American ports.

Because of its natural origin, Chilean Nitrate contains in addition to large proportions of nitrogen and sodium, small amounts of boron, iodine, manganese, copper—34 elements in all—many of which are known to be essential to healthy plant growth.

Easy to Handle . . . Easy to Use
Natural Chilean Nitrate comes in two forms—Champion brand and Old Style. It reaches you in fine mechanical condition, in even-weight bags, for easy storage and handling.

Natural CHILEAN NITRATE of SODA

American Railroads are the GREATEST...

- Transportation agency in times of war.
- Carriers of commerce in times of peace.
- Employers of labor.
- Originators of pay rolls that foster industrial and social welfare.
- Purchasers of materials and supplies.
- Payers of taxes that support Government and schools.
- Promoters of the Country's development.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad—"The Old Reliable,"—for 95 years has shared importantly in all these activities.

It is a half-billion dollar corporation—spending millions of dollars every year and quickening the South's agricultural and industrial life all along its nearly 5,000 miles of steel highways.

It is a regulated free enterprise—performing a tremendous and useful private and public service.

When the people of the South appraise the value of a large and essential industry, the L & N asks that its contribution be appropriately measured.

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, MARCH 1, 1945

4-H CLUB MEMBERS TOUR COUNTY PROJECTS

4-H Beef Club members met in clanton Saturday to make a tour of feeder calf projects in the county. Mr. Passmore, of Autauga County, who is one of the largest Aberdeen-Angus breeders in the state came up to visit club projects with the boys and girls. After visiting the various club members calves, Mr. Passmore complimented the boys and girls very highly on their work with feeder beef projects. He also predicted that Chilton County boys and girls should have a very successful show season.

The purpose of this tour was to let the Club boy and girls see other Club members' projects so that they would have some idea as to just how good a job everyone was doing. Most of the club steers are doing well and after seeing all projects, the boys and girls are going to do the best job possible to give their animals an opportunity to do everything they are capable of doing. There are 70 feeding days left before the show and club members agree that from now on out it is going to be necessary to give animals the best care possible to get the kind of calf they like to show.

This year club members are working toward showing in two shows. The probable date of the County show will be May 3, and at this time the people of the county will have an opportunity to see the animals. The calves will then be moved to Birmingham, where Chilton County boys and girls will compete with other Club members from over the state.

Feeder Beef Club boys and girls are enthusiastic in their project work and are to be commended on the fine work they are doing.

UNITY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION TO MEET

The Unity Sunday School Convention will meet with the Clanton Baptist Church, Tuesday, March 6th at 7:15 p. m. All Churches of the Unity Association are urged to send a delegate to this meeting.

MARCH 5-10 IS VICTORY GARDEN WEEK IN ALABAMA

Governor Chauncey Sparks has issued a proclamation naming the week of March 5-10 to be Victory Garden Week in Alabama. The proclamation follows:

WHEREAS, rationing of canned vegetables has emphasized the need for increased vegetable production, and

WHEREAS, every suitable vacant lot put to producing vegetables will be a stroke against Germany and Japan;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Chauncey Sparks, Governor of Alabama, do proclaim the week of March 5-10 to be Victory Garden Week in Alabama, and urge all citizens, both rural and urban, to grow Victory and farm gardens for wartime food needs and for better health. I sincerely hope that our State will reach its goal of 400,000 gardens — 200,000 Victory Gardens in cities and towns and 200,000 farm gardens. County and home agents and representatives of civilian defense and nutrition committees in every Alabama county will be glad to help arrange for vacant lots and to furnish information on successful methods for growing gardens.

Elizabeth Forney, extension home agent, and W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, are promoting the production of Victory and farm gardens in Alabama.

LESS MEAT FOR EACH PERSON DURING 1945

There will be less meat per person this year, reports the United States Department of Agriculture.

This is to be due to the fact that about one out of every three pounds of all U. S. meat is now being set aside for the Government. Meat set aside orders on beef, pork and poultry follow:

Beef: Packers operating under Federal inspection must set aside 60 percent of choice, good and commercial beef which meets Army specifications. Of utility grades for canning, 70 percent must be set aside; and of canner and cutter grades, 80 percent.

Pork: About 50 percent of the dressed pork produced under Federal inspection is set aside. In liveweight, this amounts to about 4 percent of frozen or Wiltshire sides, 4½ percent of loins, 4½ percent of hams, 8 percent of shoulder cuts, 5 percent of square cuts and seedless bellies, and 1½ percent of fat backs, jowls and American cut bellies.

Poultry: Poultry for the armed forces is being obtained through two War Food set aside orders, one for dressed chicken and the other for canned chicken and turkey.

Virtually 100 percent of chickens produced in the heavy poultry producing areas of Maryland, Deleware, Virginia, Georgia and 16 counties of Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, is now under set aside.

The entire U. S. Production of canned chicken and turkey went under set aside order on February 14, particularly to supply poultry meat for use in hospitals, army field rations and for shipment overseas.

Cleaning dates for applying arsenic calcium for cotton boll weevil are March 25 in south Alabama and April 10 in north Alabama, announces A. W. Jones, Alabama AAA Administrator. The program is being administered by AAA committees.

The Bureau of Census is experiencing considerable difficulty in obtaining enumerators for the 1945 Census of Agriculture. Persons interested in doing this type of work should see their county agents for further information.

ALABAMA 4-HERS WILL CELEBRATE MARCH 3 AND 11

Alabama will have 122,976 boys and girls among the 1,700,000 observing National 4-H Club Week March 3-11, announces T. A. Sims, extension 4-H leader of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

That Alabama 4-H members have a record of which to be proud is shown by the fact that 99,074 of them completed projects for training and for production of foods, feed, livestock and poultry, preservation of food, renovation of clothing, and care of farm machinery, says Mr. Sims.

Reports from the nation as a whole show the membership has something to celebrate: 400,000 acres of Victory gardens, 47 million quarts of food canned, and two million head of livestock and dairy cattle produced for war-time use.

In addition, club members have purchased or sold to others 140 million dollars worth of war bonds and stamps and collected 300 million pounds of scrap.

There is less yanking and strain if a blanket is well placed—far enough up to cover shoulders—far enough down to keep feet tucked in.

Alabama dairy farmers are continuing to push milk production at record heights to meet war requirements. Liberal feeding of grain concentrates is helping maintain high production.

PASTOR HICKMAN RETURNS FROM TRAINING SCHOOL

The Rev. A. T. Hickman, Pastor of the Temple Church, and State Sunday School Representative of churches of the Assemblies of God in Alabama, has returned from his trip to Springfield, Missouri, where he attended a National Sunday School Training School. Every phase of Sunday School work and Christian Education was discussed and taught in this Conference.

A great Homeland Crusade has been launched by the Assemblies of God to reach every state in the Nation. The Sunday Schools of the Assemblies of God are increasing at the rate of 300 per cent, and workers are being trained to further the program of Christian Education in the Homeland.

REV. A. T. HICKMAN

It should be noted, Rev. Hickman stated, that while some Demonstrations have lost in their Sunday School attendance, the Assemblies of God have had a steady increase. Rev. Mr. Hickman is asking that the public get better acquainted with the Assembly of God Sunday School Plan. You can do this by attending the Temple Church every Sunday.

All firewood sold by farmers is now subject to price ceilings, the OPA has announced. Ceilings generally are the highest prices charged by the farmer in March, 1942, however, in some areas specific ceilings have been set.

Turkey growers plan to raise 39,481,000 turkeys this year. This would be about 8 percent more than the record crop last year.

As wounded American boys come back from the battle fronts they find American Red Cross workers in all military and naval hospitals ready to help them. This year there will be more need than ever before for Red Cross service in domestic hospitals.

OLD AGE PENSION BOOSTERS TO MEET

The Chilton County Old Age Pension Boosters will hold a meeting [illegible] on the courthouse at 10:30 a. m. Saturday, March 3. The purpose of the meeting will be to carry out the necessary organizational program being launched throughout the Sixth Congressional District.

There will be out of town speakers and plenty of music. All Old-Age Pensioners are urged to be present

STUDY CLUB TO MEET FRIDAY MARCH 2ND

The Study Club will meet with Mrs L. C. Warr on Friday March 2, at 3 o'clock p. m.

This is the time for election of officers and annual reports. All members are urged to attend

PATE'S CHAPEL COOPERATIVE CLASS

A Cooperative Buying Club was organized by a group [illegible] at Pate's Chapel [illegible] Thursday night. For a period of weeks these members of the Farmers Union had been studying cooperatives and then decided to start a buying club as their first cooperative enterprise.

A general meeting of the Pate's Chapel Community is being called for this Thursday at 7 p. m. so that other families may order farm and home supplies through the Buying Club. It has also been proposed that in this meeting a committee shall be elected to work for an electric line. All members of the family are invited as there will be social features in the program.

COMMISSIONER WARNS OF GAS TAX EXEMPTION

Gasoline Tax Exemption and Refunds would seriously hamper the Farm to Market Road program, with the farmers as the principal losers, the Alabama Association of County Commissioners warned in a resolution this week.

Made public by John G. White of Uniontown, Secretary of the county officials state-wide organization, the resolution urges all citizens of the State's rural counties to protect their interest by opposing the exemption-refund proposal now pending before the Legislature

Very few farmers, it points out, would actually benefit from a law refunding any part of the gasoline tax. On the other hand, the vital Farm to Market program would be dealt a crippling blow, thus causing every farmer in Alabama to suffer.

Fifty percent of the State gas tax is shared with the counties for construction and maintenance of rural roads. If Alabama ever lets down the bars, city bus lines, taxicabs, manufacturers and many other groups will demand exemption and the disastrous effect on rural Alabama is easy to calculate.

Alabama is fortunate to have neither gas tax refunds nor exemptions. Any weakening of this policy would upset highway finances at a time when the State faces the problem of raising nearly thirty million dollars to match Federal aid funds allocated to us, the bulk of this money will be spent in rural counties.

The Association of County Commissioners feels that its position on gas tax exemption is sound and in the best interest of every Alabama farmer. We urge defeat of the pending proposal.

MISS NEWELL HONORED

Mrs. Walter Heywood and Mrs. [illegible] were hostesses to a [illegible] honoring Miss Juanita Newell last Saturday afternoon from 2:30 until 5:30. The shower was given at the home of Mrs. Haywood.

Miss Elizabeth Calfee presided at the brides book, registering 40 or more of the honorees friends.

The gifts were displayed in the living room by Mrs. Joseph Williams.

Mrs. Calfee served the tea, assisted by Mrs. Haywood.

The honoree wore a lovely dress of pink light-weight wool with heavy lace trimmings.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AT M. E. CHURCH

Sunday night March 4th at the Methodist Church, at 7:30 o'clock, the first session of the School of Missions will be held in the basement of the church. This is the program of the entire Methodist church and is expected to be held in every local church annually. It is under the supervision and direction of the pastor and is intended for all members of the church, children, young people and adults.

We are using as a basis for the discussions the book, "Christ After Chaos," by Bishop Arthur Moore. An interesting program has been planned for the coming Sunday night. Mrs. G. L. Wilkinson will speak to us about "The Post-War Foreign Missionary Task." Mr. Omar Reynolds will discuss, "Christ After Chaos, in China and Japan." Miss Donna Blackketter will tell a story entitled "A Light That Blessed a Nation." The young people under the leadership of Miss Ada Bennett will have charge of the music for these meetings. The four Circles of the Womens' Society of Christian Service will be hostesses at these four Sunday night meetings in March. There will be a social period at the close of the program Sunday night at which time Circle 1, will serve light refreshments. Everyone is cordially invited

Last Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour Layman's Day was observed at the Methodist church. Mr. D. P. Culp, Superintendent of Education of Chilton County presided. Mr. L. C. Warr made the address using as his subject, "The Church."—O. C. Lloyd, Pastor.

SERICEA IS A GOOD CROP

Sericea Lespedeza, a perennial legume, produces good hay. It furnishes good grazing. Both in good quantity. It provides good cover for birds, good control for pest plants like Johnson or nut grass; and makes good water disposal areas. And while doing these things it is a good soil builder.

And that's why the 51 Chilton County farmers listed below cooperating with the Soil Conservation District have purchased more than 6500 pounds of scarified sericea seed to plant this spring. Seventeen of these are farmers who already have sericea and are adding to their acreage.

The farmers:

Clarence W. Baker, G. M. Baker, A. V. Bice, J. C. Brockholdt, Wilson Bryant, W. R. Burks, D. A. Burkhalter, J. N. Calloway, C. R. Childress, Clyde C. Cofer, R. C. Cofer, A. D. Collins, J. Lit Cox, W. B. Cox, Alvin Davis, D. I. Deramus, James C. Durbin, P. G. Eiland, Barnie Ham, George H. Ham, V. H. Ham.

George and J. J. Headley, J. B. Hicks, Dewey Hill, E. Span Jones, Watson Jones, H. M. Kelly, Euall A. Killingsworth, Harold Lawrence, O. H. Lawrence, H. W. Lee, Leonard McCraw, A. B. Milford, G. U. Mims, Leyon Mims, A. K. Morgan, J. F. Nelson.

H. M. Nix, J. Olin Popwell, R. D. Powell, Charlie Sansom, C. F. Stapp, J. B. Tiffin, H. L. Traywick, Cecil C. Walker, Richard W. Wilkes, C. L. Wilkins, E. H. Williams, W. A. Williams, W. B. Wyatt.

If interested in planting sericea this year arrange for your seed now. Local seed dealers have a limited supply of good seed. See the Soil Conservationist for the District, or the County Agent, for details about land preperation and seeding.

If storage space is provided, it makes it much easier for children to form the habit of picking up and putting away play materials.

Report Germans Realign Forces; U.S. Seizes Tokyo Stepping-Stone; Curb Nighteries to Save Fuel

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

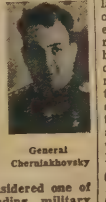
(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Arrow in aerial photo of Iwo Jima, with smoke from bomb hits still curdling over island, gives birds-eye view of latest locale of Allied assault in Pacific.

EUROPE:
Nazi Moves

Long decried as the "forgotten front," Italy came back into the news again with reports that the Nazis were slowly pulling out of the northern part of the country to reinforce their main eastern and western lines and take up shorter defenses on the southern approaches to the Reich.

Following Russian revelations of the appearance of German troops formerly stationed in Italy on the Nazis' sagging eastern front, neutral reports told of the movement of no less than four enemy divisions from the country through the Brenner Pass into Austria. Despite the reports of the weakening of their Italian defenses, however, the Germans fiercely contested the Eighth army's push along the Adriatic, using a new rocket, four feet long and holding 80 pounds of explosives.



Amid the talk of German reinforcement of their eastern front, Nazi defenses perceptibly stiffened in this sector, though yet to be put to the supreme test as Marshal Konev's First Ukranian army drew up on a line to join Marshal Zhukov's First White Russian army for the grand assault on Berlin.

As the Russians girded for the all-out smash on the German capital, cagey Zhukov and Konev, keeping an eye on their exposed flanks to the north and south, launched repeated attacks against Nazi forces in these sectors to prevent a drive upon their rear.

On the western front, Allied efforts were divided between the British and Canadians' drive on the Ruhr valley at the northern end of the Siegfried line, and the U. S. Third army's steady drive on the Rhine below Aachen.

Russ General Falls

Latest of the prominent generals to be killed in highly mobile World War II, requiring the presence of commanders close to the front lines to keep up with the battle, was 37-year-old Russian Ivan Chernlakhovsky, who fell while directing the drive on East Prussia. Youngest Russian general and army group commander, Chernlakhovsky, a tank expert, was considered one of the Soviet's outstanding military strategists.

General Chernlakhovsky

Diplomacy

Only ruffle in the Allied conference in the Crimean and Mediterranean regions was Gen. Charles de Gaulle's refusal to accept President Roosevelt's invitation for a meeting in Algiers, indicating French pique at FDR's inability to visit Paris and at reports that it was principally because of the U. S. that France was excluded from the Big Three talks.

Despite the diplomatic unpleasantries, however, the French were busy exchanging views with U. S., British and Russian officials on the Yalta decisions, and were also said to be preparing to participate in the United Nations pending postwar security conference at San Francisco in April.

Considered a key to the stability of western Europe, once-humbled France, rising proudly under De Gaulle's aggressive leadership, was said to be angling for extensive occupational rights in postwar Germany, including Austria.

PARALYSIS FUN D

Collecting $5,452,593 during its fiscal year ending May 31, 1944, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis authorized grants and appropriations totaling $1,828,850 for the period for research, education and training of physical therapists, Basil O'Connor, president, said.

During the year, the foundation also established a special fund of $2,000,000 for epidemics and other emergencies, and $739,860 was used during the country's second worst outbreak of polio last summer.

PACIFIC:
Bloody Battle

To thousands of gallant Leathernecks storming Iwo Jima's beaches, it was Tarawa all over again, as Maj. Gen. Harry Schmidt's Fifth marine corps pushed up rocky cliffs inland in the face of bitter opposition to tighten their hold on this little stepping - stone to Tokyo and threat to the U. S. super-fortress base in the Marianas, 800 miles to the south.

Losses were heavy on both sides as the Japs, first staggered by the terrific bombardment of both U. S. naval and air units, recovered from the initial shock to fight back viciously from such natural hideouts as caves as waves of marines hit the beaches on the southeast end of the island.

Due to become another epic of the bloody Pacific war, the invasion of Iwo Jima followed hard upon the mighty U. S. aerial strike against Tokyo, in which the planes from a powerful carrier fleet destroyed over 500 Jap aircraft, sank over a dozen ships and battered vital war plants.

HOME FRONT:
Nighteries Curbed

With the war taking critical turns in both Europe and the Pacific, and with the tight coal situation calling for its economical use, War Mobilization Director Byrnes ordered a midnight curfew on saloons, night clubs, dance halls, sports arenas and other places of entertainment to save on fuel generating electricity.

Although War Mobilizer Byrnes, himself, has no power to punish violators, he could bring pressure to bear against offenders by having the War Production board shut off their electricity; the War Manpower commission revoke their right to hire people; the Office of Defense Transportation prohibit deliveries of material to them, and the OPA recall their rationing privileges.

The night club order was the latest in a series including freezing of civilian production at current levels on December 16; closing of race tracks and limitation on number of employees non-essential firms can hire on December 23; return of most meats and vegetables to rationing over the Christmas weekend; review of farm deferments for the 18 to 25 age group, January 3, and the forbidding of outdoor advertising and decorative lighting, February 1.

CLOTHING:
Price Roll-Back

Implementing plans for rolling back clothing prices, which OPAdministrator Bowles had called a dangerous inflationary element, OPA established retail price ceilings on a list of cotton items for which manufacturers will receive fabric priorities.

Under OPA ceilings to be tagged on garments, men's regular sized shorts would range from 49 cents to $1.30 each; men's business shorts, $1.80 to $3.70; women's regular sized house dresses, $1.95 to $3.70; slips, 85 cents to $1.30; infants' and toddlers' pajamas, $1.05 to $2.70; rompers, $1.05 to $2.40; girls' school dresses, $1.65 to $3.40; boys' wash suits, $1.30 to $2.70, and boys' shirts and blouses, $1.05 to $1.35.

Under the program, in which the output of cheaper clothes is expected to account for a great portion of the reduction in the nation's apparel bill, the War Production board is to channel 75 per cent of all civilian fabric to low and popularly priced garments.

Ready for Clean Sweep

While the military services and industry geared to war could use sixty million new brooms in 1945, America's broomcorn farmers in 1944 greatly increased their planting and reaped their biggest crop in 20 years, says a National Geographic Society bulletin. If handles can be turned to match the big broomcorn harvest, 1945 may see a broom boom to match years of the industry's heyday.

LIVESTOCK:
Numbers Drop

Pointing up the tight meat situation for civilians, the U. S. department of agriculture's estimate of livestock on farms as of January 1, 1945, showed a sharp drop over the same date the preceding year.

At the same time, the USDA's survey revealed the largest supply of feed on hand per livestock unit in 20 years, with the amount per head 27 per cent over 1944.

Down 22,000,000 to a total of 60,600,000, the number of hogs showed the largest drop, the USDA said, with a decrease of 3,824,000 head of sheep to a total of 47,945,000 recording the next biggest slip. Down only 604,000 to 81,760,000, the number of cattle showed the least decline, being but 1 per cent below the all-time 1944 peak.

Meanwhile, the American Meat Institute, estimating that civilian meat supplies will be about 38 per cent less during the first quarter of this year compared with the same period in 1944, said there probably would be a still sharper drop from April to June.

PRICE SUPPORT:
New Tack

In a program which may establish a precedent for the future handling of the government's price-support for farm products, the War Food administration announced that it would purchase dry edible peas during 1945 only on plantings from acreage allotted the individual operator.

In the event of a general adoption of WFA's program, the government would bear a powerful weapon against overproduction resulting from surpassing goals, thus influencing the restriction of output to reasonable levels.

In the case of edible dry peas, it was said, WFA's program not only seeks to avoid an accumulation of excessively large stocks of peas, but also to encourage the shift of acreage formerly seeded to the plant to other crops.

Frogs Wrestle

While goggle-eyed spectator looks on, Naturalist Marjorie Terhune's pet frogs, Jimmy and Joe, wrestle in indoor lily-pond at Park Ridge, N. J., with each seeking to throw his opponent into the water.

DRAFT:
New Deferments

Even while congress moved to investigate the farm draft to determine whether local boards were not strictly adhering to the Tydings amendment in considering individual cases, Selective Service announced that a substantial number of key men under 30 stood to be deferred in essential industry.

In making the announcement, Selective Service revealed that responsibility for deferring the under 30 group would be divided between government agency offices in the different regions and in Washington, D. C., so that a closer check could be kept upon individual cases to assure retention of such key personnel as engineers, supervisors and foremen.

Pushed by Representative Lemke (N. D.), the proposed congressional investigation would look into the alleged induction of essential farm workers for whom replacements cannot be found, thus rotating agricultural production and imposing additional hardships on already sorely pressed farm operators.

PAN-AMERICA:
Good Neighbors Meet

Talk of a dramatic declaration of war by Argentina on Germany filled the air as delegates to the inter-American conference met in Mexico City for a discussion of economic and political relations of the western hemisphere in the postwar world.

The possibility of an Argentine declaration of war followed Germany's threat to deny its diplomats safe passage home because of Britain's refusal to afford similar privileges to Nazi officials now in Lisbon, Portugal, on the final leg of their journey from the South American country.

In discussing economic problems at Mexico City, South American nations sought to prevent a wholesale collapse of their prosperity built upon wartime exports to the U. S. after the cessation of hostilities. In political matters, the Latin nations sought an adequate voice in any postwar organization to preserve peace so as to prevent its complete dominance by the greater states.

BRIEFS . . .

According to the war department, the army in 1944 spent about three times the amount laid aside for G.I. sports equipment in 1943. The army also set up a special command to carry out the new sports programs.

'Bombs' Steel Center In Imaginary Flight

'Briefed' at Army Air Forces' School for Raid On Yawata; Follows Course Over Huge, Realistic Map.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

How would you like to bomb the Yawata steel works in a flying fortress?

I did it without moving from my classroom seat in Orlando, Fla., in one of the courses I attended at the army air force school of applied tactics. It is part of the "post graduate" instruction of the high officers of the army and it really is a realistic "briefing." When I had finished that demonstration, as it is called, I actually felt as if I had been on that bombing mission which started at an unnamed base in China and flew straight to a target, which is as clearly pictured in my mind as if I had made the trip.

I'll try to reenact it for you.

First, imagine a great map stretching across the room in which you are sitting with two black lines on it. The lower line runs, with a few slight deviations, straight to the target in Japan. Then there is a short leg running north and the second line, a little above the other, running back to the base. This is the course we took.

"Now, men," says the officer standing with a pointer in his hand, "you are going to bomb the steel works at Yawata. Daylight precision bombing and naturally you'll meet a little more opposition. But you know the importance of steel. I don't need to talk about that. You have been selected for your record last time. Keep up that record.

"As you know this is the first time for the new stagger formation. You've practiced it, a won't go into that. We have just 45 minutes to check the whole plan. We start at 650 and the first ship goes down the runway at 700."

(Military clocks theoretically run 24 hours. If the number is above 12, subtract 12. For instance 1630 is 4:30 in the afternoon—1630 minus 12 equals 4:30.)

Then came some directions about "assembly" (where this group joins the formation) which I won't go into here since space isn't adequate, but anyhow the assembly point is Chengtu.

Level Off For Bomb Run

"We must be at Chengtu at 800. Climb at 190 miles an hour to this point here (the pointer taps the map) . . . to 1,500 feet and level off. 200 miles per hour . . . this junction (another tap) 940; then swing on course . . . 91 degrees . . . (the pointer swishes out along the black line) to the coast.

"Here is your second climb . . . 1212 . . . 190 miles per hour . . . 300 feet a minute . . . to bombing altitude, at check point of island at 1245 (the pointer touches a little island off the Japan coast) . . . it will look like an inverted pyramid . . . then level off to the IP." (That is the point of entry which must be definitely established, for the flight from there on is directly to the target and careful synchronization with the other planes must be made.)

"Show a yellow-yellow flare so we'll know you've reached the IP . . . if dark, toggle four-and-a-half over the bomb run, then to the rally point, 14 miles north of target. "If you are crippled going over the target, try to cut short your turn. . . ."

I'll explain that: you see normally the planes would go north from the target and then turn at a right angle to the assembly point. Then another right angle back toward home, so if a plane had been hit and couldn't last long, it must try to catch up with the others and make known its condition. If the plane lags behind, it may be located by the group leader who will make continuous s-turns, looping back, trying to locate any stragglers. Meanwhile (as I forgot to explain) there is a friendly submarine loafing somewhere within radio call for two purposes. First, to try to locate any plane that has been forced down into the water; second, to pick up information concerning any enemy ships which the planes may have spotted so the sub can go over and take a poke at them.

I cannot in this space give you a fraction of the detail of this briefing, which pointed out on the map every hazard, every advantage, every varying condition. Special areas were blown up in large size: as a lake serving as a landmark where the planes start their ocean jump, a peculiarly shaped river where they reach land again. Sketches are furnished by meteorologists, showing just the types of clouds they will encounter, some "full of rocks" (covering mountain peaks) which are to be avoided.

The known location and number of enemy fighter planes is marked, as are the antiaircraft guns, and the temperature and the wind velocity at various levels.

Target's There, Then Gone

As to the target itself, large scale aerial pictures were shown which looked very much as the actual terrain would look to the pilot and bombardier. Also, a map of the whole city. Then a map of the target area, then photos of the target area, taken from an angle, as it will look when the plane approaches it from a distance, and another as it will look when it is directly below—the important moment.

That last statement "directly below" is misleading, as I found out. What you see when you look through the glass walls of the bomber's "nose" and what you see when you look through the bombsight are two quite different pictures. What you see when you look through the bombsight is the area (far ahead of where your plane is) upon which the bomb will hit if released at that precise instant. Naturally, at the speed at which a plane travels, the inertia of the bombs carries them far ahead as they fall.

This is disconcerting to the layman. I looked through the glass of the nose and picked me out a little Florida lake upon which I decided to drop my imaginary bomb. Then I looked into the sight and there was no lake there! Too late! If I had released my bombs then, they would have hit far beyond the distant shore although the plane hadn't even reached the near shore, yet.

But to return to my synthetic flight. I find it impossible to recount it with half the realism with which it was presented to me as my eyes followed that moving pointer from base to assembly point to "bomb line" (where the planes cross into enemy occupied terrain) on to the target itself, with the looping tracks that bounded it and then back, north and west again, over water and land, lake and mountain, on the long trek home.

After the briefing was finished four men in uniform took seats on the platform. They were men with stars on their service ribbons and some purple hearts, too. Men of many missions just such as the one described, or they would not have been chosen as instructors in this post graduate university of the air.

And they acted out with startling conviction the briefing of a returned crew. One, his nerves on razor edge from what he had gone through, another a little dazed, as if he had had a few drinks too many, another solemn, wide-eyed, another jumpy, loquacious, controversial, all true-to-life types, we are told.

Carefully and tactfully the officer checked their conflicting statements until finally all were molded into a reasonable and rational report.

"How many enemy fighters . . . here?"

"Oh, 80, easy," said the jumpy one.

"How many do you say?" (to the fellow in the half-daze).

"Well, a lot of 'em, I didn't count."

"Enough anyhow. And you didn't warn us about the others here," says the slap-happy one as he jumps up and jabs the map.

Finally it settles down to about 50. This estimate will be checked as other crews are checked, and an accurate estimate is obtained. The same careful and studied analysis of data on troop concentrations observed, movements along highways, convoys, new landing strips, as well as the damage done to the target.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: American troops, taking part in the invasion of Italy, arrived at the seaport town of Adano. Major Victor Joppolo, from Brooklyn, New York, was in charge as the Amgot officer. With him was Sergeant Leonard Borth, to serve as M.P. in charge of security. The Major immediately began to interview the citizens of Adano, in order to determine their needs. He was determined that nothing would be left undone which would improve their conditions and make their lives more pleasant. With Borth, Major Joppolo inspected the former Nazi headquarters, which he was to use as his office. He spent his first hours getting acquainted.

CHAPTER II

Major Joppolo said: "Do not bow. There is no need to grovel here. I am only a Major. Borth here is a Sergeant. Are you a man?"

Little Zito was getting very mixed up. "No sir," he said cautiously. Then he saw by the Major's expression that he should have said yes, and he did.

The Major said: "You may greet me by shaking my hand. You will greet Sergeant Borth in the same way."

Borth said, and his expression showed that he was teasing the Italian: "First I will find out if he's a dangerous Fascist."

Little Zito did not know whether to laugh or cry. He was frightened but he was also flattered by these men. He said: "I will never lie to you, Mister Major. I am anti-Fascist, Mister Sergeant. I will be usher here."

Major Joppolo said: "Be here at seven o'clock each morning."

"Seven o'clock," said Zito.

A brief burst of machine gun and rifle fire echoed from distant streets. Zito cringed.

Borth said: "You are perhaps a man but you are also frightened."

Major Joppolo said: "Has it been bad here?"

Zito started jabbering about the bombardments and the air raids. "We are very hungry," he said when he had cooled down a little. "For three days we have not had bread. All the important ones ran away and left me here to guard the Palazzo. The stink of dead is very bad, especially in the Piazza San Angelo. Some people are sick because the drivers of the water carts have not had the courage to get water for several days, because of the planes along the roads. We do not believe in victory. And our bell is gone."

Major Joppolo said: "Your bell?"

Zito said: "Our bell which was seven hundred years old. Mussolini took it. It rang with a good tone each quarter hour. Mussolini took it to make rifle barrels or something. The town was very angry. Everyone begged the Monsignor, who is the uncle of the Mayor, to offer some church bells instead. But the Monsignor is uncle of the Mayor, he is not the sort to desecrate churches, he says. It meant we lost our bell. And only two weeks before you came. Why did you not come sooner?"

"Where was this bell?"

"Right here." Zito pointed over his head. "The whole building tingled when it rang."

Major Joppolo said to Borth: "I saw the framework for the bell up on the tower, did you?" Then he added to Zito: "That is your reason for wanting us to have come sooner, is it?"

Zito was careful. "Partly," he said.

Now Major Joppolo said in English more or less to himself: "It's a nice picture, I wonder how old it is, maybe it's by somebody famous."

The Major went to the desk, pulled out the high-backed chair and sat in it, carefully putting his feet on the scrollwork footstool.

Borth said: "How does it feel, Duce?"

The Major said: "There is so much to do, I hardly know where to begin."

Borth said: "I know what I must do. I've got to find the offices of the Fascist Party, to see if I can find more records. May I take the Mister Usher and look for the Fascio?"

"Go ahead, Borth," the Major said.

When the two had left, Major Joppolo opened his brief case and took out some papers. He put them in a neat pile on the desk in front of him and began to read:

"INSTRUCTIONS TO CIVIL AFFAIRS OFFICERS. First day: Enter the city with the first column. Cooperate with C.I.C. in placing guards and seizing records. Place all food warehouses, enemy food dumps, wholesale food concerns, and other major food stocks under guard. Secure an estimate from local food distributors of the number of days of food supplies which are on hand or available. Make a report through channels on food situation in your area. See that the following establishments are placed under guard or protection: foundries, machine shops, electrical works, chemical plants, flour mills, breweries, cement plants, refrigeration plants, ice plants, warehouses, olive oil refineries, sulphur refineries, tunny oil mills, soap manufacturing plants, and any other important establishments. Locate and make available to port authorities all known local pilots. . . ."

And he read: "Don't make yourself cheap. Always be accessible to the public. Don't play favorites. Speak Italian whenever possible. Don't lose your temper. When plans fall down, improvise. . . ."

That was the one he wanted. When plans fall down, improvise.

The door opened. A man came in whose appearance was vaguely familiar to Major Joppolo. The Major realized later that he had seen not this man, but several who looked just like him, in bad American movies. He was the type of the second-rate Italian gangster, the small fellow in the gang who always stood behind the boss and who always took the rap. He had the bald head, the weak mouth. He had a scar across his cheek. His eye was furtive and he had the appearance of being willing but in need of instructions.

"I could do a good job for you."

He said in English: "You pull up a flag. War's a finish here in Adano, huh?"

The Major said: "Yes, who are you?"

The Italian said: "I'm from a Cleveland, Ohio. I been here a three year. You got a work for me?"

Major Joppolo said: "What's your name?"

The Italian said: "Ribaudo Giuseppe. In a Cleveland, call a me Joe."

Major Joppolo said: "What can you do?"

Ribaudo said: "I'm a good American. I'm a hate these Fascisti. I could do a good a job for you."

Major Joppolo said: "If you're such a good American, why did you leave the States?"

Ribaudo said: "I'm a kick out."

"Why?"

"I'm a no passport."

"How'd you get in, then?"

"I got a plenty friends in a Cleveland and a Buffalo."

"What did you do in the States?"

"Oh, I work a here, work a there."

Major Joppolo was pleased with Ribaudo for not trying to lie about his illegal entry and repatriation. He said: "Okay, I'll hire you. You will be my interpreter."

"You don't a speak Italian?"

"Yes, but there'll be other Americans here who don't, and I may need you for other things, too. Do you know these people well, do you know who's for us Americans and who's against us?"

"Sure, a boss, I help a you plenty."

"All right, what did you say your name was?"

"Ribaudo Giuseppe, just a Joe for you."

"No, we're in Italy, I'll call you Giuseppe here. Just two things now, Giuseppe. You've got to be honest with me; if you're not, you'll be in bad trouble. The other is, don't expect me to do you any favors. I wouldn't do for anyone else, see?"

"Oh sure, a boss. You don't a worry."

"Now tell me, what does this town need the most?"

"I could a go for a movie house, a boss."

"No, Giuseppe, I mean right now."

"Food, a boss. Food is a bad now in Adano. Three days a lot a people no eat a nothing."

"Why is that, because of a shortage of flour?"

"No, everyone been a scared. Baker don't a work, nobody sell a pasta, water don't a come in a carts. That's all, a boss."

"How many bakers are there in town?"

But before Giuseppe could answer this question, there were two simultaneous knocks on the door, one strong, and one weak.

"I open 'em up, a boss?" Giuseppe was at least eager.

"Please, Giuseppe."

Giuseppe hurried down the long room and opened the door. Two men almost tumbled in. Both were well dressed, and had neckties on. One of them was quite old. The other was very fat and looked forty. They hurried down the room, and each seemed anxious not to let the other get ahead of him.

The old one said in English, with a careful British accent: "My name is Cacopardo, at your service, Major. I am eighty-two. I own most of the sulphurs in this place. Here Cacopardo is sulphur and sulphur is Cacopardo. I wish to give you advices whenever you need of it."

The fat one, who seemed annoyed with Cacopardo for speaking first, said in English: "Craxi, my name. I have a telegram."

Major Joppolo said: "What can I do for you gentlemen?"

Cacopardo said: "Advices."

Craxi said: "Telegram."

Cacopardo said: "The Americans coming to Italian countryside need some advices." The old man looked straight at Giuseppe the interpreter and added: "I wish to advise you to be careful, in Adano are many men who were illegal in America, some men too who were condemned to the electrical chair in Brooklyn of New York."

Major Joppolo, seeing Giuseppe's embarrassment, said: "Giuseppe, I want to speak to the priest of the town. Will you get him for me?"

Giuseppe said: "Which priest, a boss?"

Cacopardo said: "In Adano are thirteen churches, Major, and in some, like San Angelo and San Sebastiano, are two or three priests."

Major Joppolo said: "Which church is best?"

Cacopardo said: "In churches ought not to be good and bad, but San Angelo is best, because Father Pensavecchio is best of all."

Major Joppolo said to Giuseppe: "Get him for me, will you?"

"Yes, a boss," Giuseppe said, and left.

When he had left, Major Joppolo said to Cacopardo: "Is this Giuseppe fellow not to be trusted?"

Cacopardo bowed and said: "I mention only the electrical chair, I am not one to name the names."

Major Joppolo spoke sharply: "You said you came to advise me. I must know about this Giuseppe. Is he to be trusted or not?"

The old man bowed again and said: "Giuseppe is a harmless one."

The fat Craxi was growing very annoyed that Cacopardo was getting all the attention. He said: "I have a telegram. Please to deliver."

Major Joppolo said: "This isn't a telegraph office. There's a war going on. Do you think we have nothing better to do than deliver telegrams?"

Craxi was apologetic. "I am anti-Fascist. I have a telegram. You are the one who can deliver it." And he pulled out from his pocket a piece of ruled paper, folded four ways and pinned shut with a safety pin. He handed the paper to the Major, who put it down on his desk, to the disappointment of Craxi.

The Major said: "You say you've come to advise me. Then tell me, what does this town need the most right now?"

Cacopardo said: "It needs a bell more than anything."

Craxi said: "Foolishness, a bell. More than anything, to eat is necessary."

Cacopardo said: "The town needs its bell back. You can always eat."

Craxi, who had been rather slighted in the conversation anyhow, now became quite angry. "You can always eat, you Cacopardo," he said. "You have a million lira, you sulphur. You can eat, but not all the people here can eat." And he turned to the Major: "To eat here is most necessary, more necessary than any bell."

Cacopardo broke into furious Italian: "Fat one, you think only of your stomach. The spirit is more important than the stomach. The bell was of our spirit. It was of our history. It was hung on the tower by Pietro of Aragona. It was designed by the sculptor Lucio de Anj of Modica."

Craxi said in Italian: "People who are very hungry have a ringing in their ears. They have no need of bells."

Cacopardo said: "By this bell the people were warned of the invasion of Roberto King of Naples, and he was driven back."

Craxi said: "People with malaria also have a ringing in their ears."

Cacopardo said: "The bell warned the people when Admiral Targout brought his French and his Turks to this place in 1553 and burned many homes and churches, and all that was left in the Church of Our Mother was the little silver crucifix which you will see now in the Church of San Angelo."

The Major said in Italian: "We have no time for this recital. I wish to know what things are pressing and must be taken care of at once."

Craxi said: "I have spoken. Food is the first thing."

Cacopardo said: "The bell must be taken care of at once. The bell did not warn us of this invasion, or we would have been in the streets with flowers to welcome you."

Ship Refuses to Give Up Despite Heavy Bomb Blast

Green Men Sail New Vessel In Strange Waters; Luck, Skill Help.

NEW YORK. — A ship that refused to die, despite a terrific buzz bomb blast that wrecked her superstructure and caved in her starboard side, has come back home.

She is the LST 384, the second landing ship tank to be commissioned by the navy and a veteran of the invasions of Sicily, Salerno, Anzio, and Normandy.

LST 384 came home the hard way. The navy rescue tug ATR 13 towed her from Milford Haven, Wales, to New York in a back-breaking voyage that fluctuated from 3 to 7 knots in speed and consumed 25 days in an Atlantic ocean that still has German U-boats lurking in it.

The story of LST 384 is one of green men sailing new ships in strange waters, of luck mixed with rapidly acquired skill and of the peculiar effect of blast from buzz bombs.

The 384, launched at Newport News in 1942, went to the Mediterranean and her first battle was off Scoglitti, Sicily. Salerno and Anzio followed.

Then, after a spell of hauling men and cargo around the Mediterranean, she was assigned to work in Normandy on one of the three beaches used by British forces. She didn't get ashore until D plus 10 and then only becaue her skipper tired of waiting in the jam off the beach. When he started in, other ships followed and their cargoes were unloaded without official order.

No. 384 crossed the channel 13 more times despite a layup for repairs to a damaged shaft. Then she was ordered to Deptford in the Thames estuary near London and was there for a "rest."

On July 8 the officers and men on watch heard the sound of an approaching buzz bomb. Then they saw the flaming monster and heard its stuttering motor shut off.

The entire superstructure toppled in the blast. Steel girders bent and twisted as quickly as a woman can twist a hairpin. A huge hole was blown in the starboard side of the hull and the blast or concussion stove in the side of the LST 312, anchored nearby, and killed 9 men — 3 more than were killed on the 384.

The luckiest man in the crew was Lieut. (j.g.) Floyd L. Maxham, 30, of Temple City, Calif., then the communications officer and now executive officer. Maxham formerly played full back for St. Mary's (Calif.) and coached football at Porterville (Calif.) high school. That night was the only night he ever was absent from the ship. He returned to find his room completely wrecked.

The sorely hurt 384 stayed in the Thames until August 2 when she was moved to Chatham, where the British removed the rest of her superstructure and shored up sagging bulkheads. She then was towed to Milford Haven in Wales and on August 29 in company with two other LSTs and a tanker, all under tow, she began the long, hard trek homeward.

Country's Armed Forces Increase to 11,900,000

WASHINGTON. — This country's armed forces have increased to 11,900,000 since 1940.

Of that number 8,100,000 are in the army; the rest in the navy, marines and coast guard.

The figures, compiled as of November 1, were presented recently to a senate committee and given in the report of James F. Byrnes, war mobilization director.

Mr. Byrnes cited them in emphasizing "the remarkable job done in mobilization" since 1940. At that time the military strength was 700,000.

The 11,900,000 was a net estimate after deducting 1,500,000 for those discharged or killed.

German Photos Show Murder of U. S. Captives

WITH THE U. S. FIRST ARMY. —Films taken from a captured German photographer have verified recent front-line accounts of the massacre of American prisoners by Nazi machine gunners.

Developed by the U. S. army signal corps, the films proved to be pictures taken after the massacre of the bodies of American troops lying where they were mowed down. That they were not ordinary battle casualties was indicated by the absence of equipment.

All the bodies had been stripped of belongings—in several cases even of shoes.

Freight Train Is Held Up for a Bovine Birth

FORT ERIE, ONT. — A freight train was delayed at the international railway bridge when a cow enroute to the United States gave birth to a calf. Compassionate railway men halted the train while a skilled cow hand ushered in the new arrival. Explanations were necessary at the destination for a count showed one more head than the customs manifest, filed prior to the departure of the train.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

During at least the first three years following the end of the war, experts believe that 70 million tires will be needed annually in the U. S. alone. The peak year, 1941, saw a production of 62 million tires in this country.

Greater use of mechanical farm implements in post-war years is expected to make agriculture one of the largest consumers of rubber.

Despite the Far East war, the Foreign Economic Administration expects that 73,100 tons of natural rubber will be shipped to the U. S. from Ceylon and India during 1944.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Having much more to do than it is humanly possible to do this week, we think that we will let your G. I. Joe. write the column. So, deciding [illegible] here we go. Everybody get a good hold and hang on——here we [illegible] again.

But before we start let us remark: we're terribly glad to see Louie Smith and Joe Edgar and Morgan Reynolds and numerous of the other fellows back again even though it is just for short [illegible].

And something else before we start, we mean before G. I. starts: Big Jim Folsom was in to see us this week. Jim was on his way to South Alabama [illegible] Jim says [illegible] are [illegible] all over the state and [illegible] thousand friends are behind him to the man in the next race.

CONVERSION

[illegible] I have never spoken to [illegible]

But now—I want to say "how do You [illegible]"

You see God, they told me You didn't exist—

And, like a fool—I believed all of this.

[illegible] a shell hole. I saw [illegible]

[illegible] they had told me [illegible]

I [illegible] time to see the things [illegible]

[illegible] calling a spade [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] that You will understand.

[illegible] come to this hellish [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] much more I can say,

[illegible] glad, God, I met You [illegible]

I guess the "zero hour" will soon be [illegible]

[illegible] afraid, since I know You [illegible]

The signal! — Well, God. — I'll have [illegible]

I like You lots—this I want You to know.

Look [illegible] this will be a horrible fight

[illegible] I may come to You [illegible]

[illegible] friendly with You [illegible]

HIGHLAND

Sunday was our regular preaching day. The crowd was not as good as it should have been, due to the bad weather and sickness in the families.

We had a wonderful Sunday School lesson. We think this should concern all of us. "Who do You Say The Son of Man Am?" A personal question for all of us.

Bro. Hand delivered a wonderful message after Sunday School.

We invite everyone that is near the church to attend Sunday School and church. We need your help and you need the church. Springtime will soon be here and we want everyone to try to attend regularly.

Mrs. John Nelson has been on the sick list but is improving some..

Mr. Clint Billingsley is also on the sick list.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs Jim Armstrong who has been sick so long is not any better. We earnestly pray for their speedy recovery.

Bro. E. C. Hand and wife, Mr. J. W. Hamilton and wife and daughter, were the dinner guests of Mr and Mrs Cecil Armstrong.

Mr and Mrs Mallard Langston, Mrs Ed Langston and Miss Annie Ruth Smith visited relatives in Pletcher Sunday afternoon.

CHARLES DEWEY FOSHEE

Charles Dewey Foshee, age 45, died at Leeds, Ala., last Friday. He is survived by 1 daughter, Mrs. Eugenia Gulledge, of Leeds, and 3 brothers, [illegible] E. and J. H. all of Clanton, [illegible] sisters, Mrs. J. L. Thomas and Mrs. [illegible] De Lorme, of Leeds; Mrs. [illegible] of Covington, La.; 1 grandchild, Retha Diane Gulledge.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from Union Grove Church near Jemison.

MR. CLENTON LOCKHART

Mr. Clenton Lockhart, age 83, died Thursday afternoon. Funeral services were held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock from Walnut Creek Church, [illegible] by the Revs. G. G. Williams, [illegible] Cook and [illegible] R. Greenwood. Interment was in church cemetery. Surviving are one brother, S. L. Lockhart of Clanton and several nephews and nieces. Spigener Funeral Home.

MISS NEWELL AND CORP. HAYES ARE MARRIED

Miss Emily Juanita Newell, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Newell, of Clanton, and Cpl. Ray Lawrence Hayes, son of Mr and Mrs J. L. Hayes of Thorsby, were married at 6 p. m. Sunday, February 25, with the Rev. O. C. Lloyd officiating.

The bride wore a pastel blue suit with luggage tan accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations and baby breath.

Miss Edith Clair Newell, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a suit of lime green with black accessories.

The groom's father served as best man.

The double ring ceremony was given in the presence of members of the families and a few very close friends.

The couple left immediately following the ceremony on a short wedding trip and afterwards will be at home to their many friends here, until time for Cpl. Hayes to resume his duties in Alaska where he has been stationed for the past two years. Mrs. Hayes will accompany him as far as Chicago and then return to be with her mother until he can make necessary arrangements for her to come to Alaska.

ALABAMA BEEF BREEDERS ORGANIZE FOR MARKETING

Producers of purebred beef cattle in Alabama have organized three associations, one for each of the three major beef breeds, to assist them in marketing their breeding stock.

Associations and their officers are:

The Alabama Hereford Association with O. J. Henley, Tuscaloosa, president, and Charles Webb, Marion, secretary; the Alabama Aberdeen-Angus Association with Sim L. Howell, Decatur, president, and G. C. Passmore, Prattville, secreatry; and the Alabama Shorthorn Breeders Association with Thomas Tartt, Livingston, president, and Thomas Nelson, Epps, secretary.

Each Association holds an annual sale to market the cattle that members produce. The API Extension Service assists in selecting the cattle for these sales, in working up an advertising program, in supplying the breeders with information on fitting their cattle for the sale and in holding the sales themselves.

It is estimated that there is a market for about 10,000 good beef bulls annually in Alabama and these three associations are assisting in supplying this demand from their respective breeds.

ADMINISTRATIVE AND PERSONNEL EXAMINATIONS ANNOUNCED

The Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive examinations for Administrative Officer and Executive Officer positions and for positions in the field of personnel management. Most of these jobs are in Washington, D. C., with only a few in other parts of the United States and abroad. No written test is required and here are no age limits.

Administrative Officer and Executive Officer positions range in salary from $5,228 to $8,628 a year, including overtime pay. Most appointments will be made at the lower salary levels and only those applicants who show that they have had responsible administrative experience will be considered for appointment. Persons appointed will assist in the administration of such government activities as surplus property disposal and contract renegotiation.

Applicants with experience in the field of personnel management, or with administrative experience which has provided a knowledge of personnel practices, may be appointed as Position Classifier, Placement Officer, or Personnel Assistant. Salaries range from $3,163 to $6,228, including overtime pay, with at least 3 years of experience, or an appropriate combination of experience and college training, required for the $3,163 positions. More experience is required for the higher grades.

Persons now using their highest skills in war work should not apply. Federal appointments are made in accordance with War Manpower Commission policies and employment stabilization programs.

Information and forms for applying may be obtained from the Commission's Local Secretary, Mr. A. D. Scott, located at Clanton, Ala., or from most first and second-class post offices, Civil Service Regional Offices, or the U. S. Civil ervice Commission, Washington 25, D. C.

Applications must be filed with the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C., not later than April 2, 1945.

ALABAMA WOMEN DOING EXCELLENT FARM JOBS

Reports by 67 home agents show that Alabama farm women and girls did an excellent home improvement job during 1944. Some of their accomplishments follow:

(1) 99,402 families produced and preserved the home food supply in accordance with the annual budget.

(2) 72,668 families improved their diets.

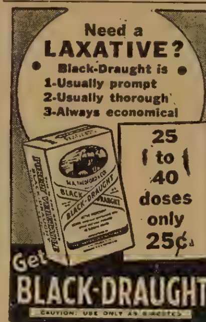
(3) 22,206 homemakers included peanut products in their meals.

(4) 29,055 homemakers used the Extension Service production chart in making plans.

(5) 15,887 girls were enrolled in the food projects with 14,192 completing it, including 209,398 meals planned and 314,427 meals served.

(6) Women and girls participated in food preservation as follows, 70,447 in canning, 23,540 in drying, 2,831 in freezing, and 31,560 in storing.

(7) 41,969 women and 26,209 4-H girls canned 19,020,978 quarts of fruits, vegetables, meats, jellies and preserves, valud at $6,495,274. This was an increase of a million quarts over 1943.



(8) The entire food preservation program, including products canned, stored in freezer-lockers, dried, and vegetables and meats curd, was valued at $11,812,045.

(9) Clothing, as before, was a major part of home demonstration work last year. County reports reveal that 587,574 garments were darned or mended at a saving of $158,358; and 1,400,380 garments were made at a saving of $1,802,845.

(10) 41,634 families obtained information on selecting shoes in wartime.

(11) 21,976 mothers received instruction in child care and development, including care of mothers, care of babies, care of pre-school children and demonstrations on homemade toys and family life problems.

(12) 25 curb markets, established many years ago, were operated in 1944 and sold products for $747,907.

The crucial, critical year is just ahead for America's Farm Forces. This is the year they must produce MORE (even than last year's record crops) with less help and with fewer replacements of farm machinery.

However impossible this may sound, the American Farmer is used to doing the impossible. He will meet this new challenge by working longer, and keeping all his machines in fighting-trim—old and overtaxed though they may be.

In keeping his farm machinery fit and fighting, the Southern farmer has a friend and helper in his Standard Oil Man. Your neighborly Standard Oil Man prides himself on being of service beyond the supplying of dependable fuels and lubricants. His experienced advice on lubrication and maintenance will help keep your machines in the fight for the duration.

With tank-trucks operating from more than 500 bulk delivery points, there's a Standard Oil Man serving your community. Always a good man to know—he can be especially helpful to you now.

If It's WRONG We Make It RIGHT

SOME users of residential electric service have asked why the credit for their December bills (which they did not have to pay) was not enough to offset their January bills. Here is how the amount of the December bill and the refund were determined.

Last year, because of the shortage of gasoline, tires and manpower, we began reading electric meters only every other month. The bill for the month in which the meter is not read is for one-half of the kilowatt-hours used the previous two months. The next month, when the meter is read, the number of kilowatt-hours billed the previous month is subtracted from the kilowatt-hours actually used during the two months period, and the bill is made out for the difference.

Therefore, in most cases any undercharge or overcharge on the estimated bill is automatically corrected on next month's bill. In a few cases, due to unusual circumstances, this does not occur. So, if there seems to be an error in your bill, please see our local representative. If it is wrong, he'll make it right.

About the December Bill Refund

It should be remembered that the shortest days of the year occur in December and January; that there is much cloudy weather; that more electricity is used for lighting, radio and other purposes in winter than in summer. January bills (when meters are read every month) are generally higher than December bills.

All residential customers either were not required to pay their December bills, or, if they had already paid them, the amount of that bill was credited on the January bill. Some customers, overlooking the fact of longer hours of use of electric service, expected the credit to cancel the January bill, and were disturbed that after the credit there was still a balance to pay. The December bills, in some instanees, represented estimates which were too low. If you feel that this was the case with your bill, you are invited to discuss it with our local representative. If it is wrong, he'll make it right.

When errors develop in any relationship with our customers, we're always glad to correct them.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for their courtesy and kindness shown during the illness and death of our father and grand-father, Mr. I. N. Thornton. We do especially thank the quartet and the friends for the beautiful floral offerings, also Rev Cook and Brother Dewey Hughes. May God's richest blessings attend each of you is our prayer.—Mrs. W. T. Hilyer and family.

IN MEMORIUM

In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, who left this world for a better one, Feb. 28, 1940, five years ago. You went away when an Angel came. Sleep on. You are at rest. I am doing my best until I meet you in that better world. I miss you, mother dear. —Signed, Mrs. Vivian Perry Gandy, a daughter.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Go to church this Sunday, taking neighbors and friends along to help meet their needs and to have the joy that goes with it. Let us help to make the first Sunday of each month the day when we know that everyone will be in church.

Join the Fellowship of Prayer with the pledge that you will read your Bible and pray every day from now until Easter. The devotional booklet is available without charge.

The thought of the sermons and the young people's meetings is centered on the values of the Bible. If we do not know or use our Bible there may be reasons which we can overcome.

The regular monthly church supper comes this Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. There will be a varied program in addition to the eating.

MUSIC APPRECIATION CLUB

The Clanton Music Appreciation Club was entertained on February 20th, by Mrs. Percy Pitts in the home of Mrs. W. A. Reynolds. The reception rooms were decorated with lovely spring flowers. Mrs. Pitts presided in the absence of the president. Mrs. Reid Mullins introduced the program for the afternoon. Mrs. Raymond Mims and Joe Mullins, Jr., gave a most inspiring and lovely musical program.

After the business meeting the hostess served delicious refreshments.

The March meeting will be held on March 20th, and will be an open meeting. At this time the program will be given by pupils of the local music teachers, and the High School Glee Club. The public is cordially invited to this meeting. Further announcement will be made later.

HOLLYWOOD executives are breathing easier now that the shortage of male stars is easing up, with old favorites being released from the armed forces. Andrew Stone set John Carroll for a starring role in "Bedside Manner," a few days after the army air force captain got his medical discharge; Metro has Lieut. Comdr. Robert Montgomery for "They Were Expendable," now that he's out of uniform, and is lining up stories for Clark Gable to choose from. Bruce Cabot's completed his first picture, "Salty O'Rourke," since he was under fire in North Africa; Paramount also put Alan Ladd into "And Now Tomorrow" when he left the army some months ago. Columbia recently welcomed Glenn Ford out of the marines.

If you're one of the thousands of devotees of the Hardy Family pictures it's a question how you'll like the new set-up. Now that Mickey Rooney's overseas in the army, there'll have to be a new Andy Hardy. The other regulars—Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and Sara Haden will all be present. And Metro's gone lavish and engaged the famous Booth Tarkington to supply the story for the next picture.

ANN DREW stood in her tiny studio looking critically at a set of dress designs thumbtacked against the wall—every detail satisfactory, including the Ann-mark on the pert little face that always topped her work.

The hum from the busy street far below her windows seemed to change into a man's well-remembered comment: "Ann, a face isn't necessary."

"Humph! Not unless I like a face—and I do," she had insisted.

"Yes, particularly that one; it's your own," the man answered. "You're conceited, Ann. Imagine! Conceited about a funny little face with a funny little scar that makes the mouth look a bit one-sided!" But his voice had been soft and right. Then, for the first time, Bert Harris had kissed her.

She took the sketches down and stacked them on her desk. Running an envelope into her typewriter, she addressed it to the Harris Dress Manufacturing company and slid the drawings inside to be mailed.

A door slammed across the hall. Ann winced; the slamming of a door had been Bert's good-bye two months before. The Harris merry-go-round is right back where it started, she mused—business, marriage, strictly business—plus a five-year-old son.

Perhaps there had been too much Ann-this-and-that. But the registered lipmark with the Ann Drew signature meant faith in her career and Bert's understanding had not been broad enough to accept her refusal to add the name of Harris.

She decided to go home. Queer! She could finish a series for any other concern and work on. But every Harris envelope sealed, whatever the hour, terminated her working day.

It always had. Eight years before the Harris contract had been the first and only one in her file; a year later because Bert Harris had been her husband and she had crowded his work in at home between busy days at the studio; this season because she became emotionally fatigued each time she outlined the unnecessary little face—every pen stroke tended toward the hope that she might live again in Bert's thoughts.

Slipping into her coat, Ann dialed her apartment. Andrew answered and finally she stopped his chatter long enough to tell him that she was on her way home.

Going down in the elevator she smiled. She knew that Andrew was rushing for his toy telephone. He would throw one end through the kitchen door. Then he would scamper as far as the long cord would permit to ring the bell and tell old Hannah that Mummy Ann wanted her dinner.

Deciding to walk home through the park, she found herself stopping to rest on a familiar bench. She opened her bag for a cigarette. Holding it between her lips, she started to fumble through her coat pockets for a match but pulled out a large square of colorful rayon instead. Her face brightened as she draped it at arm's length from one hand to set up the grouped tulips plaqued against their background by pairs of Ann-marked lips. She tilted her head and murmured, "My first brass ring in textile!"

A light snow began feathering the early dusk. Deftly, Ann knotted the square about her head. She stood, lifted her face and snugged her collar about her throat. Unmindful of the admiring glance of a man who had settled himself on the other end of the bench a few moments earlier, she felt through her pockets again: "Darn!"

She turned quickly when the man struck a match. He walked over and held it out suggestively. "You didn't find one?"

"Bert! I—I didn't realize that anyone was about."

"I know," Bert parried. "When I came along you seemed rather absorbed—shall we say—in yourself?"

"Why not add 'as usual'?" Ann asked.

"Ann, listen . . . "

Ann's eyes glinted queerly. An ever-alert inner imp impelled her to answer, "Not in this snow. I think, instead, I'll follow the me-first-program you credit me with and take myself home."

Opposite the park she glanced back but saw only a screen of snowflakes. She shrugged, signaled a taxi and was home in a few minutes.

A half-hour later, the buzzer sounded and she heard Hannah ask someone to wait. When she started toward the living room, the glow from a lamp shone on Andrew's toy telephone as it rang at her feet. She picked it up and listened: "Mummy Ann, H-ann-ah says if t-h-a-t m-a-n wants to stay for dinner, why doesn't he s-a-y so?"

Just then a man's hand touched her arm and Ann felt his face close to hers. "Oh! I didn't know who . . . " she said. Then she smiled and spoke into the telephone: "Andrew, you—you ask him."

Andrew raced through the hall, calling, "Daddy! Daddy, will you s-t-a-y?"

Bert Harris pressed his face closer to Ann's. "You know, I followed you into the park to tell you that I'm thoroughly annexed—and you made me come home alone—all the way."

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Untrained U. S. Athletes Won 9 of Olympic Events

When the Olympic Games were held at Athens in 1896, the first time since they were abolished at Rome in 392 A. D., the ten men representing the United States had no trainer and no time to train. Yet, of the twelve events, they won nine.

Incidentally, Harvard's J. B. Connolly won the initial event, the hop, step and jump—the only time in his life he had ever tried it—and was crowned first Olympic Games champion in 1,504 years.

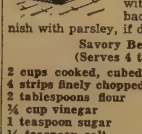
Make Your Next Pie With Vegetables
(See Recipes Below)

Vegetables De Luxe

Of course, the family won't eat vegetables that are cooked beyond recognition with all their delicate colors washed out. Do you blame them?

Vegetables don't have to look that way. Spinach can be a rich green with enough of its character left in to hold up a few of the leaves. Peas can be as green as when they are first picked, cabbage almost as crisp as when it was first picked and green beans fork-tender and well seasoned.

Two rules to remember in vegetable preparation are these: First, prepare your vegetable just before ready to cook. Don't let it stand in water to have the flavor and nutriments leeched out. Second, cook only until tender and then serve at once.



Another complaint that we frequently hear about vegetables is that they lack flavor. That's easily remedied. Coax out the natural flavor with cooking in salted water, then taste before serving and perhaps add a bit more salt, a dusting of pepper and melted butter or bacon dripping if you like a smoky flavor in your vegetable.

Sometimes a cream sauce will add interest to the vegetable, or perhaps a cheese sauce will bring out its best points. Today's recipes will give you the cues to making these vegetables a star attraction on your menus.

Corn a La King with Bacon.
(Serves 4)

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 canned pimiento, chopped
1 teaspoon minced onion
¼ teaspoon celery salt
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
1 can whole kernel corn
8 strips bacon
4 pieces of toast

Melt butter in saucepan, add flour and blend well. Add milk and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Add pimiento, onion, celery salt, salt, cayenne and corn. Serve on toast with two strips of bacon and garnish with parsley, if desired.

Savory Beets
(Serves 4 to 6)

2 cups cooked, cubed beets
4 strips finely chopped cooked bacon
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon bacon fat or flour

Lynn Says:

Cleaning Tips: To remove ink stains from rugs, pour salt over the spot while still wet. Keep changing salt as it absorbs ink until ink spot disappears.

To prevent wall from cracking when putting up a nail for pictures, heat the nail by holding with pliers over a flame, then drive into the plaster immediately.

Wax window sills to prevent them from getting dirty easily.

To clean white painted surfaces, dip a cloth in dry oatmeal and rub vigorously.

To clean leather furniture, use warm water and soapsuds.

To remove dog hairs from upholstery, rub with a piece of dampened chamois.

To clean bathroom walls, let hot water run in tub long enough to steam walls, then rub the walls with a cloth until they are clean.

Measure out ½ cup beet liquid. Mix bacon and flour in saucepan; add bacon liquid, vinegar and seasonings. Cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Add beets and heat thoroughly.

Vegetable pie it is! It can be used as a main dish because it contains an excellent choice of vegetables and is served with a lovely crown of cheese sauce:

Vegetable Pie.
(Serves 6)

1 egg
2½ tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
3 cups diced vegetables, cooked (corn, celery, peas, carrots)
2 hard-cooked eggs
½ teaspoon onion salt
1 recipe 2-crust pastry
½ cup milk
½ pound cheese

Beat together the egg and flour. Add gradually the 1 cup of milk. Add vegetables, hard-cooked eggs and onion salt. Season with salt and pepper. Place in pastry - lined shell and cover with pastry. Make several slits in the top to let steam escape. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) 40 minutes or until crust has browned and filling has set. Serve each portion which is made by adding ⅓ cup milk to cheese which has been melted over boiling water.

Lima beans are another vegetable that take to combinations with other vegetables. They're good when served with sauces and fit with almost any main dish.

Tomato-Lima Bean Casserole.
(Serves 6)

6 tablespoons butter or substitute
3 cups canned tomatoes
1½ tablespoons celery leaves, chopped
3 cups lima beans, cooked or canned
1½ tablespoons onion, chopped
Salt
Bread crumbs

Add celery leaves to tomatoes. Combine onion and drained, cooked lima beans. Into a well greased baking dish, place layers of tomatoes and lima beans. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Top with crumbs. Bake in a moderately slow (350 degree) oven 30 minutes.

Lima Beans with Mustard Sauce.
(Serves 6)

2 cups lima beans, canned or cooked
1 teaspoon powdered mustard
1 teaspoon granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons drippings
2 teaspoons lemon juice

Drain liquor from beans into sauce pan. Boil down to ½ cup. Mix together all dry ingredients and add to liquor. Add butter and lemon juice. Simmer for three minutes until well blended; add beans and heat thoroughly.

Asparagus Sandwich.

Toast slices of bread on both sides until lightly browned. Place short asparagus tips on each sandwich, about three on each piece of bread. Pour over each slice of bread 1 tablespoon of cheese which has been melted, then broil for 2-3 minutes. Serve at once.

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:21-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—If ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.—Matthew 6:14, 15.

Forgiveness is the very essence of Christianity. In Christianity only do we find an adequate and proper dealing with sin, leading to forgiveness. In Christ alone do we find that forgiveness, cleansing and regeneration.

Since God has so willingly and wonderfully provided for our forgiveness, it would seem that we would need no urging to make us forgiving in spirit toward one another.

Yet it is indeed "a melancholy fact that there are few Christian duties so little practiced as that of forgiveness. It is sad to see how much bitterness, unmercifulness, spite, harshness and unkindness there is among men" (J. C. Ryle).

I. The Extent of Forgiveness (vv. 21, 22).

"How long do I have to stand it?" is the question of the human heart, especially if untouched by the spirit of Christ. The injustices of life, the offenses of our fellow men against us, all seem to pile up until the burden is about to crush us. What is the answer to man's question?

The Jews had an answer. He said three times is enough. Forgive once, yes. Again, yes. But the third time, no. Peter was bighearted enough to more than double that allowance of mercy. He was willing to forgive not just two or three times, but seven times.

The spirit of Christ swept all of that aside. He said that one should forgive 70 times seven. In other words, Christian forgiveness is to be untiring, unlimited, to know no weariness and have no boundaries. If one really forgives, it is because he has a forgiving spirit, and that spirit is not exhausted by use, but rather grows by exercise.

A word of caution is in order at this point. Let no one suppose that our Lord's instruction means that offenses against the law of the land or against the good order of society are to be overlooked and condoned.

It relates rather to the cultivation of a personal spirit of forgiveness, the laying aside of revenge, of malice, of retaliation which do not become the Christian.

II. The Motive of Forgiveness (vv. 23-34).

Two motives are given. The first is that since we ourselves are daily and hourly in need of forgiveness at the merciful hand of God, we should in turn be merciful toward those who sin against us. Compared with our offenses against the law of God, we know that the misdeeds of our neighbors against us are usually mere trifles. Remember what God has done for you, when you are tempted to be hard and ungracious with your brother.

The second motive is the remembrance that a day of judgment is to come. There is always a time of reckoning ahead, even as was the case with these servants. Remember not only what God has done for you and is doing for you, but what you must yet expect Him to do in that day of judgment. It will make you merciful and gracious in your judgment of others.

Forgiveness has a fine quality which commends itself to others. Note the sorrow of the fellow servants (v. 31). There is, then, a social value in true forgiveness.

III. The Importance of Forgiveness (v. 35).

A man dealing with his fellow man is apt to think that it is merely a matter between man and man. We are not dealing with a straight line between ourselves and our brother (that was Peter's error), but with a triangle at whose apex is God Himself.

If I expect God to forgive me, I must let my forgiveness flow out to my brother. If I deal with him as though God had nothing to do with the matter, then I must not try to count God's forgiveness into the picture when I stand indebted before Him.

God does not play favorites. He is no respecter of persons. He is as interested in the other man as He is in me. The Christian should have the same spirit.

Here we need a word of explanation. Let no one suppose that our redemption in Christ is contingent upon what we do toward our brethren. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9).

Nor does the truth of our lesson mean that we are somehow going to bargain with God, trading a bit of our forgiveness toward others for His forgiveness of us. God is not interested in such transactions. But it does mean that if you cannot or will not forgive, you may well consider whether you are a Christian at all, for it is Christlike to forgive.

Silk Patchwork Quilt Colorful and Quaint

AN OLD - FASHIONED crazy-patch quilt aglow with color and quaint stitchery makes a decorative slumber throw for the sofa in today's living room. It picks up and repeats all the room colors and the hit-and-miss pattern harmonizes with furnishings old and new.

In Victorian days great grandfather's cravats were the source of many a rich piece of silk for these quilts. Why not look over the old ties that G.I. Joe left behind with an eye to the same purpose? The ends are always good no matter how worn the center part may be. Collecting bits of bright silk, ribbon and embroidery thread will be an exciting hobby and it costs nothing.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

D. W. HASKEW, D. D.

It was Job who said "I have made a covenant with mine eyes." If you are going to be the Christian that you should be, you should also make a covenant, not only with your eyes, but with every other member of your body. You should see to it that your tongue is not allowed to speak guile, your ears are not allowed to listen to vile stories, your hands not allowed to perform deeds that are bad, your feet not allowed to walk in path of sin. You have five gates to your soul and when you open them to sin, sin will come in like a flood to fill your life. Like Job, you should make a covenant with each gate to your soul, and by the power of the spirit see to it that nothing is allowed to enter that will defile, or hurt the soul.

Needing some help at once, I walked down to the bench on the city square where the unemployed gathered. I asked for one to volunteer and one whom I knew stood up, shouldering his sack of tools and made this significant remark, "I was wanting work today, and brought my tools along, hoping that some one would seek my aid." I have related this little story that I might make this significant remark, "Have the tools ready; God will find thee work." If you want to do something in the church, prepare yourself, and carry your tools with you and you will soon have a job. A good workman has his tools and he carries them with him.

Personal acquaintance with Christ is a living thing. The one who abides in Him, like the tree, uses every hour for growth. The apple tree uses the days of sunshine in which to grow. When it is raining the tree is refreshed and grows on. When the storms come it is driven to drive its roots more securely in the earth. Even when it is loaded with fruit it braces itself to meet and carry the load of its limbs. In all of our experiences of life, joy and sorrow, sunshine and storm, we should make our acquaintance with Christ more intimately and grow up into Him with that faith that causes us ot meet life's opportunity in an ever enlarging way. We must grow to meet the world's needs. See to it that you make use of your experiences as a means of growth.

Gold cannot be used for currency as long as it is mixed with the quartz and rock in which it lies imbedded. It must be carried through a process of crushing, washing and moulding before it can become currency with real value. So your soul is useless to God until it goes through a state of repentence, washing away of sin and then becomes stamped with the immage and likeness of Christ. It is the regenerating power of Christ that brings to His children the value that makes them into the currency of His Kingdom. Christ alone can add real value to your life. He alone can wash you and make you worth while.

It was only eleven days travel from Egypt into the promised land, and yet it took Israel forty years to make that journey. We need not travel far to find the way to this fact. It was sin that came among them, it was sin that slowed them down, it was sin that set them back. What is it that holds us back in our journey to the promised land? We become slow travelers for no other reason than we allow sin to come into our lives. Sin slows us down, sin turns us aside, sin sets us back and we have to come again. It takes pure living, obedient submission, and trustful traveling to put speed into our way up to God. Sin never fails to hold us back when we allow it to come into our hearts.

The mother related to me the experience that she had with her little daughter as she dropped upon her knees for her bedtime prayer. This is how she prayed, "Oh God, make me a good little girl, but not so very good. Just good enough to keep me from getting a spanking." The most of us pray that way, whether we know it or not. We want God to think that we are anxious to be good, but when we pray, we have reservations about our living. We crave to be just good enough to keep us from getting into trouble. Why not pray for the fullness of the righteousness of God, and to be real good every day?

On passing a lad on the street corner I paused to talk to him. After our conversation was over I inquired, "Little man where do you live?" In confidence he replied, "Oh, just around the corner, and preacher did you know that I could go anywhere in the world from where I live?" The boy was right in more ways than one. To be sure he could use his home as a starting place and go to China, Japan, the North Pole, the South Pole, just anywhere. He could use his home as a starting place and go to righteous living, or into a corrupt life. From there he could go up to heaven or down to hell. Young and old alike can use your place of living to go to any place in God's Universe.

Taking a package of cabbage seed I went out into the garden to plant them in the rich soil. The ground was well prepared and the atmosphere was fine for growing. I never said a prayer to the cabbage seed, begging them to sprout and grow. The conditions of sprouting and growing had been met and the seed could do nothing else but obey the order of nature to grow. When church members unite with us, if we have the conditions of growth to be offered to them, we do not have to urge them to grow in the graces of God. The real purpose of the church is to create a Spiritual atmosphere, so that when new converts unite with us, they can not help responding to soul growth. The church atmosphere determines the soul growth of its membership.

When the contractor goes about the job of erecting a ten story building, he places around it much scaffolding. When the building is complete, the scaffold is removed. Our days, months and years are nothing more than the scaffolding that God gives to us, to be used in the construction of our real life. When our days are all over and our life has been completed, then the days are all removed. We leave behind us the life that we have erected. Ask yourself this question, "When my days are all over, what kind of a structure will I leave for my loved ones and for the world?" You can use all of your years as a scaffold on which to stand and build a life that reaches up to God in the beauty and glory that will be a pride to your loved ones forever.

Increase farm productivity by building improvements with CONCRETE

Farmers today are stepping up production of dairy products, eggs, livestock and other essential foodstuffs. One way to begin the job is to build concrete barn floors, stock feeding floors, poultry house floors, manure pits, storage cellars and other improvements that make your farm more efficient and productive.

All you need are a few sacks of portland cement, sand, gravel or stone, and some boards for forming. Concrete conserves critical "war materials"; many farm concrete jobs need none.

Economical, life-time concrete improvements cost surprisingly little to build. If you need help, get in touch with your concrete contractor or building material dealer.

COUNTY T-B ASS'N BRINGS X-RAY UNIT

The Chilton County Tuberculosis Association is bringing an X-Ray Unit to the County on March 13,14,15 and 16th. This unit is housed in a bus-type vehicle about 25 feet long by eight feet wide. The unit will be prepared to make an X-Ray picture of all children who are fifteen years old or older. Teachers, bus drivers, and lunch room workers are invited to attend the Clinic. No cost will be involved to the individual.

The teachers and children are manifesting great interest in the approaching Clinic. Literature from the Alabama Tuberculosis Association on the detection and control of tuberculosis has been distributed in all of the schools.

A complete schedule and list of schools attending each center follows:

March 13, all day Jemison High School as center. Union Grove, Collins Chapel, Thorsby Public School and Institute, Mineral Springs, Jemison Colored, and Gulledge School to attend.

March 14, all day, Chilton County High School as center. Baker, Concord, Mullins, Thomas, Clanton Elementary, Refuge, Pinedale, Popwell, New Cedron, Mt. Pleasant, Alabama Mills, County Training, and Clanton Colored School to attend.

March 15, all day, Isabella High School as center. Maplesville, Stanton, Vermont, Riderville, New Convert, and Maplesville Colored to attend.

March 16, to noon only, Verbena High School as center. Cooper, Enterprise, Verbena Colored Schools to attend.

The X-Ray bus visiting the County next week is one of the first of six buses in the United States and the first in the South engaged in the making of mass X-Rays of the chest. Case finding programs through mass X-Rays represent the most vital part of organized community action against tuberculosis.

Albert Gramatas Named Chairman Of Greek Relief

Albert Gramatas, proprietor of the Clanton Lunch Room, has been named County Chairman of the Greek War Relief Association.

This organization was formed to give relief to 7,000,000 destitute natives of Greece, who have, and are, suffering the horrors of war.

This Clothing Collection Campaign will start March 12th, and all who have clothing that can be used are asked to leave it at Clanton Lunch Room, or call there and it will be picked up, either by Clanton Laundry Truck or some other volunteer for this work.

V F W ORGANIZE COUNTY POST

All Veterans of Foreign Wars are invited and urged to be present at the Courthouse at Clanton, Ala., on March 9th, at 7:30, for the purpose of organizing a Chilton County Post. Any veteran of any foreign war who served overseas is eligible for membership. Any member of the present war who has had overseas service is eligible now whether he has been discharged or not. Every man in the county who has served overseas honorably is urged to be present and bring his proof of such service.

Horton Walker, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Alabama Department of Veterans of Foreign Wars, announces that the Department Commander, John P. Reynolds, of Bessemer, Ala., will be present for the institution of the Post.

Any parent, wife, sister or brother, who has a son, brother or husband now overseas, may get him included in the charter by contacting Horton Walker, Clanton, Ala.

High School Boys Enroll To Improve Home Gardens

Every boy enrolled in Vocational Agriculture at the Chilton County High School has as one of his improvement projects, improving the home garden. These boys see the need and the value in producing a sufficient number of vegetables for home consumption from the standpoint of the money value, the health value, and as an aid to defeating the Axis. They realize that there is a transportation problem due to the war and that every person having the available space should try to produce his own food.

The job needed to be done in the garden will be taken up in class according to seasonal sequence, that is, they will be taken up when they actually need to be done. The Vocational Agriculture teacher will supervise the work done at each boy's home.

The boys taking agriculture at Chilton County High are: Hoover Armstrong, Delbert Avery, Clyde Blalock, Tonie Connell, Reedie Culpepper, Herbert Dennis, Edwin Durbin, Milton Mims, B. F. Klinner, Reed Mims, Thomas Mims, Hoover Moatts, Paul Moore, Roland Sanders, James Wells Charlie Jones, Curtis Hilyer, Harley Mims, Leonard Moore and Billy Nelson.

Some of the improvement projects other than vegetable gardening that are carried by the boys include: home improvement, homeground improvement, soil conservation, improving a field by the use of legumes, dairy herd improvement, orchard improvement, pasture improvement, poultry flock improvement, improving farm account and agricultural library, and seed corn improvement.

Grammar School Parent-Teachers Met Tuesday

The Grammar School P.-T. A. was called to order Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Walter Fleck.

Children of the Third Grade and Sixth Grades presented a most interesting program of music and recitations. The Sixth grade pupils recited the Beatitudes as the devotional, led by Dean Deason, and three of the children repeated in unison a very lovely prayer.

A group of Third grade pupils, or the Rythm Band, played several selections, with Louise Golden as Band leader. Poems by Longfellow were recited by Suan Williams, Lloyd Warr Jerry Massey and Sarah Madge Mullins.

The program was concluded with a vocal number by the Sixth grade with John Deramus assisting at the piano. John Robinson was master of ceremonies and the program was directed by Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Thomas.

Following this delightful program a brief business session was held and the meeting was dismissed by Mrs. Fleck.

COOPER GREEN

Cooper Green, newly elected President of the City Commission of Birmingham, Ala. February 28th, at midnight, was the deadline for anyone to qualify against him, and no one did, and he is automatically reelected for a new four-year term.

He was elected first in February, 1940, for an unexpired short term, caused by the death of his predecessor, and was reelected in May, 1941, without opposition, and again this time.

WAGE STATEMENTS FOR 1944 FROM S. S. BOARD ARE NOT AVAILABLE

Martin C. Folmar, Manager of the Birmingham field office of the Social Security Board made the above fact known today as his office has recently had a number of requests from individuals who are preparing to file their tax returns for 1944.

Mr. Folmer points out that in the past this has been a matter which is annually of some administrative concern to the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. The Bureau feels that the wage statements from the Social Security Board for 1944 can not be furnished for income tax purposes on account of the fact that this information is now furnished employees under the withholding tax requirement by their employer.

If there is any other information you may desire in connection with your Social Security, Mr. Folmar and his staff located at 1825 First Ave. no. will be glad to help you.

Y W A MET MONDAY NITE

The Y. W. A. of Clanton met last Monday night with Francis Bean. We were proud of the atendance and of the new members.

The introduction was made by Miss Marguerite Perry. The subject of our program was "Footpaths to Peace". The reports for Footpath, one thru five was given as follows: "Godliness for Glamour" by Doris Bessinger: "Generosity for Greed" by Francis Bean: "Conviction for Convention" by Alene Johnson: "Faith for Fear" by Miss Marguerite Perry: "Courage for Cunning" by Sara Alice Rasberry; and a poem, "A Challenge" by Sara Dean Smith. For the closing of the program we sang one of our favorite hymns, "Into My Heart."

Our next meeting will be March 19 at 7:30 p. m. in the basement of the First Baptist Church. We expect all old members to attend and if possible bring new members.—Alene Johnson, Reporter.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

The 199 tuberculosis cases reported from the entire State in January included one from Chilton County, the State Department of Health announced today.

The January total exceeded by three the 196 cases reported in December but fell more than 100 short of the 312 reported in January of last year.

Only four of the State's 67 counties reported as many as ten cases in January. Jefferson led with 47, Mobile reported 36, and Calhoun and Montgomery reported 13 and 10, respectively.

Present maximum prices for binder twine will continue through 1945, announces OPA.

Lespedeza can be used for permanent or temporary pasture or for hay, it produces seed for farm use and for sale, and it conserves and improves the soil.

Attention Unity And Chilton Associations

Plans and preparations are already being made for the School of Missions to be held again this summer, July 24-25, in the Clanton Baptist Church.

Our Mission Boards in Richmond Va., and Atlanta, Ga. are helping us secure outstanding missionary speakers. Contact with representatives of these two world-wide soul winning agencies can stir our souls and renew our efforts as we endeavor to more worthily observe our Centennial Crusade for Christ.

This is a personal request to all Baptist pastors and church leaders in our two Associations to avoid scheduling special revival services in their local churches on dates that would conflict with the Association-wide School of Missions.

We believe that local plans can more easily be adjusted than the Association-wide undertaking, which entails numbers of South-wide and State-wide leaders.

A spirit of cooperation within our ranks, and a deep concern for the lost multitudes beyond our immediate reach, will assure the whole-hearted support of all our churches. With your prayers, your cooperation, and your presence we can make this annual occasion one of great inspiration and challenge to our people in this section of the State.

Study Club Holds Monthly Meeting

The Study Club held its March meeting on last Friday with Mrs. L. C. Warr as hostess. A profusion of lovely Spring flowers, artistically arranged, adorned the home.

Mrs. M. C Hayes presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. P. Hayes. The meeting was opened with clubclub collect. All officers and committees submitted annual reports. The featured report was by the secretary, Mrs. J. Hugh Jones. Her excellent summary of the Club's activities for the year proved a most delightful paper.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. N. L. Roberts: Vice-President, Mrs. W. C. Golden: Secretary, Mrs. Joseph J. Mullins: Treasurer: Mrs. J. Renfro Mullins.

The hostess, assisted by her young daughter, Eleanor, and Mrs. Horton Walker, served a delicious salad plate and coffee to 13 members and guest, Mrs. Collins.

YOUR CONTRIBUTION AND SUPPORT NEEDED TO CONTROL CANCER

Cancer is the greatest killer of women and the second greatest killer of men. Yet the American Cancer Society received less than half-million dollars for research and education in a disease that killed 163,000 men, women and children in America last year.

Dr. Clarence C. Little, Managing Director of the American Cancer Society, offers this hope: "We confidently believe that the death rate from cancer can be cut one-third to one-half in ten years time, with a saving of 50,000 to 80,000 American lives a year, if we have adequate funds to carry on the drive against cancer. And this can be accomplished even if not another single fact were ever learned about cancer, simply by applying known preventive measures, through widespread education.

Scientists who are devoting their lives to wiping out cancer estimate that 55,000,000 a year would accomplish Dr. Little's hopes.

This amount represents the price of one soft drink per year from every adult in America. A gift to the cancer fund may well save your own life —certainly it well might save the life of a loved one.

The War Food Administrator has called upon farmers to do everything possible to increase salvage and collection of used household fats from farms and small towns to meet war and civilian needs.

SUMMARY OF G I BILL OF RIGHTS

(NOTE: This is the first of a series of 7 articles on the guaranty of farm loans under the G. I. Bill of Rights. The next article will be on the Agricultural Advisory Committee.)

A summary of the regulations governing the guaranty of farm loans to veterans under the G. I. Bill of Rights has been received by J. H. Yates, Secretary Treasurer of the Bibb-Chilton National Farm Loan Association. For the information of returning veterans and members of their families, Mr. Yates will furnish the Chilton County News a series of short stories setting out the most important farm loan provisions of the G. I. Bill.

These articles will cover steps veterans should take in obtaining a guaranty loan, eligibility of veterans, purpose and eligibility of loans, conditions and terms of loans, and amounts of guaranty.

"The G. I. Bill of Rights," says Mr. Yates, contains provisions for the guaranty of part of a loan or loans made to veterans of World War II for the purchase of a farm, farming equipment, livestock, and to repair farm buildings and equipment. The guaranty of loans will be made by the Veterans Administration.

The first step a veteran wishing to apply for a loan should take is to contact his County Agent who is secretary of the Veterans Advisory Committee, and who will advise him what to do.

Commenting on the G. I. Bill, Secretary Treasurer Yates said: "We want the veteran to get first consideration. It may or may not fall to our association to help finance any of the buyers, but we think it is essential that any farm purchased must be large enough and productive enough to support the veteran's family, pay his farm operating expenses and leave enough over to pay off his debt without hardship, with prices and annual yields that are likely to prevail over a long period of years."

"We do not want to see any veteran led into buying a farm at too high [illegible] that will be more than he can pay out of his farm income. The returning serviceman is entitled to every possible chance to make good on his farming venture, and one way to help secure that success is to adhere to the normal agricultural value as the basis in buying farms."

Professional Advantage

Returning on a visit to his birthplace, Kinsman, Ohio, Clarence Darrow, the noted criminal lawyer, met a doctor friend.

"If you had listened to me," said the friend, "you too, would be a doctor."

"Why, what's the matter with being a lawyer?"

"I don't say that all lawyers are crooks," said the doctor, "but even you will have to admit that your profession doesn't exactly make angels of men."

"No," replied Darrow, "you doctors have the better of us there."

Beggar—In my finances, sir!

Navy Takes Over

By GERTRUDE TEWALT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

CLINGING grimly to a transport rail that dipped and bucked like a loco broncho, Corporal Ted Boone was ready to dispute with Magellan who called this heaving body of water the Pacific. Since Magellan wasn't around, an innocent sailor who happened along caught the brunt of his bitterness.

The bluejacket eyed him with the age-old contempt of the salt-water sailor for the landlubber. "Maybe you'd like to get off and walk," he suggested nastily.

"Show me some solid ground and watch my dust," replied Ted with longing.

"Comes H-hour and you get your chance," promised the gob. "The Jappos had better bust out their white flags when you get ashore. That is, after your knees stop buckling and the ground settles down."

"I am not seasick," Corporal Boone denied hotly.

"No?" grinned the sailor. "Then how'd you like to dig into a dish of cabbage and fat bacon with a side order of hot cakes and syrup?"

After a stricken period, Corporal Boone raised his head. "Go away," he moaned feebly.

"Don't give in to it," advised the sailor. "Walk around, get in an argument — anything. What's your name, soldier?"

"Boone, Ted. What's yours?"

"Tyler. They call me Tarzan from my muscles, see?" He flexed his biceps.

Tarzan was not disposed to take offense. "I'd like to know what you got against the Navy. Where'd you be without the Navy, I ask you?"

"Back in Frisco, well and happy," groaned Ted.

"Yeah? Well, you can't win the war staying in Frisco. Us Navy sees to it that you G.I.s get where you can do some good. Dames like navy-blue better'n khaki, too. Want to see something?" He fished inside his jacket and brought forth a handful of snapshots, crumpled and dog-eared from much handling.

"Why? Would you sooner be fighting than taking a nice cruise?"

Corporal Boone looked with lackluster eyes. "So what? Must be a clothes shortage where those babes come from."

Tarzan thumped his barrel chest. "Now, those gals used to go around with civilians, soldiers even, until I hove into their lives. Now they're all Navy Jills. They gimme these pictures 'cause any girl is proud to be a Navy man's pin-up, see?"

"Here's one who isn't," said Ted sharply. He fumbled in his blouse and produced a picture tenderly wrapped in tissue. Carefully, he unfolded it and showed it to the sailor.

"Whew!" Tarzan's whistle was an honest tribute to the girl whose likeness smiled up at him. "She's got class." The face was oval and sweetly serious with large, loving eyes, framed by thick fair braids that encircled the proud little head like a coronet.

"That's my wife, Betsy," said Ted with pride.

"I see what you mean," Tarzan said slowly. "You're a mighty lucky guy, Boone."

"We got married just before I was shipped overseas," continued Ted. "We never had a real honeymoon, so when I get back we're going to blow my allotment on the swellest honeymoon two people ever had."

"Where will you go?" asked Tarzan.

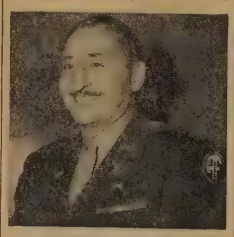
"Who cares? Just so it's cool and quiet. Just Betsy and me and a gang of bellboys on call with tall, iced drinks. Imagine having your shoes shined and your clothes pressed, tickets for the best shows, no sergeants, no reveille, nothing to do but relax and enjoy yourself."

"Sounds like heaven," agreed Tarzan fervently. "Just remember it's the Navy that takes you home."

The transport pitched sickeningly. "Not if I'm conscious," Ted gasped. "Maybe I'll fly or swim, but they'll have to hogtie and drag me on board another ship. And when I once land, I never want to see the ocean again."

Behind them a sergeant approached on deck. "Is that you, Boone? Got a letter for you."

Ted eagerly tore it open. As his eyes devoured the words, his face grew even greener and his knees sagged.



"It's Betsy," said Ted hollowly. "She has her heart set on a honeymoon cruise through the West Indies after the war."

Inadequate traction is one of the causes of automobile smash-ups in winter traveling. Inadequate traction can be due to smooth tires that should be recapped.
Rubber had a strong influence in the spending of 17¾ billion dollars on street and highway construction and maintenance in the U. S. in the ten years ended 1942.
The materials used in the making of cord fabrics for synthetic motor vehicle tires are the same as used in pre-war natural rubber tires—cotton and rayon.

Once during an opera, Richard Crooks had for his leading lady a prima donna who was more than pleasingly plump. In one scene he had to carry the lady across the threshold of a cottage.

Exerting herculean effort, he managed to lift the heroine, but his knees almost buckled when he started to walk. Gritting his teeth he staggered across the stage, and with a sigh of relief deposited her inside the cottage.

"Not at all, madam," he lied, the veins standing out on his neck. "But tomorrow night let's make it in two trips."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Thrifty Lunches Use Vegetables, Noodles, Macaroni

Potatoes are easily creamed if they are cooked first, seasoned with onion and then blended together with smooth, tasty sour cream.

When points are low and luncheon presents itself, most of us are in a quandary. Are there foods to serve that are point-free and appetizing? Yes, there are, and I'm giving you several suggestions today which will make luncheons an easy matter to prepare.

I'd suggest that you make use of as many soups as possible for this mid-day meal. Use canned or dehydrated soups, if you're rushed for time. If you have bits of leftover vegetables, puree or dice them fine and add to a thin white sauce.

Hearty sandwiches go well with soups. You'll like cottage cheese, liver sausage, eggs and peanut butter combinations. A bit of crunchy celery will provide vitamins and minerals or crispy salads will add texture contrast to the bowl of soup and sandwich luncheon.

If the men folk come home for lunch and expect heartier fare, there is the macaroni family which you can put to good use. Use fresh or home-canned vegetables for flavor and color contrast with spaghetti, noodles and macaroni, add a well-seasoned sauce, and luncheon is all ready to be served.

This noodle platter with vegetables sells itself as soon as it arrives at the table:

Egg Noodles With Baked Onions and Lima Beans.
(Serves 6)

1 8-ounce package of egg noodles
8 to 10 small onions
1 can condensed tomato soup
2 cups lima beans, fresh cooked or canned
½ cup diced or grated American cheese
3 tablespoons drippings
Salt and pepper to taste

Parboil onions until tender, about 20 minutes. Arrange in shallow baking dish and cover with tomato soup that has been diluted. Add cheese. Bake in a moderately hot oven until soup is thoroughly heated and cheese melted. Cook egg noodles in boiling salted water until tender. Drain; add drippings and arrange on serving platter. Place baked onions around the mound of noodles and serve with tomato cheese sauce. Buttered lima beans are a colorful, tasty addition.

Macaroni and mushrooms are the basis for this flavorful dish:

Macaroni and Mushrooms.
(Serves 6)

¼ pound boiled macaroni
1 tablespoon butter or substitute
1 small onion, cut fine
1 teaspoon flour
1 cup beef or chicken soup
1 pint stewed tomatoes
1 tablespoon dried mushrooms, soaked and heated
Salt and cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon parsley, chopped
3 tablespoons grated American or Parmesan cheese

After macaroni has boiled in salted water, place in colander and let cold water run over it. In the meantime, heat the butter and brown the onion. Blend in flour and soup stock, stirring until smooth and cook until thickened. Add tomatoes, strained, and let simmer 20 minutes. Add mushrooms, season with salt and cayenne pepper. Heat through, add parsley, place on platter and sprinkle cheese over top.

Spaghetti.
(Serves 6)

½ pound spaghetti
2 quarts boiling water
2 teaspoons salt
1 can tomato liquid
2 cloves garlic, cut fine
4 bay leaves
¼ teaspoon peppercorns
Salt to taste
¼ cup oil
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Boil spaghetti in water to which salt has been added. Drain a can of tomatoes and place aside the liquid with garlic, bay leaves, peppercorns and oil. Cook until well seasoned, then pour over cooked spaghetti which has been drained, washed and warmed. Serve sprinkled with grated cheese.

An unusual but delicious combination is this one which uses baked potato with shrimps:

Baked Potato Stuffed With Shrimp.
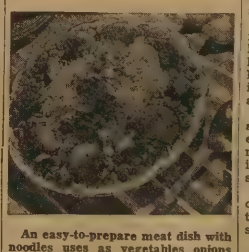
(Serves 4)

1 cup cooked or canned shrimp, cleaned
2 large baked potatoes
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon minced onion
1 teaspoon finely minced parsley



Clean shrimp. Cut hot baked potato in halves lengthwise; scoop out insides. Mash; add butter, salt, pepper and milk. Beat well. Add onion, parsley and shrimp. Refill shells; bake in a hot oven at 450 degrees 5 to 8 minutes until lightly browned.

When potatoes are creamed, they are extraordinarily nutritious. In this case, sour cream is used in place of white sauce, and it's a captivating combination:

Quick Creamed Potatoes.
(Serves 6 to 8)

3 cups Idaho potatoes, diced
1 small onion, cut fine
3 or 4 tablespoons thick sour cream
Salt and pepper to taste

Place diced potatoes and onion into a heavy skillet. Add enough water to cover the bottom of the pan, about ½ inch deep. Cover tightly and cook until potatoes are tender but not mushy. The water should be nearly all evaporated by this time. Add the sour cream and stir constantly until well blended. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

An easy-to-prepare meat dish with noodles uses as vegetables onions and lima beans. A tomato-cheese sauce adds nourishment and flavor.

Potatoes are again highlighted, this time with salmon in a casserole:

Scalloped Salmon and Potatoes.
(Serves 6)

½ pound salmon, steamed and flaked
3 medium-sized potatoes
½ teaspoon sliced onion
4 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper
2 cups milk

Arrange layer of potatoes in greased casserole. Add half the salmon, onion, flour, salt and pepper. Make another layer of potatoes; add remaining salmon, onion, flour, salt and pepper. Cover with remaining potatoes. Pour on milk, and bake in a moderate oven at 350 degrees for 1¼ hours.

Lynn Says:

Clothes Tips: To make clothes easy to iron, make sure the board is well padded with cloth and have the cover stretched tightly over it.

To keep clothes from freezing to the line, dip a cloth in a strong solution of salt and water and wipe line with it. Also, add a little salt to the last rinsing water for clothes.

To remove chewing gum from clothes, place the garments in the refrigerator and chill thoroughly. Then it scrapes off easily with a knife.

To remove grass stains from clothing, sponge with ammonia and water before washing.

THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 19:16-26, 29.
GOLDEN TEXT—If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.—Matthew 16:24.

What you have is not your own. In fact, if you are a Christian, both you and your possessions belong to God (see I Cor. 6:20; 7:23). To be His disciple involves the recognition of the fact that life is essentially a stewardship, holding our property and our persons in trust for Him.

The cost of discipleship is one which should be candidly faced. It is far more than the cost of joining a church or subscribing to a creed. That may and often does mean little or nothing, but to be a follower of Christ calls for thinking and living in accordance with His standards. We must—

I. Think Right About God (vv. 16, 17).

The picture of this rich, intelligent young man, a leader in his community, coming to Christ with his eager quest for eternal life is a most attractive one. He recognized Jesus as a master in Israel and a good man.

His thinking about our Lord did not go far enough, and Jesus corrected him at once. He pointed out that if he recognized Him as good, then He must be God. Far from disclaiming divinity, Jesus declared here that everyone who thinks right about Him must agree that He is God.

It is of the highest importance that the follower of Christ be clear that his master is God. Otherwise, his attitude toward Him will lead his defective viewpoint, and his witness concerning Him will lead men astray instead of aright. Correct doctrine is vitally important as the foundation of real discipleship.

The one who thinks right about God will—

II. Live Right With Others (vv. 18-20).

The commandments to which Jesus referred were those which concerned a man's relationship to his fellow man. There is to be no violence to another person, no deceit or trickery, no dishonoring of confidence, but an active interest and love for one's neighbor as well as one's family.

The disciple of Christ cannot effectively serve Him in this world without a proper attitude toward others. He must not sin against them, that is clear; but what is more, he must be known as one who loves them.

Note that this young man could honestly say that he had kept these commandments. Few of us could make such a claim, but he did. And Jesus did not question it or rebuke him. In fact, He loved him for it (see Mark 10:21).

What a fine character this young man had, what limitless possibilities for usefulness, what promise for the future! But something was lacking, something stood in his way. Jesus went directly to the heart of his trouble and told him that he must—

III. Act Right About Money (vv. 21-26).

Toward persons, his life was rightly related, but toward his possessions—ah, that was another matter. He was rich and his money stood between him and God, between him and a life of service and spirituality.

When a man has money and uses it for God's glory and the good of his fellow man, it is a blessing to him and to others. But when money lays hold of a man, and it has him instead of his having it, spiritual disaster is ahead, and not far away.

It is proper to be prudent, thrifty, and ambitious, but when the gathering of wealth becomes the uppermost thing, even these worthy qualities become the enemies of a man's soul.

Note the astonishment of the disciples (v. 25). They, too, though they had little or nothing, had been smitten with the awe for riches.

Do not miss the glorious assurance of verse 26. Nothing is impossible with God. He can even save a rich man, and does it!

Now there is more to discipleship than sacrifice. God has a recompense for His children. Let us

IV. Expect the Right Reward (v. 29).

No one has ever lost anything by serving the Lord. He gives liberally and makes a hundredfold return for every sacrifice we make. Christian workers can testify that God has literally fulfilled this promise to them.

But the greatest reward of all waits beyond the end of this earthly life. Over yonder there awaits us the prospect of eternal fellowship with the Lord we love and serve, and with all those who share with us the place of being disciples, followers, and servants of Christ.

This life brings many precious moments of joy and satisfaction. There is friendship and comradeship in labor. There are a thousand blessings even here, but the greatest of all is the prospect of being forever with the Lord.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

What is so rare as a day in June Unless its a day in March just like a day in June. Tra-la-la.

Boy, have we got spring in our bones today. And that's no question, either, that's a statement.

[illegible] who is home on furlough, tried to take some of it out of us by telling us about these hard [illegible] and weeks he spent while in training and on maneuvers, but even that didn't do a complete job Louie [illegible] one night while out on maneuvers it started sleeting, and then it [illegible] coming. Well, according to Louie those pup tents are made just large enough to keep a gun dry. When he awoke the next morning [illegible] deep enough on the [illegible] and he was stacking it the top of his tent, (on the inside). Sure enough though Louie sure does look good. Don't know whether it's because he's healthy or we just haven't seen him in so long. But what [illegible] told him to leave back [illegible] good -- we missed [illegible] and he said we didn't miss him [illegible] he did Clanton.

[illegible] haven't been to see us. [illegible] had pulled one of his [illegible] and forgot to in- [illegible] get around to every- [illegible] have a little time left over for himself. Anyway, when he does get around, we'll be glad to see him and maybe learn a little about his work in the armed forces.

We received a beautiful little [illegible] from our favorite oldest sister, one Mrs. F M Clark, of Anniston, Ala. Really we do think it is beautiful and we are passing it along to you--

Have you seen the sprightly crocuses and tulips in their beds?
Have you marveled at such glory shown on tiny little heads?
All the colors of the rainbow, you will find have gathered there,
They have donned their brightest garments; for glad Easter they prepare.
The spell of death is broken and they're hastening to bring
All the beauty of their colors to our Lord, the Risen King!

—Annie T. Clark.

We think the above is beautiful and hope you like it. And we also hope the contributor helps us out again sometimes. Muchos Gratius. Senora

We do not appreciate Joe Jones editorial in the Covington County News last week regarding Calvin Robinson, our good friend. Joe came up here from Andalusia trying to get Calvin to go down into South Alabama with him as his linotype operator. Now, Calvin is a dog-gone good linotype operator, and one that any newspaperman would be glad to get. But when Joe's that as much is on the [illegible] and we-gosh [illegible] American couldn't to feel the same was about it. If that is the [illegible] and wants to stay, who has the right to tell him different, or persuade him to go somewhere he doesn't want to go. No, Joe, you're wrong there. This is America. You shouldn't write editorials about people, just because they don't think like you do, or want to do the things you want them to do. That isn't Americanism.

Where they are and How they are

THOMAS J. RASBERRY

Flight Officer Thomas J. Rasberry son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas N. Rasberry of this city, has been assigned to Buckinham Army Air Field, one of the largest flexible gunnery school in AAF Training Command.

F-O Rasberry received his wings and appointment as Flight Officer on Feb. 1, 1945

Corp. Forrest J. Headley, Rout 3 Clanton, who is in Kumming, China, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of his duty.

Corp. Headley is a member of the famous "rice droppers" of the Army's Burma Road Engineers, and as such has completed numerous and hazardous flights over the "hump" of the Himilayas and other mountainous terrain of China. The "rice droppers" supply the food, clothing and equipment to the construction gangs of Chinese workers and Army Engineers who recently made possible the opening of the Stilwell Highway, new land supply route to China.

Pfc. William Brady Jones, son of Mrs. E. M. Jones has recently been removed from the Northington General Hospital and is now at the Welch Convalescent Hospital at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Earl Ousley from Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., spent a few hrs. with his parents and friends recently

Three cheers for the Red, White and Blue and for Mr and Mrs. R. L. Ousley, of Plantersville who are all out for Victory. Mr. and Mrs. Ousley have seven grandsons, one granddaughter, and three grand-son-in-laws in the service Their names and branch in which they serve are listed below:

Warren G. Walker, H. T. Gregg, Earl Ousley, Lois Ousley, (Wave), Odis Ousley, and R. A. Smith, Navy.

LeeRoy Ousley, F. B. Ousley, T. H. Ousley, Noah Cox and Earl Mills, Army.

We just received a card from a friend of Pfc. Hershel Mims, who is stationed at Bowman Field, Ky., saying that Pfc. Mims is doing fine and is still happy and serving the Lord. He says that he has never found anything any better than to serve God and to live a Christian life and that anyone can live right and serve God if he is in the service of his Country.

Pfc Mims would enjoy letters from his friends anytime. His address may be obtained from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Mims, Route 1, Clanton, Ala.

Cpl. Clinton Deason of the U. S. Army is visiting his parents here.

S-Sgt. Marvin J. Bates from Maxwell Field was here for the week-end.

A very familiar face around here this week is that of Jimmy Walker, HA 2-C who is attending O. G. U. school at Great Lakes, Ill. Jimmy makes a very nice looking young sailor and it's good to have him here for a week. Guess he is kinda enjoying his nine-day leave too, we really hope that he is.

AWARDED PURPLE HEART

ROBERT J. JONES

Pvt. Robert J. Jones recently received the Purple Heart, which he has sent to his mother, Mrs. Bob Jones. She received the Medal March 5th.

The Purple Heart was given to Pvt. Jones for wounds received Jan. 21st., in Belgium. He is now recovering in a hospital somewhere in England.

S-Sgt. Dan Allred from Gunter Field was here for the week-end with his mother and friends.

George H. Nix of Thorsby, has received a direct commission as second Lt. at an Eighth Air Force Fighter Station in England. Before receiving his commission Lt. Nix was a Master Sergeant in charge of the technical supply section of a fighter squadron in Col. Kyle L. Riddle's 479th Fighter Group at the same base.

He is now Technical Supply Officer and assistant Engineering Officer in the same squadron which is part of the 2nd Air Division.

Lt. Nix entered the Army in 1933 and served in the Cavalry until 1935 when he was transferred to the Air Corps.

CPL. GLENN COMMENDED BY HIS CAPTAIN

Mrs. C. Ray Glenn, Sr., received a letter from her son's (Corp. Claudis R. Glenn, Jr.) Captain, commending him on the outstanding job he is doing. Cpl. Glenn was wounded in action, Sept. 19th and when returned to duty, was put in a motor pool as a mechanic.

Captain Jordine stated that he is doing an excellent job and if all men would equal that of Cpl. Glenn I'm sure we would be the most outstanding army that was organized. Cpl. Glenn has been in the army going on four years. (U. S. Infantry).

Had a lot more for this week but not enough room, so watch for it in my next column.

"I AM THE CHILD"

I am the Child.
I have come into your world, about which I know nothing.
Why I came I know not;
I am curious; I am interested.
How I came I know not;

I am the Child.
All the world waits for my coming.
All the earth watches with interest to see what I shall become.
Civilization hangs in the balance.
For what I am, the world of tomorrow will be.

You hold in your hand my destiny.
You determine, largely, whether I shall succeed or fail.
Give me, I pray you, those things that make for happiness.
Train me, I beg you, that I may be a blessing to the world.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

DELTA KAPPA GAMMA

The Alpha Beta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma held its opening meeting in Jemison, with the Jemison teachers — Misses Harvey, Nichols, Clements and Mesdames Ekblad, Martin and Langston—as hostesses.

The meeting wa held in the home economics rooms of the Jemison High School. An array of gorgeous Spring flowers and pot plants were elegantly arranged for decoration. About 50 were present, including members of the chapter and their guests.

The guest speaker for the afternoon was Dr. Edine Wallace Moore from Birmingham Southern College Her subject was, "Women and Post-war Times." Her discourse, so wonderfully given, included everyone's position in post-war times.

Mrs. Edna Thompson, instructer in music at the Clanton Grammar School rendered a piano number

Mrs. Lois Mims, one of the chapter members, favored the group with two vocal numbers, accompanied by Joe Mullins, Jr.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses. Hand-made favors and other motifs symbolic of February's great birthdays were used.

Official warns of no civilian TIRES this summer

A prediction that the civilian tire shortage will get worse before it gets better, was given by Lt.-Col. J. R. Naylor, special assistant to H. G. Batcheller who has charge of scheduling tire production.

Col. Naylor told members of the New York Building Trades Congress on January 31, that "it was probable there would be no civilian production of tires after the middle of the year."

If that occurs, it would mean that there would be no tire quotas for civilian use whatsoever, as quotas now depend entirely upon the amount of month-by-month production allocated for civilian use.

So before it's too late come in and let us put a 1st. Class dependable Recap job on those smooth worn-out tires. We guarantee you complete satisfaction and can give you one-day service on most passenger tires, using the best rubber obtainable under government restrictions.

If you are eligible for new tires we can fill your order with the famous HOOD TIRE. We have a very large supply on hand now.

Allies Drive Onto Vital Ruhr; Return Home Rule to Filipinos; Men 30 to 33 Face Draft Call

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Constructed by the Germans, this dugout in France was put to use by U. S. troops, with doughboys shown cleaning up, writing home and relaxing behind the lines.

EUROPE:

Onto Ruhr

Giving ground in a desperate attempt to economize their forces for battle on more defensible terrain, the Germans fell back on the Rhine under the crushing weight of U. S. and British armies, which moved quickly to exploit any opening for a decisive breakthrough.

Leading the charge across the Rhineland plains, the U. S. 9th army headed for Dusseldorf and the vital Ruhr valley, much bombed heart of German industry, while the U. S. 1st army smashed onto ancient, steepled Cologne, transport hub of the region. At the northern end of the line, British and Canadian troops joined the 9th army in bearing down on the Ruhr.

While these Allied forces rode through weak, disorganized enemy units, the U. S. 3rd army smashed at the rim of the coal and iron-rich Saar, encountering stiff resistance along the range of the forested Eifel mountains and the defenses guarding the broad Moselle valley route to the Rhine.

Meanwhile, the overwhelmingly superior Allied air force kept up its heavy bombardment of German railways in a supreme attempt to knock out the enemy's communication lines and hamper the movement of his troops.

Feel War

Bleary-eyed peasants, carrying small packs of belongings, with the women bewildered and the men stolid, trudged back from the forward battle areas as the Yanks moved forward in their Rhineland drive.

Plodding over roads heavily rutted by the Yanks' heavy military vehicles, the refugees streamed back in the gray rainy mist, which added to the bleakness of the barren fields. In the background, black smoke curled from burning villages.

Peasants, whose sole possessions lay in the ground they cultivated, these refugees refused to move from the path of the war until the battle moved almost on top of them and artillery and aerial bombardment laid a pattern of destruction right in their back yards. They gave mute evidence that Germany was feeling the war just as thousands of others had felt it in other countries in the path of the wehrmacht earlier in the conflict.

Swirling Battle

While the Germans still had room to fall back on the Rhine in the west, they enjoyed no such flexibility in the east, where they were compelled to fight for their hold on the approaches to Berlin and industrial Saxony to the south.

With Zhukov's First White Russian and Konev's First Ukrainian armies astride the last river barriers to Berlin and Saxony, the German high command flung seasoned armored forces into what Nazi propagandists called a "merry-go-round" of death in an effort to thwart a major Red breakthrough to the heart of the Reich.

Meanwhile, the Russians maintained their heavy pressure against German forces lined along their flanks on the north and south, in an attempt to frustrate any Nazi effort to attack them from their rear during the course of their frontal assault on Berlin and Saxony. In bloody fighting on the northern flank, the Russians scored major gains in the forested lake country, driving close up to the Baltic sea and threatening to split the enemy in two.

SUNNY ITALY

Reports from the Italian front that fighting has been somewhat bogged down by snow come as a surprise because of the prevailing impression that sunny Italy was a warm land of orange and olive groves, and life in the open.

Northern Italy is in the same latitude as Maine, and has a winter climate not unlike much of the continent to the north. Central and southern Italy are warmer because of lower latitudes and more direct influence of the Mediterranean.

PACIFIC:

New Airfields

Even as doughty U. S. marines—the famed "Devildogs" of the country's services—cleared airfields on bloody, volcanic Iwo Jima, 750 miles from Tokyo, American carrier and land based aircraft continued to hurl destruction from the sky on the enemy homeland, seeking to wear down opposing air strength and rake military and industrial facilities.

Threat to U. S. Super-Fort bases in the Marianas, 800 miles to the south, Iwo Jima's airfields were to be put to use by the U. S. for attacks on Japan's string of homeland islands. Even as American planes lit on the rebuilt runways, marines continued to work their way to the north end of Iwo Jima, rooting out desperate enemy forces, originally estimated at 20,000, from strong entrenchments.

With Manila cleared, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces in the Philippines struck out northeast and southeast of the liberated capital, encountering stiffening opposition in their drive to clean up Luzon.

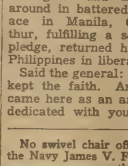
Home Rule

With men who fought with him at Corregidor and Bataan clustered around in battered Malacanan palace in Manila, General MacArthur, fulfilling a solemn American pledge, returned home rule to the Philippines in liberated areas.

Said the general: "My country has kept the faith. American soldiers came here as an army of free men dedicated with your people to the cause of human liberty. They came to restore the sanctity and happiness of your homes without fear of intrusion. You are now a liberated people."

In accepting home rule, Philippine President Sergio Osmena asked for all opposing political elements to unite for the reconstruction task.

DRAFT:



30 to 33 Next

Emphasizing the heavy demand for combat replacements, the near exhaustion of the pool of 18 to 25 year olds and the extremely limited supply of men 26 through 29, Selective Service called for the induction of registrants from 30 to 33 not necessary to the war effort.

With Director Hershey revealing that men over 30 would make up about 30 per cent of inductees by the end of the year, Selective Service ruled that only registrants over that age deemed necessary to war activity would receive consideration for deferment, whereas formerly they were just required to be engaged in essential industry.

Meanwhile, Representative Flannagan (W. Va.) and Senator Tydings (Md.) sought passage of legislation under which essential farm workers would not be considered for induction by comparing their importance to others in different fields.

No swivel chair official, Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal witnessed another major action in the Pacific, in following the marines' assault on Iwo Jima from a flagship and later visiting the shell-pocked beachhead. One year before, Forrestal, then under secretary of the navy, viewed the marines' invasion of Kwajalein in the Marshalls. After witnessing the attack on Iwo Jima, Forrestal conferred with Admiral Nimitz at Guam.

Texans Tote Shootin' Irons

There are still enough open spaces in Texas for pesky varmints to multiply and grow bold. Because of the increasing shortages of manpower and powder and shot, coyotes and bobcats have increased in number during the war years causing serious cattle losses.

Farmers, ranchmen, oil field workers, and houndmen joined to kill the critters.

PAN-AMERICA:

Economic Charter

Stressing the necessity of prosperity for political stability, U. S. representatives to the Pan-American conference in Mexico City proposed a program for orderly development of the hemisphere based upon the principle of private enterprise.

After speaking out against the organization of monopolies and state enterprise to conduct trade, the U. S. proposed such positive action as the lowering of trade barriers; equal access of all nations on even terms to raw materials; use of the proposed international monetary fund to stabilize currencies and of the world bank to promote reconstruction.

Fair treatment for enterprise, skill and capital brought from one country to another was also asked for in line with warnings that investors could not be expected to risk their money in states where changing political complexions upset the economy.

Air Superiority

Below appears the box score of the wartime record of the mighty U. S. air force in paring enemy air strength, crippling war production and supporting advancing ground forces:

AAF LOSSES

Lost in aerial combat vs. Germany	6,989
Lost in aerial combat vs. Japan	1,296
Lost by anti-aircraft vs. Germany	5,007
Lost by anti-aircraft vs. Japan	93
Destroyed on ground vs. Germany	92
Destroyed on ground vs. Japan	356
Lost by accidents, etc., vs. Germany	2,663
Lost by accidents, etc., vs. Japan	994
	17,830

AXIS LOSSES

Destroyed in aerial combat	34,393
Probably destroyed in combat	6,284
Damaged in aerial combat	8,560
Destroyed on the ground	7,153
Probably destroyed on the ground	750
Damaged or destroyed	3,519
	50,663

COAL MINERS:

Open Parleys

Even as the United Mine Workers opened negotiations with operators for a new contract, burly John L. Lewis notified Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins that provisions of the Smith-Connally act compelled him to file a 30-day notice with the department that the membership might walk out in the event of a snag in the dickerings.

Although complying with the law, which states that a 30-day notice of intention to strike was necessary, Lewis bitterly assailed the legislation, quoting President Roosevelt to the effect that the act would enable dissident elements to force a strike vote in a union while leaders sought to iron out difficulties through continued negotiation.

In opening negotiations, Lewis was expected to ask for a boost in basic pay from $1 to $1.25 an hour; full hourly rate for travel time from the gate to the mine face instead of the two-thirds now paid, and differentials of 5 and 10 cents an hour for second and third shifts.

CANADA:

Draft Riot

Devoted to self-rule, French-Canadian blood continued to run hot over the dominion's overseas conscription policy, with a mob of 1,000 people rioting against police checking individuals' military status in Drummondville, Quebec.

With feelings running at their highest since the bloody anti-conscription riots of 1917, officers combed drinking establishments, bowling alleys, pool rooms, restaurants and theaters for deserters and delinquents, as fist fights broke out, people overturned police cars and tried to free 12 prisoners.

Though the dominion's compromise policy calls for the drafting of only 16,000 of the home army's 63,000 members, for overseas service, the French-Canadians still consider the regulation as an invasion of their self-rule for the interest of the British empire.

DIPLOMACY:

New Allies

Faced with the Big Three's ultimatum that a declaration of war against the Axis was necessary to any country's participation in the United Nations' postwar political and economic conference in San Francisco, April 25, both Turkey and Egypt finally jumped on the Allied bandwagon.

As a result of its declaration, Turkey was expected to open the vital straits linking the Mediterranean and Black seas for shipment of supplies to Russia, and commit its army of 23 divisions, equipped with both Axis and Allied equipment, to the mop-up of Nazi held islands in the Aegean sea, threatening vital near eastern water routes.

Egypt's declaration was marred by the assassination of Prime Minister Ahmed Maher, who was shot to death by a 22-year-old extremist party member as he stepped down from the speaker's dais and was leaving the chamber of deputies. However, the shooting was laid to other reasons than the declaration.

RECLAIM CLOTHING

Reclamation of clothing and equipage representing 85 million yards of textile fabrics each year is being effected under the quartermaster corps reclamation program in the U. S. alone.

Total yardage saved is made up of more than 57,000,000 yards of cotton goods, some 25,000,000 yards of woolens and worsteds, and more than 2,000,000 yards of cotton duck, much of it damaged tentage, which is restored to usefulness.

U. S. State Dept. Seeks to Bring Diplomacy in Open

Assistant Secretary MacLeish Resolved to Inform People of United Nations Dickerings; Plans to Develop Public Interest.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

By the time these lines are in print the biggest publicity job for the biggest institution the world has ever planned will probably have been launched by the /heretofore least publicity minded department of the government—the state department. It is a "build up" for the meeting of the United Nations to be held in San Francisco, April 25.

I am writing this a few minutes after returning from the office of the man who is planning the program, Archibald MacLeish, assistant secretary of state.

The location is journalistically familiar to me and it lies nearby. Only one block, then across Lafayette park, across Pennsylvania avenue and then along almost another block of to-me very familiar marble corridor. I have had many interviews in that ancient, impressive rococco state department building, but never one in which a member of the staid and conservative institution stuck his neck out farther and with such abandon. MacLeish is the father of the plan I mentioned—the plan to tell the country, by means of every available publicizing medium, what the international gathering on the Pacific coast is all about.

Assistant Secretary MacLeish has announced as his creed, "no foreign policy can succeed in these days unless it has the full understanding and support of the people."

Sets Stage for Open Covenants

To put his words into deeds he has planned a program which will set the stage at San Francisco for "open covenants openly arrived at," that theory, so noble in its conception, which Woodrow Wilson proclaimed but found himself unable to put into effect when it came to foreign affairs. MacLeish has gone all the way out on a very tenuous limb and he realizes where it will leave him if the meeting in San Francisco crawls into a cavern of secrecy and pulls the cavern in after it.

"Foreign relations" are traditionally established and carried on by diplomatists who are trained to work in the dark. Like mules in mines, they probably would not be able to see the most persuasive argument if it were displayed in the light of pitiless publicity. And, it is freely admitted, it would be highly impractical to carry on all international relations in front of a newsreel camera and in earshot of press and radio. One doesn't wash one's linen, soiled or otherwise, in public and the board of directors doesn't meet in the presence of the stockholders.

But MacLeish believes there can be a compromise and he is going to risk the unpleasant reaction that might take place if it fails. He is going to insist that the dignified and discreet state department use up-to-the-minute press agent methods to prepare the people for the San Francisco meeting. And then, if the meeting goes underground on them it will just be too bad, MacLeish says.

The public is already keenly interested. Hundreds of organizations have besieged the department with questions, demands for material for debate and discussion, explanation, interpretation. Schools, churches, labor unions, business associations all want information on what really happened at Dumbarton Oaks, Teheran, Yalta—and what's next.

With a pretty good idea of what the public wants to know the state department is preparing a set of outlines on such topics as: "War: how can we prevent it?"(the main purpose of the UN) "Prosperity: how can we attain it?" (that takes in the economic plans such as the monetary program agreed upon at Bretton Woods, the function of the proposed international economic council, credit for reconstruction . . .)

Another topic, "Social Progress: how can we work for it?" will explain the various programs for health and education which have been discussed here and elsewhere. There are other documents including a short explanation in simple language of exactly what was agreed upon at Dumbarton Oaks and is to be discussed at the San Francisco meeting.

There will be other forms of publicity through the press and radio and a movie picture projecting the story of the United Nations some 20 years into the future, showing how it is hoped that the organization will fit into the world of tomorrow.

Communications Broaden Interest

By the time the San Francisco meeting begins its deliberations it would be fair to assume that the general public will have heard enough about its purpose to have considerable curiosity concerning what goes on at the negotiations. In other words, it will become "must" news and press and radio will hammer loudly on any doors that are closed too long. Mr. MacLeish's theories will have an excellent opportunity for a very thorough test. If the doors don't open he will be decidedly on the spot.

The reason he insists on this bold, frontal attack on the "open covenants" problem is because he believes the world is confronted with a condition and not a theory.

"Modern electrical communication," he says, "has in fact created the Parliament of Man about which Tennyson dreamed."

"It is possible to dislike the Parliament of man," he explains. "There are those who do dislike it—who would like to return to the old system of foreign relations conducted exclusively through the chanceleries in secret codes. But it is impossible to ignore that the Parliament of Man is now convened in continuous session, thanks to public channels of communications, without rules of order, limitations of debate, or privileges of the house and those who refuse to take account of its proceedings may wake and find that those proceedings have taken no account of them."

Of course, the press has been fighting to achieve just such a kind of free news source as MacLeish is talking about. They almost had to push back bayonets to get within shouting distance of the international food conference at Hot Springs which produced UNRRA; they have fought and occasionally won, for a slackening of the censorship on war news. But I attended a luncheon not long ago when MacLeish outlined his theories and I saw more than one mouth go down in cynical doubt of his possible success.

He is aware of this feeling, aware of the pressure of tradition and of habit, but is intends to go ahead. And one thing that gives him more aid and comfort than anything else is the widespread and happy admission that the report on the Yalta conference was so much more frank and detailed than anybody had dared hope.

Perhaps MacLeish's neck is not out too far, after all.

One of the greatest difficulties which any governmental institution meets in deciding on a course of action which doesn't have to be submitted to an actual vote either of the people or of congress, is an ability to judge public opinion. Frequently, the tendency is "when in doubt leave out."

The army pursued that policy in regard to the acceptance of Negro nurses for a long time. Finally, either by force of necessity or good guessing, it ruled that Negro nurses were eligible. A few weeks later along came the results of a poll taken by the National Opinion Research Center of the University of Denver—a nonpartisan, noncommercial organization whose reputation is high among the professional poll-takers.

It confirmed the army's judgment by revealing that the majority of those white, civilian adults, men and women, young and old, rich and poor, in cities, towns and rural areas, questioned, said "yes" to the following question:

"If you were sick in a hospital, would it be all right with you if you had a negro nurse, or wouldn't you like it?"

The majority—57 per cent said "yes," 1 per cent was "undecided." Of the "yessers," 3 per cent said if they had a choice, they would take a white woman. Only 4 out of 10 southerners said "yes," which seems strange since so many of them had "mammies."

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Allied officer in charge. Sergeant Leonard Borth, an M.P., was to be in charge of security. The Major set out immediately to win the friendship of the citizens, and to improve their living conditions. The first duties of the Major, after posting the civil instructions, was to find out what the citizens needed the most. He soon determined to replace their bell, which the Germans had taken. Major Joppolo found that the bell was the very symbol of their private and civic life in Adano. He determined to secure a bell satisfactory to the people.

CHAPTER III

Craxi said: "I needed no bell. I was on the beach to welcome the Americans. My woman was with me, the formidable Margherita, and my seven children. We were on the beach in spite of the shooting, to greet the Americans. But what did my children shout? They did not shout: 'We miss the tinkling of the bell.' They shouted: 'Caramelle! Caramelle!' They were hungry. They wanted candy. I myself, who had had enough to eat as it happens, shouted for cigarettes, not for the pealing of a bell."

Borth and the usher Zito came back. Borth said: "It's nifty, Major. All the records are intact. They tell everything. There are lists of anti-Fascists and lists of those who were enthusiastic and the others who were lukewarm. There's a dossier on each important person. It's perfect. Who are these guys?"

Cacopardo said: "Cacopardo is my name, at your service, sir. Cacopardo is sulphur and sulphur is Cacopardo."

Borth said: "I remember that name. In the records it says Cacopardo's crazy."

Craxi said: "That is true. He thinks that bells are more important than food."

Borth turned on Craxi in mock anger. "And who is this?"

Craxi was apologetic again: "I am anti-Fascist. Craxi. I believe in food for the moment."

Major Joppolo said: "They are arguing which is more important, food or restoring the bell. Since we obviously can't do anything about the bell just now, food is our concern."

Craxi looked very proud of himself, but Cacopardo turned to Zito and said: "We will leave this matter to the son of Rosa who was the wife of Zito. What do you say, small Zito, do you consider the food or the bell more important?"

Surprisingly Zito said: "I think the bell."

Major Joppolo was interested by this. He leaned forward and said: "Why, Zito?"

Zito said: "Because the tone of the bell was so satisfactory."

"No," said Cacopardo, "it is because of the history of the bell. When the bell spoke, our fathers and their fathers far back spoke to us."

Even Craxi was swept into this argument. "No," he said, "it was because the bell rang the times of day. It told us when to do things, such as eating. It told us when to have the morning egg and when to have pasta and rabbit and when to drink wine in the evening."

Zito said: "I think it was the tone which mattered. It soothed all the people of this town. It chided those who were angry, it cheered the unhappy ones, it even laughed with those who were drunk. It was a tone for everybody."

Giuseppe came in bringing the priest. Father Pensovecchio was gray-haired and cheerful, and as he approached the group around the Major's desk he made a motion with his right hand which might have been interpreted either as a blessing or as a Fascist salute.

After the introductions, Major Joppolo said to the priest: "Father, we are speaking of the old bell which was taken away."

Father Pensovecchio said: "That is the disgrace of this town. I have in my church a bell which is just as loud as the one which was taken away, though not so sweet and much younger and altogether meaningless as a bell. Any other bell would have done as well in my belfry. I wanted to send my bell. But the Monsignor would not permit it. The Monsignor is the uncle of the Mayor. He has reasons for doing the things he does—" Father Pensovecchio crossed himself, indicating that the things which the Monsignor did were somewhat ugly; "—but in this case I believe he was wrong."

Borth said: "It's ridiculous. There are lots of things more important than this bell. Get them some food and don't forget that alleyway."

Major Joppolo said: "All the same, the bell is important to them." And he said then in Italian: "Thank you for telling me about the bell. I promise you that I will do all I can to get another bell which will have some meaning as a bell and will have a good tone and its history will be that it was given to you by the Americans to take the place of the one which was taken away by the Fascists to make gun barrels."

Cacopardo said: "You are kind."

Craxi said: "I thank you, Mister Major, and I kiss your hand."

Major Joppolo said: "For what?"

Cacopardo the historian said: "He meant no offense. It is an old custom here. Once the important people make us kiss their hands, and later when the actual kissing became too much of a bother, it became the habit merely to mention the kissing, as if it had been done."

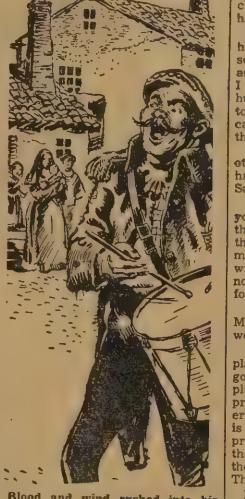
Craxi said: "I meant no offense, Mister Major. I am anti-Fascist."

Major Joppolo said: "It appears that everyone in this town is anti-Fascist. Well, we will see about the bell. Now I wish to speak alone with the priest. Zito, you may stay. You are my usher. Giuseppe, you may stay. You are my interpreter."

Craxi said: "Mister Major, the telegram."

Major Joppolo said: "I will try to send it."

Craxi mentioned the kissing again, and turned to go.



When the others had gone, Major Joppolo said to Father Pensovecchio: "Father, I wish to tell you that the Americans want to bring only good to this town. As in every nation, there are some bad men in America. It is possible that some Americans who come here will do bad things. If they do, I can assure you that most of the Americans will be just as ashamed of those things as you are annoyed by them."

Father Pensovecchio said: "I think we will understand weakness in your men just as we try to understand it in our own."

Major Joppolo said: "Thank you, Father, I have been told that you are the best priest in Adano."

The priest said with quite honest modesty: "I am here to do my duty."

Major Joppolo said: "Therefore I should like to ask a favor of you.

Blood and wind rushed into his throat and his throat roared.

You must feel perfectly free to refuse me if you wish. I should like to ask you to say a few words before your mass tomorrow morning about the Americans. I shall leave it to you to say what you wish, if you will merely add that there are certain proclamations which the Americans have posted which ought to be read."

Father Pensovecchio said: "That I can easily do."

Major Joppolo said: "I myself am a Catholic. If you will have me, I should like to attend your mass."

The priest said: "It will be a pleasure to have you." Major Joppolo was glad that he did not say it would be an honor.

Major Joppolo said: "I shall see you tomorrow then."

Father Pensovecchio said, just to make sure: "At the Church of San Angelo. It is by the Piazza of that name. At seven in the morning. Until then, son."

When the priest had left, Giuseppe said in his brand of English: "You doing okay, a boss. All you got a do now is fix a food."

"Yes," said Major Joppolo, "food. We'll go to the bakeries. But first, do you have a crier here?"

Giuseppe said to Zito in Italian: "What is the name of the crier? Did he run into the hills with the others?"

Zito said: "No, he is here. Mercurio Salvatore. He is here. Only, Mister Major, he does not always say exactly what you tell him to say. He will say the general meaning of what you wish, but he will change it some. Even if you write it down, he will change it some."

Major Joppolo said: "Will you get him, please, Zito? I want to send him out to tell the people to read the proclamations."

Zito went. Major Joppolo said to Giuseppe: "We will go to the bakeries, then we will post the proclamations."

Giuseppe said: "Okay, a boss."

Major Joppolo looked down at his desk and saw Craxi's telegram. He undid the safety pin and unfolded the paper and read:

"To Franklin D. Roosevelt, Capitol Building, Washington, D. C. Fremente di gioia per la liberta da molto tempo attesa che i vostri valorosi soldati anno dato alla citta d'Adano stop vi prego accettare i sentimenti sinceri della mia gratitudine e riconoscenza. Antifascista Giovanni La Concetta fu Craxi."

"Giuseppe," the Major said, "let's see how good you are as an interpreter. Now, this is for President Roosevelt. You must make it as eloquent as you can. What does it say?"

"To Franklin D. Roosevelt and a so forth," said Giuseppe. "Crazy with joy because of a liberty so long time awaited which your brave a soldier have a give to a town of Adano. What's a stop?"

"That's just the end of a sentence, Giuseppe."

"End a sentence. I beg a you accept a sincere sentiments of my gratitude and a recognition. Signed a this Craxi. You going to deliver it, a boss?"

"Sure," the Major said, "the President will be glad to hear."

Mercurio Salvatore, crier of the town of Adano, took a little time to show up, because he had to get into his uniform. His face was happy when he did arrive, because he had thought that his crying days were over. Having been a voice of Fascism for seventeen years, he thought that the newcomers would not want his loud shouts. He had taken his uniform off and hidden it in the house of Carmelina the wife of Fatta. He had then awkwardly paraded himself in civilian clothes and the people, having seen him in uniform for seventeen years, laughed at him.

"Where is the crier?" they asked each other in his presence.

"He has disappeared into the clothes of Fatta which do not fit him," they shouted, and laughed.

Therefore Mercurio Salvatore was happy and grateful when he presented himself to Major Joppolo. "I am glad to be able to serve you and I kiss your hand," he said in his husky voice. Indoors he had learned to speak in a kind of whisper, because he knew the strength of his throat.

If Major Joppolo had been any other American officer, he would have laughed outright at Mercurio Salvatore.

He said: "Crier, I have a job for you. I must explain this to you: the Americans are different from the Fascists. They are different in many ways. For this reason there will be quite a few changes in Adano. I hope that they will be changes for the better."

Mercurio Salvatore said: "Yes, Mister Major," to show that he would remember every word of it.

The Major said: "In order to explain some of these changes, I am going to post at various prominent places around the town a number of proclamations, which will make everything clear. All I want you to do is to tell the people to read these proclamations. Impress on them that the penalties for not obeying the proclamations will be severe. That is all."

Mercurio Salvatore looked disappointed. "That is not much to shout," he said.

Major Joppolo said: "Shall I name a new crier?"

Mercurio Salvatore said quickly: "Oh no, Mister Major, I will make something beautiful of what you have said."

Major Joppolo said: "The proclamations will be posted before five o'clock this afternoon."

Mercurio Salvatore said: "Yes, Mister Major," and left.

He picked up his drum where he had left it outside the Major's office. Ordinarily he had made his first cry in the Piazza Progresso, right in front of the Palazzo, but this time he was self-conscious, and wanted to have a few tries before crying within earshot of the Major. Therefore he went first to the park opposite the Cathedral.

He rolled his drum long and sharply.

He took a deep breath. Blood and wind rushed into his throat, and his throat roared: "Well, you laughed. But you can see that Mercurio Salvatore is still your crier. The Americans are friends of Mercurio Salvatore. The Americans wish to be your friends, too. You have been expecting the Americans for some time, but did you expect the changes which would come after the Americans? Did you know that they were going to change many things after they came? Did you know that they were going to change practically everything except the crier? Well, your crier is here to tell you this."

Now Mercurio Salvatore filled his lungs and bellowed: "Opposite me I see Carmelina the wife of Fatta in front of her house. I also see the lazy Fatta leaning against the wall of his wife's house. The crier wishes to thank Carmelina for storage of his uniform during the difficult time of the invasion. He wishes also to address a few words to her lazy husband. It is unfortunate, lazy Fatta, that you never learned to read. It is too bad that you were too slothful to memorize the letters of the alphabet. This afternoon you would have had a chance to read of the changes which our friends the Americans intend to bring about here in Adano.

Coyote Fights Back; Battle Draws Crowd

GALLUP, N. M. — Ted Fair's five minute bout with a coyote drew a good crowd for the wide open spaces near here. The coyote, shot and wounded, turned on Fair as he went to pick up the animal. By the time the coyote was killed 29 automobiles had stopped while the occupants looked on.

Yanks Use Cellar; Enemy Is Upstairs

American Soldiers Hide Out While Foe Rakes House.

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN BELGIUM. — Eleven American soldiers, caught in a town when German armor swept through it, hid for 10 hours in the cellar of a house occupied by enemy troops.

The men were in the house and were sitting down to breakfast when the Germans broke into town. As machine gun fire began spraying the house they dived into the cellar.

Black uniformed crews of two German tanks broke in, searched hastily and then sat down and ate the Americans' breakfast.

"There was no way out so we just sat tight in the cellar," said Tech. Sgt. Jack McClure of Sherman, Texas. "We were divebombed by our own planes and raked by our own artillery but it was music to our ears."

During the day, as many as 18 Germans wandered about upstairs, ate American rations and smoked the Americans' cigarets.

One German raked the stairs and cellar door with a pistol. Another looked in the basement window and passing tanks peppered the building.

When a German officer and an enemy enlisted man walked into the cellar "Tuffy," the Americans' pet dog, kept quiet, and the crouching soldiers were not seen in the dark.

Shortly thereafter the pint-sized pup began to bark playfully. Afraid to risk their lives by repeatedly trying to keep him quiet, one soldier reached out in the dark and strangled "Tuffy."

Splitting into two groups, the Yanks made a break for their own lines after dark. As they left they said the Nazis started to burn down the town and blow up captured ammunition. The men hiked miles through the mud, slush and water.

Finally, they saw a patrol ahead and hestitated. Were they friend or foe?

"Are you Americans," doubtfully called one American.

"No, we are Yanks," came the answer.

The 11 men were safe.

Work All Night to Hack Out Body in Train Wreck

TRENTON, MICH. — Working all night in ankle-deep snow and near-zero temperature, rescue crews recently removed the body of Ray Harmon, 36, of Toledo, Ohio, from the wreckage of a Toledo-Detroit New York Central passenger train. The train was derailed when it struck an abandoned automobile.

Harmon was the locomotive fireman. His engineer, O. F. Hayward, 58, Toledo, was killed when the seven-car train plowed into an automobile belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ridenour of Dundee.

Crews, using torches and picks, worked inch-by-inch through the twisted steel of the overturned locomotive and tender in hopes they could reach Harmon alive.

The crewmen were hurtled from the locomotive that tore up a block-long section of track before coming to an abrupt halt upside down in a ditch. The coaches careened wildly in zigzag fashon across the main line. Passengers were jolted severely but otherwise uninjured.

Missing for Six Years; Police Officer Located

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A set of fingerprints ended a search for a former Brooklyn policeman who disappeared six years ago and whose estranged wife sought to have him declared legally dead.

Patrolman Jacob C. Shaver disappeared July 29, 1938, and was dismissed from the department five months later after his shield was found in a subway.

When his wife, Vivian, applied for his full police pension in November of this year, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia ordered the case reopened. Detective Joseph Lammey of the missing persons bureau dispatched Shaver's fingerprints to all branches of the armed services and learned recently that Shaver enlisted in the merchant marine at the outbreak of the war and now is at sea.

Inefficient Collector Can't Even Find Himself

ATLANTA, GA. — An executive asked the fourth regional war labor board to permit him to pay a new bill collector more than had been received by the employe's predecessor. The previous collector had been discharged because his work was unsatisfactory, the businessman reported, adding: "On one occasion he was given a bad debt to run down. After spending several days attempting to locate the man, he discovered it was himself he was looking for."

Constipation is the cause of Much Suffering

Constipation may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless corrected will finally impair the health. Symptoms associated with advancing constipation are loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired feeling and mental depression. Headache, dizziness, anemia, and skin disturbances such as acne, are commonly experienced. In severe cases, neuralgia and joint pains occur. Indigestion, with gas formation and colic, and piles and fissures frequently add to the discomforts of severe chronic cases.

No matter how many other medicines you may have tried for constipation, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION, with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you satisfactory results or your money back. Caution: Use only as directed.—Adv.

SEVENTH WAR LOAN STARTS APRIL NINTH

The appeal to buy War Bonds in the Seventh War Loan will have its beginning April 9 and is expected to resound with a thundering campaign right on through the drive period and until July 7, according to announcement this week by State War Finance Chairman Ed Leigh McMillan, Brewton.

Mr. McMillan called attention to the official drive period from May 14 through June 30, but stressed that pre-drive emphasis will be placed on the Payroll Savings program and the Schools-at-War program beginning April 9.

The accounting period for the Seventh War Loan will include every day from April 9 through July 7, he said.

"The forthcoming drive—The Mighty Seventh—will combine every possible effort of thousands of volunteer workers in Alabama and will be the greatest financial venture ever embarked on and accomplished in our state," he said.

Calling attention to the Treasury Department's decision to undertake only two drives this year instead of three as in 1944, Mr. McMillan said, "This means that we must do the same amount of selling and buying in two drives this year as we did in three last year."

Even if the fighting in Europe should end during the Seventh War Loan it would not decrease the need for War Bond Sales, he declared.

"War production will continue at gigantic levels and troops must be transported vast distances to the Pacific and equipped with the latest weapons.

"We must remember supply lines are lengthening with every victory in that theatre must have the very best in the way of equipment, food, and hospital facilities. They are putting up a mighty battle and we must put our might behind them in 'the Mighty Seventh.'"

Mr. McMillan also emphasized the importance of controlling the ever-threatening enemy of inflation.

"National income will continue high," he said, "and civilian goods will continue scarce. Money invested in War Bonds will eliminate much of the inclination toward inflation when a situation of this kind exists.

"Put all the money you do not actually need for necessities into War Bonds during the Seventh War Loan and enjoy the benefits when the war is over and the boys are back at home."

HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A. MET TUESDAY — OFFICERS ELECTED

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. J. E. Gowan called the March meeting of the Chilton County High School P.-T. A. to order.

A group of girls from the Glee Club sung several lovely numbers, accompanied by Mrs. Raymond Mims.

Mr. H. W. Yeager told a very delightful, humorous story.

The officers for next year were elected and the meeting was dismissed by Mrs. Gowan.

Officers next year will be: Mrs. Carl Christensen, President; Mrs. J. E. Gowan, vice-President; Miss Margurite Perry, Secretary and Mrs. J. C. Burnett, Treasurer.

Tenant Purchase Borrowers Hold Annual Meeting

Every Spring, the farm families who are purchasing farms through the aid of the Farm Security Administration have an annual get-together. This meeting has been built around the idea of a "reunion of old friends." The programs and the plans for the dinner are worked out by a committee selected from the families.

This year the program will center around better soil conservation practices and improving the appearance of the home site by landscaping and upkeep. Through the cooperation of Mr. Connell, Soil Conservationist, and Mr. Tyler, teacher of Vocational Agriculture, demonstrations of interest to every farm family will be held during the day. The vocational teacher at the Negro County Training School will be in charge of the landscaping demonstration held in that community.

Three meetings will be held as follows:

Enterprise School—March 20, at 10 o'clock a. m. (Demonstration on farms of Mr J. Litt Cox and Mr Franklin Patterson).

Baker School—March 21, at 10 o'clock a. m. (Demonstrations on farm of Mr. W. A. Williams).

County Training School—March 22, at 10 o'clock a. m. (Demonstrations on farms of Otho McKinney and Matthew Chatman).

The meetings will be under the direction of Mr. Marvin Durbin, County Supervisor, Farm Security Administration.

BETTY JANE FROM PUMPKIN LANE TO BE PRESENTED AT ISABELLA SCHOOL

The Sr. H Class will present "Betty Jane From Pumpkin Lane" at Isabella High School Auditorium Friday nite, March 16th at 8:00 o'clock.

The characters are: Johnny Finch, (country boy) Herchell Patterson Auntie Bean (a darling of Pumpkin Lane) Lorene Oates. Gertie Gilbert. (active girl) Olga Martin. Gordon Gilbert (an artist) E. J. Klinner. Prudence Putter (with a nose for business) Marcell Deavers. Betty Jane (from Pumpkin Lane' Rena Hinson. Hank Hardwater (a handy man) Arthur Tucker. Martha Simmons (a lovelorn girl) Kathleen Rasberry. Ketchy Finch (Johnny's sister) Frances Culp. Squire Simmons (a hard businessman) Jerome Conway. Harvey Higgins (From Boston) Elsie Samson. Mrs. Gilbert (a mother) Frances Hayes.

Action takes place in the Bean home somewhere in a small village somewhere in New England.

Betty Jane, mainstay, of the Bean family has been visiting in the city ostensibly in all efforts to gain polish, which she does. In the meantime Auntie Bean, has had a time of it keeping the Bean Farm "out of the red." All this unknown to Betty. Gordon (an artist) who boards in the Bean home is attracted to Betty. He proposes and much to the horror of all concerned!

Then Gordon's mother learns of all this and she comes flying into battle!

THE WHOLE THING IS A SCREAM. DON'T MISS IT! ! !

G. I. ADVISORY COMMITTEE HELPS RETURN VETERANS

(NOTE: This is second of a series of 7 articles on the guaranty of farm loans under the G. I. Bill of Rights The next article will be on the Agricultural Advisory Committee.)

According to the best information obtainable, about one out of every 10 men in the United States armed services is planning to farm when the war is over, says J. H. Yates, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bibb- Chilton National Farm Loan Association.

Americans are proud of the men and women in our armed forces. They have done a superb job. They "have fought a good fight." They are worthy of every assistance that can be given them in their desire to return to civilian life and engage in useful employment and productive enterprise.

For those who want to farm, assistance is provided through the farm loan provisions of the G. I. Bill of Rights. Administration of the G. I. Bill of Rights is vested in the Veteran's Administration. The Administrator of Veteran's Affairs has designated the Department of Agriculture and the War Food Administration as agencies to assist him in determining whether applications for the guaranty of farm loans may be approved. This service will be extended mainly thru the Cooperative Agricultural Extension Service, the Farm Security Administration and the Farm Credit Administration.

For the purpose of providing interested veterans with necessary information and practical assistance County Advisory Committees have been set up in each county and parish. The County Agent is chairman of the advisory committee which is composed of other agricultural workers, farmers, and businessmen who are thoroughly familiar with local conditions, says Mr. Yates.

A veteran, especially if he is not familiar with farming conditions or available land in the community in which he wishes to settle, should discuss his problems with this committee. These advisory committees, whose services are free, are in position to give interested veterans information on where to get farm training if needed, availability and cost of farms in the community, the best type of farming and farming systems, the required investment, safe margins of debt and the kind of credit needed and where it is available.

J. H. Yates said this information will help the veteran to select a farm on which he has a reasonable chance of success. It will also protect him from making unwise investments or assuming a bigger debt than he has a reasonable chance to repay.

Members of the advisory committee in Chilton county include: M. R. Glasscock, Chairman, H. G. Heflin E. N. Bently, R. M. Roper and J. B. Deramus.

Groups Combined In Cancer Study

Formation of a national organization to coordinate cancer research in the United States was announced by the American Cancer Society.

For many years the cancer researchers, who now number about 400, and physicians, chemists, physicists, mathematicians and others interested in cancer, have worked individually or in small groups without much connection.

The coordination is planned under a group of five widely known cancer experts, cooperating with doctors scientists, laymen and government and working under direction of R. Adm. Charles S. Stephenson, retired.

Adm. Stephenson is not a cancer authority, but in war work he has cooperated with all the medical and scientific professions, and has had a leading hand in ridding the army of typhus fever and controlling malaria.

A new step in cancer is to be assurance of continuity of whatever research is undertaken, even though it requires 10 or more years. The purpose is to attract talented young doctors and scientists.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Elect Officers

At an open meeting at the County Court House last Friday night a large group of veterans met and elected officers and filed application for a charter of a post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States at Clanton, Ala.

Mr. William (Bill) Hampton was elected Commander with Mr. J. E Rasberry as the Quartermaster. Bill Hampton is a veteran of World War I and has a son "Jack" who is now in the Pacific.

J. E. Rasberry is also a War I veteran and is keenly interested in the welfare of the returning veterans

Mr. John P. Reynolds, State Department Commander was present and obligated the members into a post. Mr. Reynolds was highly pleased at the response of the veterans of both War I and War II

If you are an overseas veteran, what are you doing to protect the rights and privileges that have been created in your behalf by the federal government? You can help defend those rights and privileges by joining the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, the only organization that is composed exclusively of overseas veterans, the men who speak your language and who share your experiences. If you want to know more about this organization, and what you can do to protect the future welfare of all overseas veterans, including the men in this war, be sure to attend the next meeting at the court house on the Fourth Monday night of each month at 8:00 o'clock. The only ticket of admission is your honorable discharge or a photostatic copy. If you desire further information before this meeting contact one of the above officers or T. H. Walker, field representative

Men who are still in uniform and have had overseas service are eligible to become members now and parents who have sons overseas now may join for their son by proof of such service

MISS MARTHA ALLEN TO SPEAK AT ART EXHIBIT

Miss Martha Allen, Art Instructor at Alabama College at Montevallo will make a talk on the various pictures at the Art Exhibit, to be held at the Chilon County High School, on the afternoon of April 3rd, at 3 o'clock. All parents are cordially invited to attend.

PATES CHAPEL FARMERS' UNION

Last Thursday night a large number of farmers attended the meeting and took part in discussing ways and means of renewing the drive for an electric line. These efforts will be further organized this Thursday night. New cooperative enterprises will also be considered.

HIGHLAND

Sunday was preaching day. The attendance was not so good as it could have been. Now that the weather is getting better let's come every Sunday.

Bro. Hard delivered a wonderful sermon after Sunday School. It was enjoyed very much by all.

We were glad to have Mrs. Coy Adkins of Opelika visiting with us at Church.

We are very glad to have Erhman Hand back home visiting his parents and friends on a furlough. He is stationed at Great Lakes, Ill.

Mr and Mrs Hand and Erhman were the dinner guests of Mr and Mrs. Clifton Parrish and family.

Mr and Mrs Clint Billingsley and family took dinner with Mr and Mrs Fonzie Cox.—Reporter.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the Community and friends for their help and kindness through our sickness. We also thank the neighbors and road boys for their flowers and Dr. and Mrs. Eiland. May God's richest blessings be with each and everyone of you is our prayer.—Mr. R. P. Peters and family.

MOBILE X-RAY UNIT VISITS CO. SCHOOLS

The mobile X-Ray unit brought to the County by the Chilton County Tuberculosis Association is making x-ray pictures of school children 15 years old and older, of teachers, bus drivers and lunch room workers.

On Tuesday, the first day in the county, the unit was at Jemison High School. Miss Virginia Putman, Supervisor of the Photo-Roentegen Survey, was most favorably impressed with the fine cooperation received. She attributed the unusual responsiveness of the children to the educational program undertaken by the teachers. She said the children knew the importance of the x-ray in revealing early tuberculosis, and were eager to be x-rayed.

Over 300 x-ray pictures were made at the Jemison High School center. Children attended from the following schools: Union Grove, Collins Chapel, Thorsby public school and Institute, Mineral Springs, Jemison colored and Guilledge

The Chilton County High School, Isabella High School, and Verbena High Schools are centers, with the other schools coming to these centers. The unit is at Isabella all day Thursday, and at Verbena until noon Friday. Miss Putman invites the parents and interested persons to visit the centers and see the unit in operation.

Constipation is the cause of Much Suffering

Constipation may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless corrected will finally impair the health. Symptoms associated with advancing constipation are loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired feeling and mental depression. Headache, dizziness, anemia, and skin disturbances such as acne, are commonly experienced. In severe cases, neuralgia and joint pains may develop. Indigestion with gas formation and colic, and piles and fissures frequently add to the discomforts of severe chronic cases.

No matter how many other medicines you may have tried for constipation, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION, with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you satisfactory results or your money back. Caution: Use only as directed.—Adv.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS—

Floods Peril War Industries; Axis Losses Heavy as Allies Batter Enemies' Inner Defenses

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

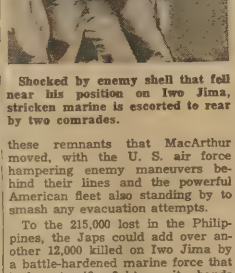
FLOOD:

Rampaging Rivers

Spilling over their banks to inundate thousands of low-lying acres and settlements, rampaging rivers created one of the greatest flood dangers in recent years all the way from Pennsylvania to Mississippi, seriously threatening war industries in their path.

With the flood stage already surpassed at the juncture of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers in Pittsburgh, swirling waters rolled down the Ohio, further fed by swollen tributaries from surrounding states. As waters lapped at its 62-foot floodwall, broken before in 1913 and 1937, the important manufacturing center of Portsmouth, Ohio, lay imperiled, as did Frankfort, Kentucky's capital.

As the danger mounted, people were removed from the low-lying flatlands, and emergency Red Cross and other disaster relief stations attended to the distressed. No less than six persons were drowned in the early stages of the flood, and many thousands were homeless.



PACIFIC:

Crush Japs

Fighting no open action, but rather putting up a stiff albeit futile resistance from both natural and fortified strongpoints, the Japs have lost heavily in the Philippine and Iwo Jima campaigns.

Latest count of enemy dead on Luzon showed over 90,000, which when coupled with an estimated 125,000 killed on Leyte, brought total Jap losses to over 215,000. The rapid advance of the Yanks despite the stubborn opposition indicated the difficulties of defenders to hold strongpoints against superior and well equipped forces capable of powerful outflanking action.

By General MacArthur's count, the Japs still have some 60,000 troops on Luzon, cooped in the northeastern corner of the island and east of Manila. It was against Shocked by enemy shell that fell near his position on Iwo Jima, stricken marine is escorted to rear by two comrades.

these remnants that MacArthur moved, with the U. S. air force hampering enemy maneuvers behind their lines and the powerful American fleet also standing by to smash any evacuation attempts.

To the 215,000 lost in the Philippines, the Japs could add over another 12,000 killed on Iwo Jima by a battle-hardened marine force that had a terrific fight on its hands from the moment it landed on the tiny stepping-stone to Tokyo to seize vital air fields.

ARMY YOUTH:

Policy Explained

With public interest centered in the use of 18-year-olds at the fronts, Secretary of War Henry Stimson declared that the urgent need of replacements dictated their dispatch to the war zones, but only after they had received intensive training both here and at overseas posts.

Originally, Stimson said, the army avoided using the youngest men by drawing upon older troops in divisions and replacing them with new inductees or returning vets. When overseas demands quickened, however, the army abandoned this policy for the use of more youthful troops conditioned by a program of rigorous training worked out as a result of experience over the last four years.

"Before any man is sent overseas," Stimson said, "he is submitted to a thorough test to assure that he has assimilated his training and is in fact prepared for combat duty."

ACCIDENTS HAPPEN

You have 1 chance in 14 of being injured in an accident during 1945! That's the mathematical probability advanced by the National Safety council for the occurrence of disabling injuries.

If you live on a farm, you're lucky! The farm is the safest place to live, the chance of injury being 1 in 18, while for non-farm people the chance is 1 in 13. Farm workers, however, have a 1 in 36 chance on the job, the council reported in its study.

As enemy troops surrender to Yanks, G.I. escorts German women over rubble of town reduced in great Allied drive.

EUROPE:

'Sad Sacks'

Captured by the U. S. 3rd army northeast of Bitburg, 59-year-old Lt. Gen. Edwin von Rothkirch und Trach, commander of the 53rd German army corps, was brought to the rear in a jeep.

Dejected and soured, his gray-green overcoat and black knee-length rubber boots caked with mud, the general wailed: "How can you expect to win a war when you have no gasoline and no horses? It will be all over within four months—five months at the most."

Even as the general spoke, four Allied armies were smashing the remnants of German forces west of the Rhine, to pull up to the 1,000 to 1,300 foot river on a broad front and poise for the first military crossing of the 50-foot deep waterway since Napoleon turned the trick in 1813.

As British and Canadian troops and the U. S. 9th and 1st armies smashed to the west bank of the Rhine to draw up opposite the vital Ruhr industrial valley, and as the U. S. 3rd army drove to the river farther to the south, they captured a motley collection of Nazis. Having again succeeded in withdrawing the bulk of his finest troops across the Rhine, cagey Field Marshal Von Rundstedt left beardless youth, paunchy middle-aged men and foreign recruits to cover up the retreat. Receiving little, if any, artillery or tank support, and sometimes even lacking small munitions, many of these troops surrendered after only brief skirmishing. Where the main bodies of the once - vaunted wehrmacht tried to get back to the river, however, the Allies faced lively opposition as the enemy tried to maintain an escape route.

Biggest city yet to fall into Allied hands, Cologne lay in rubble as Yanks drove into the shattered metropolis, reported 85 per cent in ruins as a result of concerted aerial bombardment since the spring of 1940. Once the fourth largest settlement of the Reich, it took on the aspect of a ghost city, with occasional civilians moving out with their belongings heaped on carts, or picking their way carefully down littered streets.

To Nazi propagandists, the Allied advance to the Rhine set the stage for the decisive action of the war within the coming months.

Eliminate Threat

Taking no chance of an attack on their flanks and a threat to the rear of their troops fighting before Berlin, the wily Red command moved to clean up the 200,000 Germans poised above Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army in Pomerania.

As the Reds thrust to the Baltic in this area and chewed up the German forces, they also moved on Stettin, Berlin's Oder river outlet to the Baltic. Straightening of the Russian lines in that region gave the Reds an almost solid front in eastern Germany clear down to the Lower Silesian industrial district, where the Nazis fought not only to protect their factories but also to bar the pathway to Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile, Allied aerial raids deep in the heart of Germany continued to aid the Russian advance. As a result of heavy bombardment, the important Saxon industrial center of Dresden, famed for its chinaware, reportedly lay in ruins. Symbolic stronghold of German resistance, Berlin also felt the sting of repeated air blows.

Nation's Hero Scroll

To Pfc. Wallace G. Drill of New Ulm, Minn., went the army's silver star. When the leader and assistant leader of his squad became casualties in Italy, he, a rifleman, reorganized the squad despite enemy shells that burst as close as 5 yards to him. Under aimed point-blank fire, he led his squad in a 250-yard flanking maneuver to a position close to 2 enemy machineguns, which were then wiped out.

DIPLOMACY:

Peace Plan

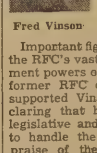
Because the employment of economic sanctions or force would require the full cooperation of the U. S., Britain, Russia, China and France to be effective, the unanimous vote of all five would be necessary to suppress an aggressor under machinery for a postwar peace organization worked out by the Big Three at Yalta. Meeting at San Francisco, April 25, 44 United Nations will consider final approval of the organization conceived at Dumbarton Oaks.

Approved at the insistence of Russia, the provision would give to any of the Big Five, as permanent members of the executive council of eleven, the right to pass upon the use of either economic or military measures against themselves in the event they were accused of trespassing upon their neighbors.

Before the question of economic or military sanctions arose, however, the executive council could consider charges of aggression against any major power without the latter's interference, and recommend procedure for peacefully settling the dispute.

New Doctrine

In what Sen. Tom Connally (Texas) called a new Monroe Doctrine backed by all of the Americas instead of just the U. S., 20 republics in the western hemisphere agreed to the mutual protection of frontiers and political independence in the postwar period.



Though enforcement of the principles was left to be geared to the machinery worked out at the United Nations' San Francisco parley, the agreement took effect immediately through President Roosevelt's war power to order U. S. troops anywhere needed to promote the Allies' cause.

Known as the Act of Chapultepec, the agreement climaxed the Pan-American conference at Mexico City, another highlight of which was the consideration of an economic charter calling for the development of freer trade and increased industrialization of South America in the postwar period.

RFC CHIEFTAIN:

Vinson Named

To 55-year-old Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson was scheduled to go the management of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and its numerous agencies following its divorcement from the department of commerce when President Roosevelt named Henry A. Wallace to head the latter.

Fred Vinson

Important figure in the fight to keep the RFC's vast lending and management powers out of Wallace's hands, former RFC chieftain Jesse Jones supported Vinson's nomination, declaring that he has had both the legislative and practical experience to handle the big agency. Jones' praise of the economic stabilizer and former congressman and judge was re-echoed in the senate by Democrats and Republicans alike.

Henry Wallace

Opposition to Wallace handling RFC funds centered in the belief that he would use the RFC's vast lending and plant management powers in a government program to provide postwar employment.

MINERS:

New Demands

With the government committed to the retention of the Little Steel formula limiting basic wage increases to 15 per cent of the January, 1941, level, and with his United Mine Workers already having received the allowable boost, John L. Lewis took a different tack in his negotiations with coal operators for a new contract.

Instead of coming out for flat wage increases, wily John L. called for so-called "fringe" allowances, representing pay adjustments for new working conditions. In this respect, the UMW chieftain asked for reinstitution of the seven hour day, with time and a half beyond that or 35 hours a week; 10 cents an hour more for the second shift and 15 cents for the third, and an increase in vacation pay from $50 to $100 in lieu of time off.

In addition, Lewis demanded a royalty of 10 cents on every ton of coal to build up a $50,000,000 medical and rehabilitation fund for UMW members and joint effort by the union and companies to eliminate substandard housing and sanitary conditions in some mining communities.

HOME CANNING

With sugar supplies showing the pinch of a long war, a tightened home canning sugar program for 1945 is in order to insure a fair distribution of sugar to those who actually need it for canning, and to avoid the over-issuance of home canning sugar which occurred last year, OPA announced.

This year sugar for home canning will be obtained by filling out provided application forms, with the allotment based on actual needs, it was reported.

THE LAW OF LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 25:31-46

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matthew 22:37-39.

Our lesson presents a great judgment scene—majestic, solemn, stirring. Many confuse it with the judgment of the Great White Throne in Revelation 20. But Matthew 25 is obviously the judgment of nations (v. 32) for their treatment of Christ's brethren (v. 40), a word referring primarily to Jews, but also spoken of in Matthew 12:48-50.

The lesson needs broader application, however, so we suggest that we allow the more general principles of judgment occupy our attention. We note that

I. Judgment Divides (vv. 31-33).

The nations, coming before Christ when He shall have appeared in all His glory, shall find themselves separated into two groups on the basis of their treatment of the brethren of Christ.

The fact that God has drawn a line of division down through all humanity and that each one of us is on one side or the other is not a doctrine which finds ready acceptance with modern thinking, but it is nonetheless a fact.

No man established that division—God Himself did it, and did it in love. To some it may seem to be a hard saying, but it is not, for it comes from the lips of the gentle, loving Jesus.

It is because He loved us enough to give Himself for us that any of us find ourselves on the side of that dividing line which assures us of eternal joy and blessedness.

They who stand on the other side of the line do so because they have not accepted God's proffered salvation in Christ. Reader, where do you stand?

II. Judgment Declares (vv. 34-45).

Our attitude toward God expresses itself in our attitude toward our fellow man. That which we do toward those about us is not a matter of indifference, but is the basis for God's judgment of our lives. Each of us must answer for the deeds done in the flesh whether they be good or evil. That is true even of the believer (II Cor. 5:10), whose salvation has already been determined by his faith in Christ.

Here in our lesson, however, the failure to do that which shows forth God's law of love is made the ground of eternal judgment. This is not because an act of kindness itself can be regarded as the ground of division, but because the failure to give it or do it reflects an attitude of heart toward our God and His Christ, which is in reality a rejection of His way of salvation.

Judgment is thus a revelation of the attitude of the heart, which marks a man or woman as being either saved or lost. It may be possible to so becloud the thinking of our friends and neighbors that we may go through life looking something like a Christian, but when Christ judges, it will all be revealed to us.

Notice the importance of a proper attitude toward those who need our kindness and help. All too often the only concern of men and women is to look out for "number one" and let the rest of the world shift for itself.

Observe also that the Lord identifies Himself with His brethren—what is done to and for them is counted as done to and for Him. Compare the experience of Samuel (I Sam. 8:7) and of Paul (Acts 9:5). Touch God's people and you touch Him. Fail them and you fail Him. Serve them and you serve Him.

III. Judgment Determines (v. 46).

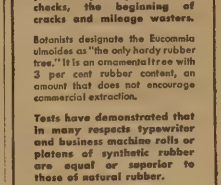
Yes, God's judgment determines eternal destiny. Life eternal, or everlasting punishment, which shall it be? That is determined by God's final word of judgment, but remember that He judges in accordance with the attitude of heart and action of life on this side of the grave.

Now, for that matter, is a part of eternity, and it is consequently of great importance that we are right with both God and man now if we expect to be right throughout eternity.

We need to face this truth of judgment with complete candor and honest heart-searching. We agree with Dr. Douglass that "we must stand with awful concern before this solemn truth. Do not hesitate to teach this because it is contrary to the current of modern thinking or shocking to confront. It needs to be faced in a brave spirit of realism. (As a teacher) you will do your pupils a great disservice if you try to shield them from the grim implications of this truth."

Yes, and also if you keep from them the glorious prospect of eternal joy in the presence of God. The law of life is the law of love—love for God, and for Jesus Christ whom He hath sent to be our Redeemer, and love for His brethren. That law of love rules even in the day of judgment.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER



Spare synthetic tires carried on vehicles should be protected against sun and weather. Synthetic casings are particularly subject to sun checks, the beginning of cracks and mileage wasters.

Botanists designate the Eucommia ulmoides as "the only hardy rubber tree." It is an ornamental tree with 3 per cent rubber content, an amount that does not encourage commercial extraction.

Tests have demonstrated that in many respects typewriter and business machine rolls or platens of synthetic rubber are equal or superior to those of natural rubber.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth, an M.P., was to be in charge of security. The Major set out immediately to win the friendship of the citizens, and to improve their living conditions. He determined to replace their bell, which the Germans had taken. Major Joppolo talked with Father Pensovecchio, the town's leading priest. He explained to the priest what he wanted to accomplish for the people of Adano, and secured the promise of the priest to call attention, at mass, to the posted civil instructions. The Major promised the priest that he would attend mass the next day.

CHAPTER IV

"You could have read the proclamations which our friends will post, Fatta. You would not have had anything to lean against while reading because the proclamations will be posted on the walls upon which you depend. The hour of the reading, that is to say about five o'clock, would have been bad for you, because it is the hour when you are overcome with energy and are able to lift a bottle of wine to your lips.

"But the others will read, Fatta. They will learn that the Americans are our friends. They will learn of the changes. They will know what to do. They will avoid the punishments. For them, Adano will be a new town, and life will be different. For you, it will be the same. You will do wrong, and you will be punished. Adano will still be a place of fear.

"Look at the lazy Fatta, people! Do not be like him. Read the proclamations. Acquaint yourself with the new Adano! I have cried."

And Mercurio Salvatore moved the drum around behind him and marched off to the several other places convenient for shouting, and in his own way he told the people about the changes which were to come.

Father Pensovecchio could not remember when so many people had come to the Church of San Angelo.

It was a pleasure, certainly it was a pleasure, to have so many come to the Church of San Angelo.

But now Father Pensovecchio had a thought which made him very uneasy. What if the Mister Major should not come? Think of the shame. Think of how the other priests would laugh. Think how this vanity, this large crowd, would complain. Think of how his own faithful would flock on later Sundays to the other churches. Think of preaching to empty pews.

It was already five minutes past seven. The senior acolyte had already whispered in his ear that it was time to begin the mass. And the Mister Major had not come.

The Mister Major, at that moment, was sitting in his office having a breakfast of fruit and discussing with Borth and with the usher Zito, who never went to church, the matter of the bell. Major Joppolo sat with his feet on the huge desk eating fruit, Borth sat on the end of the desk also eating, and the little Zito stood at attention in front of it, not eating but wishing he were.

In the Church of San Angelo, meanwhile, Father Pensovecchio was growing frantic. Most of the heads in his crowd, his lovely crowd, kept turning toward the door instead of facing the silver crucifix which survived the fire of 1553.

In his office Major Joppolo said: "They took the bell away on the fourteenth of June. That is a month less two days. That is not so much time. Considering how things are done in our Army, perhaps not much has been done with the bell. Where was it sent, Zito?"

Zito said: "To the provincial government at the town of Vicinamare."

Major Joppolo said: "Perhaps it got no farther. Perhaps the bell is still sitting in its crate in Vicinamare."

Zito grew excited; "Do you think that is possible?" he asked.

The Major said: "It is possible. We must find out."

And he took a piece of foolscap from his brief case and began a letter:

"To: Lt. Col. R. N. Sartorius, C.A.O., Vicinamare, Prov. of Vicinamare.

"From: Major V. Joppolo, C.A.O., Adano, Prov. of Vicinamare.

"Re: Bell belonging to town of Adano.

"Undersigned would very much appreciate your initiating investigation of records of provincial government of Vicinamare to see if you can trace. . . ."

The service in the Church of San Angelo was taking a most unusual course. Having completed the supplication, Father Pensovecchio started reciting the Litany of Saint Joseph. It was the longest litany he could think of offhand, and he repeated the words without any sense of their meaning.

"Joseph, most valiant, Joseph, most obedient, Joseph, most faithful, mirror of patience, lover of poverty, model of workmen, ornament of the domestic life, guardian of virgins, safeguard of families. . . ."

Suddenly Father Pensovecchio broke off. He had had an idea. He beckoned again to the senior acolyte and whispered in his ear: "Have old Guzzo ring the bell."

"Now, father?"

"Do as I say. Hurry."

And then the priest resumed in his hollow voice: ". . . consolation of the poor, hope of the sick, patron of the dying, terror of the demons."

And the people responded: "Pray for us."

The priest said: "Protector of the Holy Church."

The people were just in the middle of responding: "Pray for us," when they heard a stroke of the bell over their heads. Worship had to stop while the bell rang, for its vibrations shook the whole church.

In his office Major Joppolo blotted the letter and folded it.

Borth said: "What time is it?"

The Major looked at his wrist watch. "Seven twenty-six," he said.

Borth said in Italian: "Zito, if you are such an expert on bells, what is that one ringing for at seven twenty-six in the morning, and all alone?"

Zito said: "It is strange. That is a church bell. From the tone I would say it was the bell of San Angelo."

"San Angelo!" The Major jumped up. He said, "I promised the priest I would come. I got thinking about the old bell. Zito, show me the way. Run, Zito, this is terrible."

Zito darted out of the door, and the Major ran after him.

Three or four idlers, sitting in the morning sun, thought it was undignified of the new American Major to chase little Zito through the streets. If he wanted to punish Zito,

The Major ran after him.

why did he not send some of his military police after him? It did not suit his office to chase Zito himself, especially since it was unlikely that he would catch him.

The acolyte Ludovico, sitting on the steps of the Church, looked up in amazement at the little Italian being chased by the American officer. He wondered why the American was chasing the Italian. The pair had run right past Ludovico up the steps of the Church before it occurred to him that perhaps this was the American Major. He got up quickly and ran up the steps after the two of them, but he was too late; they were already inside the door.

The entire congregation stood up. The lazy Fatta even stopped leaning against the pillar. There was a considerable amount of murmuring, and as the Major walked up the aisle, puffing and wiping the sweat from his face, many people whispered: "Kiss your hand, kiss your hand."

As soon as he saw a pew that was not too crowded, Major Joppolo genuflected and slid into it. Zito imitated him and squeezed into the same pew, which was too crowded then.

The congregation seated itself. Father Pensovecchio cleared his throat. His confidence, which had very nearly left him, was now very much in evidence. He had his crowd and he had his Major.

Major Joppolo couldn't help noticing two heads in the pew right in front of him. One was the head of a man, and it was bald. The other was the head of a woman, and it was blonde.

By tilting his head a very little bit, Major Joppolo was able to find out that the bald head belonged to his interpreter, Giuseppe. He was not able, by tilting, to see the face of the blonde head, but he could see that the hair was arranged fastidiously, with no loose strands.

"If you remember," said the priest, "we were told that Americans attacked priests and attacked and killed women, and were all Protestants. But right here now is an American of Italian descent who is attending mass, and is just as reverent as you are toward the Church of San Angelo. He is a very busy man. He is so busy that he had to run all the way to church, and even then was somewhat late. But we are very glad to have him here." Father Pensovecchio spoke with feeling. "We are glad that he is one of us. Because of this man, I believe that the Americans are my friends. You must believe the same thing, my children."

Major Joppolo noticed that the skin of the neck below the blonde hair, though clean, was quite dark, and he wondered whether the hair was naturally blonde. He wondered about this off and on during the mass which followed.

After mass he left quickly, to avoid the embarrassment he knew would result from mingling too much with the crowd. He took time only to tell Giuseppe that he had a little interpreting for him to do that afternoon, and to look into the face of the blonde.

On the fifth day of the invasion a babel stood in line in front of the shop of the baker Zapulla. There were many women, mostly dressed in black, and a few men. They talked in loud voices, each clamoring for an audience.

"He has a furious energy," said Maria Carolina the wife of the noisy cartman Afronti. "He told small Zito to report for work at seven each morning. Zito thought that no official would be up that early. Zito went to work at seven and a half, and the Mister Major told him that there would be a new usher unless the old usher could wake up on time in the morning."

Carmelina, the wife of the lazy Fatta, who was at the head of the line, said loudly: "It would be pleasing if Zapulla the baker got up on time in the morning so that the bread would be ready."

Zapulla the baker, black with the wood coke of his oven, came out to the front of the shop and roared: "Zapulla the baker has been up since four in the morning. If Zapulla the baker hears remarks, he is liable to go back to bed and let the bread burn up."

"Do you remember," said Margherita the fat Craxi's formidable wife, "do you remember how the Mayor Nasta used to hold office hours from noon until one, each day, the hour when we were all busy with our children? And how we had to apply in writing to see him? And how we had to wait ten days? And how he would treat us when we did see him? Now it is different. You can walk in any time all day." She paused. "He stands up when you enter," she said impressively.

"Is that so?" said Laura Sofia, who was not the wife of anyone and at her age was not likely to be ever. "I think I shall go and see him."

"On what pretext?" jibed Maria Carolina, wife of the noisy cartman Afronti. "To make eyes at him?"

"Oh," said Laura Sofia, "I have my complaints, just like the rest of you—even if I haven't litters of children grunting like pigs on my floor."

Carmelina, wife of the lazy Fatta, said: "My children are hungry. It would be nice if they could get their bread on time."

From the depths of his shop Zapulla the baker shouted: "The children of certain people may stay hungry if certain people do not hold their tongues."

Mercurio Salvatore, crier of the town of Adano, was near the end of the line, but even though he toned his voice down to his conversational whisper, the whole line could hear him when he said: "I wish to tell you something. I asked him if I could listen to my radio.

"He said: 'Why not, crier?'

"I asked him what station I would be permitted to listen to. I asked: 'Should it be the Radio of Algiers, or should it be the Radio of London which is called B.B.C.?'

"He said: 'Reception here is best for Radio Roma. Why don't you listen to the one you can hear the best?'

"I said: 'Can you mean it? Radio Roma is anti-American. It has nothing but slander for the Americans.'

"And he said to me: 'Crier, I love the truth, and I want you to love it too. You listen to Radio Roma. You will hear that it is three fourths lies. I want you to judge for yourself and to want the truth. Then perhaps you will want to listen to the other broadcasts which you cannot hear quite so clearly.'"

Margherita, the formidable wife of Craxi, said: "Have you listened, crier?"

Mercurio Salvatore said: "I have listened. I could detect only one lie yesterday, but it was a big one. Radio Roma said that Italian forces in the city of Vicinamare threw back three vicious Allied attacks. We all knew that Vicinamare was in the hands of the Americans late on the first day of the disembarkation."

Carmelina the wife of the lazy Fatta said: "It will be late on the fifth day before we get bread from this baker Zapulla."

Zapulla was impolite to Carmelina because of what she said. He came forward and threw a piece of woodcoke at her head and roared: "Silence!"

The woodcoke missed Carmelina's head, but hit the stomach of the formidable Margherita. She advanced, shaking her large fists. Zapulla went back to his ovens, as if he had not noticed where his woodcoke went.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Funny things happen to folks. Last week a man walked up to another on the corner at Upchurch Drug Store and greeted him with, "Tell you what I'll do. You know that building that you are contemplating renting and have first choice on? Well, I'll give you a ten dollar bill to release the owner of his promise, so he will rent it to me." This the fellow readily did. He took the ten dollars and pocketed it. Here's the pay off: The fellow who was going to rent the building had decided it wasn't what he wanted [illegible] someone to take the place in his stead. But, as he mentioned later, ten dollars is TEN DOLLARS.

Did you notice how fast the Volunteer Fire Department got out with their truck last Friday when there was a fire out the Birmingham Highway? Well, this is the reason: Two of our fair ladies were coming in the direction of town when they saw a telephone or electric light pole blazing big. They stopped at the News office and asked us to turn in the alarm. We called Central and told her to turn in the fire alarm. She didn't know what to do. After several minutes of waiting we asked her to give us Gene Gore's Plumbing Shop. We told Gene he trouble and he said to call Burdett's Service Station. In the meantime, Gene was getting his gang together and running for the Fire Hall. We called the Service Station and had them sound the alarm. By this time the Fire Truck was on its way to the fire and in a very short time had everything under control. By the time we got an alarm sounded, North Clanton could have burned

First Lt. Woody R. Klinner, son of Mr and Mrs Coy J. Klinner, Route 2, Maplesville, has reported to Randolph Field's Central Instructors School to master the art of teaching others the lessons learned in combat.

Lt. Klinner flew 44 missions in the European theatre of operations.

Upon completion of the intensive four week instructorship course, he will go to one of the AAF Training Command advanced single-engine flying schools to instruct cadets in the final phase of their quest for wings.

Cecil D. Blackmon, 33, is now receiving his initial Naval indoctrination at the U. S. Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

Upon completion of this course of training the seaman will receive a period of leave which he will spend with his wife, Mrs. Marjorie Blackmon of Route 2, Clanton.

Pvt. Willie T. Vines, has returned from overseas, where he was seriously wounded and is in the Lawson General Hospital in Atlanta. Pvt. Vines wants all his friends to write him at this address. Pvt. Willie T. Vines, 34801833, Lawson General Hospital, Ward 20-C, Atlanta, Ga.

Pfc. Clyde D. Wright, infantryman serving in the 43rd Infantry Division in the campaign to liberate Luzon, has been through all types of fighting in his 30 months overseas. He assisted in fighting of Japs in the battle of Guadalcanal, New Guinea and New Georgia. Now he is doing a good job in helping blast the Japs out of the jagged hills of northern Luzon.

Pfc. Wright is the son of Mr. and Mrs Louis Wright, of this city.

Lewe F. Roberson of Jemison, Ala., has been promoted to Corp. at Bergstrom Field, I, Troop Carrier Command base near Austin, Texas.

Cpl. Roberson is the son of Mrs. J. C. Fulmer, Route Two, Jemison, Ala.

Thadius C. McSwain, 18, son of Mrs. Sidney McSwain, 406 North 7th, Street, is now receiving his initial Naval indoctrination at the Naval Training Cehter at Great Lakes, Ill.

If this Thadeus (Thad) C. McSwain is the same Thad we went to school with a couple of years ago, and we're sure he is, well, Uncle Sam will surely profit by having him on his force. Yes, that Thad was a very smart fellow, and I think he will make just as good a sailor as he did a student at C. C. H. S.

A. M. M. 2-C Douglas Henley has returned from eleven months overseas and is spending a 30-day leave here with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. C. Henley.

Douglas tells of some hair-raising experiences while overseas and on his way home also. We are very happy that he is back in the states and wish for him much luck in the future.

Pfc. Harvey O. Price, truck driver, William A. Wright, supply man both from this city, and Charlie C. Turner, carpenter, from Billingsley, are all in the 31st. Infantry Division quartermaster company which has been awarded the Moritorious Service Unit Plague for outstanding devotion to duty in the operation of all classes of supply dumps under combat conditions.

Sgt. George W. Gibbons of Thorsby, has arrived at the Northington General Hospital from Camp Claiborne, La.

The News staff sincerely wishes Sgt. Gibbons a quick recovery to good health.

Cpl. James Howard Minor from Miami, Fla., is spending a 14-day furlough in Thorsby and Clanton. Just talking to Howard, one soon gets the impression that he doesn't like Miami In fact he doesn't mind admitting that it would suit him fine, if they gave Florida back to the Indians, but really we don't think he would feel that way, if he could be sent back to Wisconsin where he just came from a few months ago.

Marine Sgt. Charles L. Avinger, 22, son of Mr and Mrs Charles E. Avinger, of Verbena, is on furlough following his return from the Pacific where he was a plane captain with a fighter squadron of the Fourth Marine Air Wing, based in the New Hebrides and Marianas Islands.

Pfc. Barnes (Boonty) Plyler, son of Mr and Mrs B. R. Plyler, has returned from overseas where he was wounded twice, and received the purple heart. Pfc. Plyler will spend 30 days here with his parents.

AWARDED AIR MEDAL

The following letter was received recently by Mrs. Myrtle A. Bazzel of Clanton, concerning the courageous services of her son, Captain Thomas A. Bazzel, who is in the Southwest Pacific Area:

March 3, 1945.

Dear Mrs. Bazzel:

Recently your son, Captain Thomas R. Bazzel, was decorated with the Air Medal. It was an award made in recognition of courageous service to his combat organization, his fellow American airmen, his Country, his home and to you.

He was cited for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flights in the Southwest Pacific Area from September 23, 1944 to December 17, 1944.

Your son took part in sustained operational flight missions during which hostile contact was probable and expected. These flights included bombing missions against enemy installations, shipping and supply bases, and aided considerably in the recent successes in this theatre.

Almost every hour of every day your son, and the sons of other American mothers, are doing just such things as that here in the Southwest Pacific.

Theirs is a very real and very tangible contribution to victory and to I would like to tell you how genuinely proud I am to have men such as your son, in my command, and how gratified I am to know that young Americans with such courage and resourcefulness are fighting our country's battle against the aggressor nations.

You, Mrs. Bazzel, have every reason to share that pride and gratification.

Sincerely,

GEORGE C. KENNEY,
Lieut.-Gen., U.S.A. Commander.

Kathleen Norris Says:

What About Babies in War Time?

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"The trouble is that John is most anxious for a child, and I am unwilling to assume that responsibility until after the war."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"WILL you please settle a question for my husband and me?" writes Donna Barton, from Pasadena. "I am 22. John is 27; we have been happily married for a year and a half, during which time my sailor-husband has been twice to the South seas and back. Ours is an unusual devotion; we have no families, we live for each other.

"The trouble is that John is most anxious for a child, and I am unwilling to assume that responsibility until after the war. When peace comes he will still have another year in medical school and the usual intern years to face, and I am earning good money as teacher in a private school, and saving for his education. We are young, and I believe we may reasonably look forward to long years ahead, when conditions will be more normal, life less of a strain and everything easier on us all.

"This is the first difference that has arisen between us. For awhile I managed to treat it as a sort of joke; then I dropped the subject completely, but now he is continually bringing it up. The probability is that he will soon go away again, for the dangerous duties of a destroyer's existence, and he says he would love to feel that a baby as well as a wife was waiting for him at home. Please tell me—I have no mother—if you agree with him. Of course, I would adore my baby. It would break my heart not to have children someday, but I can't face it now. John did not say he would abide by your advice, but he admitted that it would influence him. "Mother," concludes this letter, "sometimes used to read your articles aloud to us at the Sunday breakfast table when I wasn't more than 10 years old, so please regard me as a sort of grandchild and tell me if I am making a mistake."

No, I don't think you are making a mistake, Donna, I think you are acting wisely—that is, may I add parenthetically, if you are using only those precautions against motherhood that are recognized as legitimate, and I am sure you are.

'Normalizing' War.

What John is trying to do is what so many young men and women are rebelliously trying to do in these dark times; he is trying to normalize war. It cannot be done. War is like a high fever, sweeping over the world, and persons or worlds in a high fever must have very careful and special treatment; everyone of us must make sacrifices and face changes heroically, if we are to get through this thing, and John's and your sacrifice must be made in waiting for the richness and glory of parenthood.

You cannot manage your job and your baby, which means financial stringency for all three of you. The entire responsibility for the baby would be yours, without husband or mother or sister to advise you and that is a nervous strain to which he has no right to expose you. His visits home will be brief for the next few years, and far apart, he will hardly know his child. He may not return, in which case your baby will be exposed to two possibilities, both unfair to babyhood. One is that you will become one of those doting mothers who are absorbed in a child, spoiling that child and living for him, and eventually breaking your heart when he grows away from your influence. The other is the more usual one of your remarrying presently, and giving him a stepfather.

Only a husband of superhuman goodness and generosity will share the raptures of young married life with a small stepson; the child's demands and needs will be continually getting in the way of the new husband's natural claims. No matter how eagerly he agrees to wear and tear of married life will wipe away every memory of them, and once you begin the "you promised" and "you said" and "I always understood" sort of conversation your marriage is doomed.

Difficult Adjustment.

The adjustments between children and step-parents is a real problem today, with wartime divorces almost equaling marriages in number. In a case that recently came to my attention the little daughter of the first marriage, a child of six, had never slept away from her mother before. When she found her place taken by a strange man, and herself expected to call him "Daddy," the child went into a psychological state very hard to handle and eventually had to be moved to the custody of strangers. It was of this child that I once asked the stepfather: "Margot giving any trouble?" "Nothing that couldn't be whipped out of her," he said briefly. He was a clever man and known as a "good fellow," but he couldn't love another man's child.

Hard and cruel as it may sound, John must consider now the possibility that another man will have the raising of this son he so much wants. If he does that seriously, and with prayer, I think he will see that it is fairer to all concerned to leave Donna with as little responsibility as possible, to leave her, in short, in a free and mobile condition, so that there will be no feeling of regret if she is widowed, or if he comes home injured, or if all goes well and he returns to qualify for his profession and to build that baby-filled home of which they dream. These times are indeed out of joint. Extraordinary valor is demanded of every one of us if we are to win our way through them to something better.

"Couldn't love another man's child."

BETTER TO WAIT

There's no use trying to pretend that these are normal times, or that the usual customs can prevail in the midst of a great war. Miss Norris tells a young wife that her husband is wrong to want a baby now, while he is away at sea, in constant peril. If he dies, his child will be left without the protection and care of a father.

Donna would like a child as much as John, but she realizes that she would have to hold her job and care for her baby at the same time—an almost impossible burden. John is stationed on a destroyer. His life may end at any moment, and then the whole responsibility of supporting and rearing their child would fall on Donna. If she remarried, she would face the likelihood that her second husband would not be able to love another man's child, and the resulting domestic tension would wreck any chance of enduring happiness.

CONSERVING VITAMINS

Fresh raw vegetables are rich in vitamins and minerals. Unfortunately, however, some vitamins are lost unless carefully cooked. We need to protect them from contact with air as much as possible. Therefore cover utensils, and don't stir while cooking. Naturally a covered utensil will continue to steam on a much lower heat than an open one, so foods are actually cooked in steam when you follow the "little water, tight cover rule." That saves both fuel and food value.

By PAUL MALLON

STRONG LEADERSHIP MUST ARISE AT CAPITOL

PALM BEACH, FLA. — A lawyer-business man, who is a government official, listened to a group of the learned and wise among his associates, discussing whether Stalin won the Livadia conference, whether leftist totalitarianism (quasi communism) will sweep Europe, what our own postwar future is, for more than an hour before he broke in to say.

"I think communism or some similar disintegration of our system is ahead of this country in the next 50 years. But I think it is coming, not because of Stalin, but because of our own foolishness. We have not met our problems wisely and soundly. We are not doing that today.

"It is inevitable, furthermore, that our people will soon sweep aside this coming communism in whatever form it takes, as soon as they experience it. They do not want it. They will fight to get out of it, and to restore soundness in values—all values—money, morals, religion, literature, art, economics. They will return to common sense for many generations thereafter."

No one present disagreed. A religious leader noted the same symptoms in his line of work as the banker found in his. On the religious side, the decline of popular faith in soundness of moral values was evident—a disinclination toward common practices which make for health, happiness and permanency.

The banker noted that the American Bankers association does not oppose the side of the Bretton Woods agreement which proposes giving money away for rebuilding the world, but only the foreign exchange part. Even bankers have become so confused and disillusioned they no longer think it unsound to give money away the people's money in the federal treasury.

Mr. Roosevelt currently wants the Johnson act repealed, so that restriction may be removed against giving the people's money to nations which have not seriously tried to repay us from the last war. Last time the bankers made these loans and the individual investors lost. Now all seem to think it will be an improvement to give the money out of our treasury and make all the people losers. Truly this represents disillusionment in finance.

Medical Faults.

I have found doctors and nurses so disillusioned by wrongs they see in medicine that they are coming to welcome socialized medicine, even though they know it means that communal system will cause the end of all except the purest scientific ambition in medicine, that doctors will have to become politicians to get ahead in their profession and seek salaries and appointments through the political mill in Washington to the destruction of the best ideals of their profession, and to the worst interests of the common man, the patient.

I found abused religious and race classes of our people desiring to tear down our civilization, thinking thereby their condition would be improved, not realizing that with all its defects it has afforded them the best haven their people ever had in all the history of the world, better than any other nation affords them today or any nation will afford them in postwar.

Attack Problems.

Here we are then—the youth, the serviceman and their families suffering confusion and lack of hope along with the doctor, the nurse, the worker, the religious man, the business man, the banker.

What are we going to do about it? Sit around and await the fulfillment of this mass of discouragement?

No well ordered nation would. The problems must be attacked and solved. Confidence in our future must be restored.

This nation was even more discouraged 12 years ago at this very time. A fresh, brash president—this same Mr. Roosevelt—arose on the capitol steps and said there was nothing to fear but fear.

He thought he could do the job and he did enough of it to get the country out of the basement, and would have done more if he had not started playing around politically, packing the Supreme court with incompetents and leading class warfare for political purposes.

But behind him there must be built up in this country a popular following for what everyone who can think realizes is simple common justice and soundness. Sounder leadership must rise to the top in all classes to promote the things we know to be good, to make class surliness, hatred and greed less popular, less condoned, to promote a national teamwork out of our foolish strifes.

A leadership inspiring confidence in postwar reconversion must be established in Washington—a leadership for the good of the country.

Yanks Fight Way Down Fairy-Like Moselle Valley

Patton's Troops Push Along Old Roman Pathways in Land of Forest, Lake and Ancient Turreted Castles.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

American history, I believe, has begun to repeat itself as the Allies start to write the last chapter of the European war.

By the time this is in print I hope General Patton's boys (the Third army), pushing down the winding valley of the Moselle river, have captured or at least invested Trier, key city of the defenses of the Eifel. As they progress across those ancient highways or down the deep valley of the twisting Moselle river, where Roman legions, equally as homesick, once marched in the opposite direction, they will be retraining the steps of the victorious American army which moved eastward to the Rhine in the last war. Then as now, it was the American Third army which occupied the ancient city of Trier at the close of 1918. It left in 1923.

I may be wrong in my premonition, but I believe that this approach to the Rhine, which only an American army ever used to enter Germany as victors, will be the thoroughfare of the victors of 1945.

This country of the "Eifel," north of the Moselle and west of the Rhine, is of particular interest to me for I have invaded it twice, peacefully to be sure; both times before World War I.

Secluded Villages Sprinkle Countryside

The Eifel is a stretch of terrain of volcanic origin, of some bare and bleak hills and some tiny, secluded villages. It is also a country of towns on beautiful lakes and rivers, in valleys with the terraced "morningside" (where the sun touches first) on which vineyards have grown since the Romans first planted them in the early centuries before Christ.

Part of the Eifel was "remote" even when I visited it. On the modern highways, many of which follow the old Roman routes, there were resorts favored by tourists. But there were lonely villages which breathed an age forgotten by the "modern" Germany of 1912 when I first saw them. There were tall crags crowned by the ruins of medieval monasteries and castles, there were quaint and comfortable inns, there were meandering mountain paths, walled by thick fir trees beneath which I slept in my "lodenfabrik" cape, resting on a thousand year old mattress of pine-needles, dreaming of goblins and kobolds.

In a moment I'll take you up to see an enchanted castle that might have come straight out of a Maxfield Parrish painting or an illustration from Grimm or Anderson.

But now, let's get back to March, 1945.

As this is written the fighting has been along the western rim of the Eifel, which is really the western rim of the German frontier from south of the River Roer to the city of Trier. Trier is 69 miles from Coblenz on the Rhine.

The fighting has consisted of the parallel advance of columns along a 50-mile wide front. Patrols first move into the hills overlooking the valley villages. They secure the high points so their artillery can dominate the valleys, up which the infantry advances on the villages which are its objectives, protected by the artillery in the hills.

It must be remembered that all along the German frontier stretches the Siegfried line. Therefore, the Americans have to advance against its fortifications and will have to do so perhaps halfway to the Rhine. This means that pillboxes and other fortifications have to be taken as the Americans advance.

Tanks cannot be used in this rough country. It is the old-fashioned, catch-as-catch-can fighting, with rifles, grenades, dynamite, flamethrowers and hand grenades.

Rugged Terrain Calls For Close-Up Battle

In these early stages of the American push the fighting has been in sharp contrast to the first army's move along the Roer river toward and into the Cologne plain. Once the Roer was bridged and tanks could cross, armor could come to the aid of the doughboys who were scrapping it out in the villages and towns where each house was a fort. On the flat plain the use of armor is an advantage, but in hilly country, once possession of the heights is gained, artillery can dominate the objectives below toward which the foot-soldiers are moving.

There are plains in the Eifel, too, but it would seem that the chief arteries of advance would be along the valleys and the roads the Romans once used in their advance in the opposite direction.

It was westward, the course of Caesar moved when he conquered the Treveri, the tribe from which Trier (Treves in French) gets its name. The Roman legions marched in 56 B. C. By 14 B. C. they were fortifying Trier. Today the famous, blackened height of the Porta Negri, the city's Roman gateway, has been bastioned with modern fortifications. The ancient brick basilica in the town and the renaissance fountain (Petersbrunnen) will be remembered by thousands of American veterans of the last war. Trier, seat of the electorate, became a center of monastic learning in the Middle ages.

Let us hope some of the landmarks will be preserved and when our bombers smash the bridge across the Moselle, the ancient buttresses remain intact as they have these two thousand years. Perhaps they won't have to be bombed, but rather the destruction of buttresses than one American life. Remember what Bismarck (of all people) once said of a piece of foreign soil? A square foot of it was not worth the bones of a single Pomeranian Grenadier.

In the hope that our men can march the rest of the valley unmolested as their fathers did, let's turn up the valley where the Eltz river pours into the Moselle, not far from the Rhine.

(I quote from my diary, April 2, 1912.)

"We started out on foot, the only means of locomotion . . . the old village with its plaster houses, the crooked, cobbled street, the old trees and the church, older than the trees . . . along the meadows, past the mill and across the stream and the huddle of houses which cluster about it, up the enchanting valley wooded with beech and birch, the hurrying Eltz below, and the green meadows, underfoot the brown leaves that fell last fall and will lie like those beneath them undisturbed until the ones still green cover them. Down a dip in the path and across a stream until the somber ruins of 'Trotz Eltz' appear. (Trotz means against.) It is the relic of a fruitless effort to destroy the real castle of Eltz below. Moat, tower and buttress were built with the sole purpose of destroying a rival, (just as the modern artillerist seeks to take the height to destroy those below).

"Then up the path until suddenly, as if the ascent were planned by the architect who built the poem in stone below, the fairy castle of Burg Eltz, turret and tower, pinnacle, portal and drawbridge appear."

That is the end of the quote, as we say on the radio. May it be the beginning of new dreams of a more glorious world, of which some day the valley of the Moselle will be a part.

The deaths of many semi-prominent Nazis, notices of which are appearing in the German papers (one man died at two different places on two different dates) are taken to mean that the alleged late and unlamented gentlemen have either escaped to neutral countries with a new identity or have become someone else at home.

However, it is also pointed out by persons familiar with conditions in Germany that it is highly probable that a number of real deaths which are unreported are likewise taking place. In the first place, the concentrated Allied bombing on localities where high officials congregate (Berchtesgaden and Nuernburg) is bound to catch somebody some time. In addition, various "inside jobs" are probably getting rid of a number of persons.

Explosive Ben Marsh, secretary of the radical People's lobby, calls the Yalta conference "a compromise with intelligence" and says that "only ignoramuses of the New Deal and the Old Deal can see much but a threat of World War III in its encyclical." Turn Your Tin Cans Into Handy Footstool

THE "sitting room" of two generations ago was cozy and planned for use. Not the least of its comforts were the low footstools to be used with the most frequented chairs. These were covered with bright carpet or other heavy material and, if you examined them, you found that inside there were cans filled with sand for weight and then bound together and padded.

Such a stool cost not a cent. Nor did it require any carpenter work. Mother or the girls could put one together in no time from things on hand and there it was ready for years of service. You can do the same. The diagrams in this sketch show exactly how to go about it.

NOTE—This footstool is from BOOK 3 of the series offered with these articles. This book also contains more than 30 other things to make for your home from odds and ends plus inexpensive new materials. Booklets are 15 cents each postpaid and requests should be sent to:

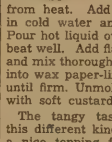
Prune Fluff Is a Sugar-Easy Dessert
(See Recipe Below)

Dessert Answers

As the frosty winter melts and soft spring breezes gradually take its place, our thoughts turn to less hearty desserts. First and foremost on our minds is the sugar problem and how we can skirt around it.

There are many helps available today. Although sugar is not available in the quantity in which we'd like it, then, at least, substitutes are plentiful—corn syrups and honey among them.



You can use both fresh and dried fruits which are high in natural sweetness. You can use prepared puddings, prepared cake mixes and flavored gelatin desserts which will not take even a teaspoonful of sugar.

Our star of the column today is Prune Fluff which may be prepared in a loaf pan and served with custard sauce to substitute for whipped cream.

Prune Fluff.
(Serves 12)

1½ cups cooked prunes
½ cup liquid drained from prunes
½ cup sugar
4 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon plain gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
5 egg whites
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Soft custard sauce

Remove pits from prunes and beat prunes through a pulp. Combine the prune liquid, sugar and lemon juice, spice and salt in saucepan and bring to a boil. Continue boiling two minutes. Remove from heat. Add gelatin moistened in cold water and stir to dissolve. Pour hot liquid over egg whites and beat well. Add flavoring and prunes and mix thoroughly but lightly. Pour into wax paper-lined mold and chill until firm. Unmold and slice. Serve with soft custard sauce.

The tangy taste of oranges in this different kind of "fluff" makes a nice topping for hot, spicy gingerbread:

Orange Fluff.
(For gingerbread)

1 tablespoon flour
1½ tablespoons sugar
Few grains of salt
1 egg yolk
½ cup orange juice
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
1 egg white

Mix flour, sugar and salt. Beat egg yolk; add to first mixture. Blend in orange juice and mix well. Add rind. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly. Cover; cook 10 minutes. Chill. Beat egg white stiff and fold in. Serve at once.

Lynn Says:

Kitchen Tips: To shine your stove, rub waxed paper over it after cleaning. This will also keep it from getting rusty.

To clean brass pipes and fixtures, rub with half a lemon, rinse with boiling water and rub dry.

To pick up tiny slivers of glass which may have broken on the floor, moisten a piece of absorbent cotton and wipe over the slivers. This will pick them up and prevent cutting your fingers.

To unloosen stubborn bottle caps, knock on floor on each side of cap and screw loose. For stubborn cases, let hot water run over cap before knocking against floor.

To make cut glass retain its brilliancy, rub with a piece of lemon, then rinse and rub dry with lintless towel.

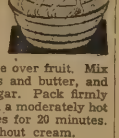
Here's a gingerbread that takes honors because it uses little of our precious sugar and still is satisfactory from the standpoint of sweetness. Use stewed pears, apricots, apples or nectarines over the top.

Gingerbread Upside Down Cake.

¼ cup shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
¾ cup molasses
¾ cup milk
2 cups sifted flour
¾ teaspoon ginger
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon salt

Cream shortening. Add sugar gradually. Add egg and beat well. Stir molasses into milk. Sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately with molasses mixture. Mix until smooth. Prepare square pan as follows:

¼ cup molasses
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
1 cup sliced fruit



Melt butter in square pan then add molasses and arrange fruit in it in a decorative pattern. Pour gingerbread batter over fruit and bake in a moderately hot (350-degree) oven 45 to 60 minutes. Turn upside down.

The dried fruits may be used in this delicious crispy dessert. Or, if you want to use canned fruits or fresh apples or pears, the choice will be a good one:

Fruit Crunch.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups peaches, apricots, pears or apples
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups lightly crushed cornflakes
3 tablespoons melted butter or substitute
2½ tablespoons brown sugar

Soak dried fruit and then cook until tender. Drain. Fresh fruit need only be peeled and cored. Place in a shallow baking dish which has been well greased. Mix together lemon rind, ¼ cup brown sugar, and cinnamon. Sprinkle over fruit. Mix together cornflakes and butter, and add remaining sugar. Pack firmly over fruit. Bake in a moderately hot oven at 400 degrees for 20 minutes. Serve with or without cream.

Hot Apple Dessert.
(Serves 6)

6 apples
½ cup seeded raisins
½ cup sugar
20 marshmallows

Pare, quarter and slice apples. Place in greased pudding dish in layers with raisins and sugar. Cover and bake until apples are tender. Remove cover when apples are done and cover with marshmallows and then brown in hot oven. Serve at once.

Rice-Orange Pudding.
(Serves 4)

2 cups cooked rice
½ cup dark corn syrup
½ cup orange juice
1½ cups orange sections

Combine syrup and orange juice. Bring to a boil and boil 5 minutes, then add orange sections. Reheat and add rice. Chill well before serving.

OTHERS IMITATE—

But There's Only ONE GROUND GRIP TRACTOR TIRE...

Firestone

YEARS of time and experience prove that Firestone Ground Grip tractor tires outpull any other tractor tires in any soil condition any time, anywhere. Obviously, others would like to duplicate the Firestone Ground Grip design but they can only imitate it . . . because the Ground Grip design is patented.

Put your tractor on Firestone Ground Grip tires and get up to 16% extra pull at the drawbar. The patented Ground Grip tread has up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor. No wonder it pulls better. It has no broken center tread bars. That means no traction leaks. It has no trash-catching bar stubs. Of course, it cleans better.

Be sure you get patented Firestone Ground Grip tractor tires. Don't compromise with imitations.

For the best in music, listen to the "Voice of Firestone" with Richard Crooks and Gladys Swarthout and the Firestone Symphony Orchestra conducted by Howard Barlow every Monday evening over NBC network.

Enterprise played Verbena B Team March 9th The score was 24-13 in favor of Enterprise. The outside team of Enterprise played Verbena A Team. Verbena won by a large score.

The Fourth grade had charge of Chapel Friday. Under the direction of Mrs. Pitts. They gave a playlet on Education entitled "What Hartwell Learned".

The Home Ec Girls are making splendid progress in cooking. They are learning to make simple, delicious meals.

The Home Economics girls are also re-cataloguing the books in the Library. We hope Enterprise continues a fair attendance in spite of the need of workers on the farm.—Evelyn Johnson, Reporter, Eighth Grade.

FARMERS UNION COOPERATIVE — CLANTON

The group studying Cooperatives will meet on the first and third Mondays of each month at seven thirty in the evening. Monday has been selected because the regular meeting on the Cooperative Board comes on the first Monday of each week. All members of the Cooperative are invited to take part in these meetings which are varied by games, songs, pictures or refreshments.

The Credit Union membership is growing and will organize when the number gets above fifty.

MORE REVENUE COLLECTED

The State Department of Revenue has collected $20,891,475 in the five months since this fiscal year began, an increase of $1,669,000 over 1943-4, the previous record period. General sales and use taxes represent the chief gains. Tobacco tax is losing on account of the prevailing shortage of cigarettes.

Mayor Thompson Urges Women Aid In WAC Enlistments

General Marshall, Chief of Staff, has called upon the Governors of all states to encourage women to enlist to help care for our wounded men. The wounded are being returned to our shores at the alarming rate of more than 1100 a day. There are not enough nurses to care for them.

A new plan has been set up by the Women's Army Corps and the Medical Department of the Army to train the enlistees to assist the doctors and nurses in the care of the wounded. The course is given in 14 and one-half weeks.

Wives of men in service who wish to enlist are promised by the Army that they will be released when their husbands are dismissed from service.

The women must be between the ages of 20-49 inclusive, have 2 years of High School, or equivalent. and have no dependents under 14 years of age. They enlist as members of WAC General Hospital Companies. They may enlist singly or in groups and will upon request be assigned to hospitals near home.

Alabama women have responded in proud numbers to this call of their wounded brothers but the Government needs 8,000 women at once to enroll in this work of mercy. As your mayor, I urge you, if you are eligible, to send your name to the Recruiting Station at 308 Bell Building, Montgomery. A member of the Army will then call upon you to explain all details and give you any further information you may wish.

Women of Clanton, you won't let your wounded brothers down, will you! F. LEO THOMPSON, Mayor.

Isabella News

There was a very good attendance at both services Sunday at Mulberry, and the program put on by the Intermediate Department was good and enjoyed by all present.

Mulberry church members are very proud of our two new flags, U. S. and Christian flags, presented to us by Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Farmer of Titus recently.

Service at Isabella Sunday afternoon was very well attended, and a fine message brought by the pastor.

The play put on by the Senior II class at Isabella Friday night was enjoyed by a large crowd. Each one taking part rally acted their part well.

Miss orene Lecroy of Gadsden spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lecroy, and other relatives here recently.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Tucker and daughters, Mrs. J. W. McClane and Mrs. Forney Comeo of Birmingham; Mrs. C. T. Farmer and children of Titus, spent the week end with their mother and grandmother. Mrs. D. D. Manning, recently.

Y.W.A. MET

The Y.W.A. of the First Baptist Church in Clanton, met last Monday night at the church. The meeting was opened by the hymn, "America, The Beautiful." Following was a scripture reading by Mrs. Zora Smith. Another hymn, which we all love, was sung by Doris and Dorothy Bossinger. "An Evening Prayer." The program then came as follows: "A Call to Look and Pray," by Miss Marguerite Perry; "Looking at Home Mission Problems," by Alene Johnson; "Through the Chaplain," by Sara Alice Rasberry; and "Realities of Answered Prayers," by Sara Dean Smith. A report on the visits made by the Y.W.A. was made by Dorothy Bossinger.

This meeting was especially for the Week of Prayer for Home Missions. Very nice refreshments were prepared for us by Mrs. Frank Scott and Mrs. Crit Jones of Circle 1.

We are learning more each time we meet what the Y.W.A. means to us and how to carry out its duties. We are still proud of the fact that we are growing in membership. We hope to make this a large A-1 Y.W.A.

Our next meeting will be April 2 at 7:30 p.m. with Joyce King. We urge all old members to come and bring new members.—Alene Johnson.

CHESTNUT CREEK CHURCH

We are going to call a pastor to finish out the present associational year, next Sunday, March 25th, at 11 o'clock, and we want every member who can to come and take part in securing some one to serve for us.—H. J. Taylor.

Mr. Dubie Chancelor is in the Central Alabama Hosvital, suffering from complications following dental extractions.

Mrs. Van Smith visited in Birmingham last week end.

Home economists suggest that a faster and less wasteful method of cooking is: (1) Read the recipe carefully, unless you know it by heart.; (2) Assemble all ingredients and utensils needed; (3) Measure carefully; (4) Mix and cook.

It is good household business to make the best use of things on hand rather than to buy now when good buys in many household articles are practically impossible.

Chilton County Bible Study Committee Meets

The first meeting of the Chilton County Bible Study Committee was held Friday evening, March 16th, in the Office of the County Board of Education. Superintendent Culp called the meeting to order and was asked to serve as temporary chairman until a permanent chairman could be elected.

The Rev. R. E. Owens, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Clanton, was elected as permanent chairman; and Rev. A. T. Hickman, pastor of the Temple Church, was elected Secretary. Mr. Reedie Taylor was elected Treasurer, and Chairman of the Finance Committee, which is to consist of members selected from the Chilton County Bible Study Committee.

An invitation is extended to all churches, within the county, to participate in this Bible Study Program. Each church participating will be allowed two representatives, their pastor and one lay member.

An Administration Committee, made up of one member from each church denomination participating, is to be appointed by the chairman, and is to have charge of selecting a Bible teacher for the Fall school term. Names of those to be on the committee will be announced at a later date.

Much interest and enthusiasm was manifested in the discussions of various phases of the program.

Those who attended the meeting were: Rev. Lloyd, L. C. Warr, J. R. Oglesby, Rev. H. M. Sandlin, J. M. Johnson, Wm. J. Mims, Rev. R. E. Owens, Mr Reedie Taylor, Superintendent Culp, W. T. Bean and Rev. A. T. Hickman.—Andrew Hickman, Jr.

Subscription Rate Increased To $2.00 per year

On and after April 1, 1945, the Chilton County News subscription rate will be $2.00 per year.

There is no need to go into a long explanation as to why our subscription rate has to be increased. Any intelligent reader knows and understands that practically everything has doubled and tripled in price, especially the materials required in publishing a newspaper, while we have tried to keep the subscription rate of our paper the same—this long after most of the weeklies in the State have long since gone to $2.00 per year or more.

At this time we want to ask those many friends and subscribers who have consistantly asked us about their "boy in service" subscription, to come in at their earliest opportunity and see us about his paper. His paper will NOT be stopped before you come in to see us, so do not worry about it. It has just come to the point where we will have to charge regular rates for the "boys in service" paper, as we do anyone else, and within the next few weeks we will revise our list and bring all subscriptions going to boys in th armed forces, to a current basis.

Recently the Chilton County News has given its subscribers an eight-page colored comic—the same as that carried in the largest daily newspaper. This is a service that few weekly newspapers in the Nation offers it's readers. This eight-page comic section also goes to the boys in the armed forces—of which we send nearly four hundred each week.

As soon as the war is won and it is humanly possible to get experienced help, we will give you a better newspaper. Until then we can only do our best and ask that you help by sending in news of yourself, and your community each week. This will be appreciated by the Editor and the other ten thousand readers of Chilton County News.

Canning Plant In Operation At High School

The Chilton County Canning Plant located at the Chilton County High School in Clanton, is in operation for the people of Chilton county.

The plant was constructed by the Vocational Education Department and is under the supervision of the teachers of Vocational Home Economics and Agriculture at Clanton

The plant is open to anyone wishing to do any canning of vegetables, meats or fruits. The cost will be only enough to take care of the operating expenses The advisory board, consisting of members appointed by the County Board of Education, has set a small service fee of 2 cents per can for vegetables and fruits and 4 cents per can for meats. This service fee will go to pay the cost of fuel, electricity, plant repairs and other expenses.

The patron will furnish his own containers. However, the plant has an assortment of cans which will be furnished at wholesale price, including special cans for acid foods The prices for the cans are 3 and 5 cents each, depending on the size used. It is advisable to do all canning in tin containers. Anyone canning in glass jars will do so at his own risk

All the work will be done by the patron. Each family should bring at least two or more helpers All small children and pets will be excluded from the plant because of the danger

Thursday has been set aside as canning days until the season opens. However, anyone wishing to use the plant should make an appointment with the supervisors before bringing his products to the plant in order that the plant may be fired and ready for operation

With the exception of soap and dish cloths all utensils and equipment will be furnished at the plant however, they may be [illegible] If any accident occurs contact either the Home [illegible] the Agriculture teacher of the Clanton High School.

Recoiling from charges, marines launch high explosive rockets from mobile trucks onto enemy emplacements on Iwo Jima.

EUROPE:
Ram Forward

Their north flank cleared by a powerhouse drive to the Baltic, the Russians launched their all-out assault on Berlin even as U. S. forces dug deeper into German territory east of the Rhine on the other end of the European battlefront.

Starting their long-awaited smash at Berlin only after clearing some 200,000 Germans from their right flank, the Russians moved over 100,000 men over the Oder river on a 16-mile front due east of the capital in the early stages of the drive. Simultaneously, other Red troops battered ahead in the Stettin region to the north in what threatened to develop into a wide outflanking movement on Berlin.

While the battle for Berlin raged, Russian troops to the southeast maintained heavy pressure on German forces defending the gateway to the Moravian Gap, front door to Czechoslovakia and Austria. Both at the gateway and in Hungary, the Germans fought hard to keep the Reds from the approaches to these rich industrial regions furnishing the enemy with vital war material.

Their bridgehead steadily built up across the Rhine east of Remagen, U. S. 1st army troops pressed ahead through the steep and forested Westerwald mountains in a drive threatening the outer edge of the Germans' vital Ruhr industrial valley just to the north and the rolling hill route to Berlin to the east.

With the Nazi high command compelled to keep a watchful eye on the U. S. 9th and British 2nd armies to the north, German attacks against the broadening bridgehead were confined to short, sharp counterblows designed to whittle down American strength and heavy artillery fire from the surrounding heights.

Increasing numbers of the carefully hoarded German planes, including jet-propelled craft, also were thrown into the battle not only to harass ground troops but also conduct continuing attacks against the Yank supply lines across the river. The sky above roared with swirling dog-fights as American airmen challenged the enemy aviators.

While these three Allied forces menaced the eastern Rhineland, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. 3rd army pressed against the Saar and Moselle rivers guarding the enemy's all-important Saar basin to the southwest. Along with the U. S. 7th army on the southern border of the Saar basin, the 3rd was applying a crunching vise to the vital coal and iron region.

Inside Germany

While Adolf Hitler called upon the German people to stand fast and bleed the Allies to death, Nazi authorities moved to round up all soldiers and civilians fleeing from the path of advancing U. S., British and Russian armies to make them available for the Reich's last desperate stand.

Declaring that God only helps those who help themselves, Hitler said: "Our task is . . . clear: to put up resistance and to wear down our enemies so long that until, in the end, they will get tired and yet be broken. . . . The year 1918 will not be repeated. . . ."

In seeking to steer detached soldiers back into military ranks, and channel refugee workers into war production, the Nazis ordered the registration of all males between 16 and 62, with violators and their abettors treated as deserters and punished.

CURB EXPORTS:
To Relieve U. S.

In what was interpreted as a move to provide first for essential U. S. civilian needs before meeting those of liberated Europe, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes organized a special committee to pass on all demands for exports from this country except those of a military nature.

Declaring that all relief, rehabilitation and other exports must be considered in the light of their eventual effect on our economy, Byrnes said that all commitments previously made which might upset the U. S. war effort must now be re-examined before fulfilled.

With the prospect of a 20 per cent reduction in meat supplies, 10 per cent in vegetable oils and fats and 10 per cent in sugar, the War Food administration was one U. S. agency which had appealed to Byrnes for assistance in allocating its stocks, capital circles reported.

PACIFIC:
Jap Jitters

Premier Koiso

With U. S. forces fastening their grip on the Philippines, securing air bases within a comparative stone's throw of the enemy mainland and crippling his industrial machine with continued bombings, Jap leaders drew the picture of an impending American invasion of the homeland.

The leaders' efforts to reassure their people, however, ran all the way from Premier Koiso's declaration that the Japs would enjoy an advantage because of shorter supply lines to War Minister Sugiyama's statement that any invasion attempt would meet with enemy suicide fliers' crash-divings and new weapons designed at thwarting an attack.

By also forecasting increased activity on the Chinese mainland, Koiso lent credence to reports that the Japs had ordered evacuation of Shanghai and other territory along the eastern coastal strip of China, where Allied troops might be expected to land to wipe out enemy resources in that country and establish additional air bases.

FARM SUPPORT:
O. K. CCC

Following charges that "leaks" in information of planned government food operations resulted in huge profits to speculators, congress voted for extension of the Commodity Credit corporation for two years and an extension of borrowing power to 5 billion dollars to help support farm prices.

In airing the speculation charges, Representative Taber (N. Y.) said that heavy buying in wheat took place 18 days before announcement of the government's intention to pay the full parity price for all unredeemed grain in loan on May 1, and that the purchases were then dumped on the market after the announcement at a big profit. Taber also charged that eggs which had been sold "short" at a good price prior to announcement of the government's plans to sell 200 carloads were later bought back at a large profit.

As congress considered demands for a thorough investigation of the charges, it was revealed that three CCC and two War Food administration employees had been discharged as a result of private probes.

V-E DAY:
Troop Shift

Defeat of Germany will pose a huge task for the U. S. army in withdrawing the bulk of 3,500,000 men from Europe, with the majority destined for reassignment for continuation of the war against Japan, it was revealed.

In observing the third anniversary of the army service forces which he heads, Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell declared that though some of the troops and equipment will be shipped directly from Europe to the Pacific, others will be returned to the U. S. for furloughs, reoutfitted and then sent overseas.

Although General Somervell indicated that some of the vets would be discharged after the European conflict, the war department itself declared it was impossible at this time to estimate the number that actually will be released.

CANADIAN OIL:
Junk Project

Originally undertaken in 1942 to furnish U. S. troops in the Alaskan area with a convenient source of oil and gas, the army's $134,000,000 Canadian well and refinery project in the northwest territories was abandoned under continuing congressional pressure.

Consisting of 61 wells at Norman linked to the refinery at Whitehorse by a pipe-line, the project produced only 21,297 barrels of 100 octane gas in nine months, with costs running around $1,000,000 a month. Canol's 500 employees could be better utilized in U. S. refineries, the senate war investigating committee reported, with the 281 skilled workers capable of boosting 100 octane gas output 6,000 barrels a day at American plants.

Should Canada fail to exercise its option of purchasing the property, it was said, the project will be put up for public bidding.

COAL SUPPLY:
Cut Deliveries

With the already reduced miner labor force expected to be further pared during the year, and with government officials predicting a 40,000,000 ton coal shortage for 1945, householders east of the Mississippi as well as in Iowa, Minnesota and North and South Dakota will be limited to 80 per cent of their normal needs in the next heating season.

Working at top speed, 400,000 miners produced a record 620 million tons of coal in 1944, but with recent manpower losses and the projected induction of some 25,000 more men into the armed forces through this year, output was expected to drop. Retention of the 25,000 miners and release of an additional 15,000 from the armed forces would provide the manpower to meet all needs, operators said.

In limiting householders and other consumers to 80 per cent of their normal requirements, the government altered its current regulations under which only 87½ per cent of anthracite or 90 per cent of soft coal mined in West Virginia, Virginia, eastern Kentucky or northeastern Tennessee could be included in an order, with substitutes making up the remainder.

BRITISH DEBT:
War Deficit

Though income was out-running estimates, Britain's debt for the fiscal year closing in April was expected to approximate 11½ billion dollars, with receipts put at less than 12½ billions and expenditures at over 24 billions.

With only the surtax on high incomes falling short of expected yields, revenues from income taxes, excess profits levies and customs duties were looked upon to equal or surpass estimates, it was said.

Though treasury figures showed more money in circulation than ever before, the shortage of goods continued to adversely affect trade. Retail sales in January were the smallest since the same month in 1944, it was revealed, with Christmas buying having flushed stocks.

Lend-Lease Homes

With more than 2,500,000 British homes substantially damaged by bombing, with at least 250,000 of these destroyed, the U. S. plans to lend-lease 30,000 new pre-fabricated houses to the United Kingdom at a cost of $51,000,000, it was revealed. Thus did the U. S. move to help the British government on the all-touchy housing question in a country with an increasingly liberal outlook.

With the cost running about $1,700 each, the two-bedroom, flat-roofed homes will be shipped out complete, with the British expected to supply the glass on the site, however.

Latest in design, the houses will contain ranges, sinks and bathroom fixtures, including cast-iron enamel bathtubs, lavatory and galvanized iron piping.

ARMY CASUALTIES

Army general and convalescent hospitals in this country are caring for more than 50,000 more sick and wounded soldiers than was the case three months ago, the war department announced, stating that the number of patients had jumped from around 97,000 last October to 140,000 by the end of January.

Casualties from overseas are now arriving in this country at the rate of 1,200 a day, with about 35,000 evacuated to hospitals here last month.

BEAD MARKET SLUMPS IN PACIFIC

That time-worn phrase, "carrying coals to Newcastle," is being superseded out this way by a new expression—"carrying beads to the South Pacific," says Marine Correspondent Lt. Milburn McCarty Jr.

For years beads were one of the most popular items of barter among natives of the Pacific islands. Natives made beads out of shells, cat-eyes, coral, hammered silver coins, human teeth, etc.

Since the coming of American forces two years ago, the bead market here has been flooded. Well-meaning parents and wives back in the states have sent so many boxes of broken-down 5-and-10-cent store jewelry for the servicemen to trade that sometimes a bushel of beads will bring no more than a couple of small turtles.

Personalities Still Affect Relationships of Nations

Strain Between FDR and De Gaulle Complicates Postwar Understanding Between Two Great Powers.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Some years ago that highly scientific organization, the Smithsonian institution, discussed the possibility of a relationship between sun spots and wars. It was carefully explained that sun spots, which are really great explosions on the sun's surface, affected the weather on the earth and frequently bad weather in turn affected the dispositions of human beings and might oonceivably render national leaders less amenable to reason and more likely to get their countries into trouble.

At first glance that seems rather far-fetched but the fact that a clash of personalities can affect the course of nations today, almost as much as it did when people fought at the whim of a king, has been brought out strikingly in Franco-American relations.

President Roosevelt

There isn't much question that the common interests of France and the United States would be better served if one Franklin Roosevelt could "get along" better with one Charles De Gaulle.

Gen. De Gaulle

Of course, it is only fair to say that there are others who don't "get along" with the tall, handsome and aristocratic French general. It is no secret that one Josef Stalin, although he arranged a highly advantageous treaty with France including some even more advantageous private understanding with De Gaulle, had no desire to invite him to Yalta.

But the Roosevelt-De Gaulle differences seem to be recurrent and just when everybody thought, after the latter's visit to Washington when he was understood to have given his colleagues in France the impression that the visit was highly satisfactory to him, came the answer "I regret" to Roosevelt's "respondez-vous, s'il vous plais" and the meeting on the President's cruiser off Algiers did not take place.

Etiquette Poses Difficult Problem

In diplomatic circles it has been carefully explained that De Gaulle could not accept an invitation from a peregrinating president to call upon him in his territory, which it was explained was a sort of "come down and have a picnic with me in your backyard, I'm too busy to call on you in your parlor."

To which American diplomatic circles explained: it wasn't an invitation to De Gaulle to come to Algiers, which is French territory, but an invitation to call on the President aboard a U. S. warship, which is American territory.

Peut-etre, was the reply, but the chief of a great power, indeed an empire, cannot be expected to be treated any better than the rulers of such minor domains as Arabia, Egypt or Ethiopia, royal-blooded though they be. (Roosevelt entertained the gentlemen earlier.)

There the discussion bogged down in mutual chagrin with all but two of the leading French newspapers (one conservative and one communist) insisting that De Gaulle was right and the apologists for Roosevelt explaining that the President could not undertake what probably would have amounted to a visit of state and a triumphal tour of France, when he had a war to win. It was also recalled that one thing Mr. Roosevelt prides himself on avoiding is making the mistakes Wilson did. Wilson received a wild ovation in France and Italy BEFORE the peace conference, and suffered the results of a most painful reaction afterward.

How great a part Roosevelt's failure to pay a visit to De Gaulle in Paris played in motivating the general's refusal, or, if it were the chief cause, how much was personal pique on the part of De Gaulle and how much a feeling that his nation had been slighted, it is impossible to say. My own impression garnered from conversations with persons thoroughly familiar with the French attitude is that "difficulties" were expected to arise in Franco-American relations the moment it became clear that France was not invited to participate in the counsels of the Big Three. It was not expected that the role her armies are able to play would make her eligible to join the military councils at Yalta but the French were ardently desirous of having a place at the general negotiations which made up the second part of the parleys. General De Gaulle was in no mood, when he received the President's invitation, to brook what he considered a further slight.

It was clear, on the other hand, that the President felt he had sound, practical reasons for omitting any visit to Paris before the San Francisco meeting. He also felt there were sound, practical reasons for a conversation with De Gaulle. He said there were a number of points that had to be cleared up which required French action before the United Nations meeting could be held. Indeed, I imagine, he felt that he was showing especial regard to France when he offered to review the accomplishments at Yalta personally for De Gaulle.

FDR Comments On Prima Donnas

That is supposed to account for the extemporaneous remarks he inserted in his report to congress about "prima donnas."

Those remarks, which were universally interpreted as applying to De Gaulle, came as a distinct shock and immediately afterward Senator Brewster publicly labeled them "injudicious."

I was following the text of the official release in the house radio gallery as the President spoke and had noted the many departures which he tossed off as familiar asides and which helped to give his talk the intimate note he desired. But I was startled at what he said following the text as it dealt with an agreement with Yugoslavia. He read the sentence, "We hope that it is in the process of fulfillment" and then he looked up and with just a touch of what verged on sarcasm in his voice, remarked "But it is not only that, but in some other places we have to remember there are a great number of prima donnas in the world, all who wish to be heard. Before anything will be done, we may have a little delay, while we listen to more prima donnas."

That startled me as I said but I must say I did not at first think he could mean De Gaulle. That seemed impossible. However, as others mentioned it, I began to take it for granted, for I knew that until the procedure of voting as agreed upon at Yalta was approved by France the agreement could not be announced. There were other things upon which France had to be consulted in advance of the meeting, as well.

The French ambassador who was seated in the diplomatic gallery showed no sign whatever that he was affected by the words and later he is said to have told a friend that it was hardly likely that the prima donna reference could have been meant to apply to France since the President had completed his comment on what disposition of French interests had been made and had moved on to another topic, Yugoslavia.

That, of course, is a good alibi. And it is necessary that there be an alibi for I am convinced that had there been even unofficial admission that the President was hitting at De Gaulle a really difficult situation would arise. It is known that although many people consider the general what the French call "difficile," the French do not call De Gaulle that and his friends and admirers are warm in their loyalty and would instantly resent any unfavorable comment on his conduct.

No serious difficulties are expected to arise between the United States and France but some of their common troubles in the past show that there is much difference between foreign relations, bolster them with protocol as you will and personal relations after all.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth, an M.P., was in charge of security. The Major set out immediately to win the friendship and confidence of the citizens and vowed to replace the town bell, which the Germans had taken. Major Joppolo talked with Father Pessovecchio, local priest. He promised the priest to attend mass the following morning. When time for mass arrived, the Major was busy in his office and overlooked the appointment, until church bell awoke him to the fact that he was late. He arrived before mass was over, much to the relief of the priest.

CHAPTER V

At this angry moment, Gargano, Chief of the Carabinieri, came up to the line. This man was called by the people The Man With Two Hands, because of his continuous and dramatic gesturing. He was, he seemed to think, an actor, and he could not say two words without gesturing with both hands. He possessed and exercised all the essentially Italian gestures: the two forefingers laid side by side, the circle of thumb and forefinger, the hands up in stop position, the salute to the forehead with palm forward, the fingertips of the two hands placed tip to tip, the fingers linked, the hands flat and downward as if patting sand, the hands up heel to heel and pulled toward the chest, the attitude of prayer, the pointing forefinger of accusation, the V as if for victory or smoking cigarette, the forefinger on the chin, the rolling of the hands. All, he used them all.

He did not make any arrests. He merely went up to Carmelina, wife of the lazy Fatta, and squeezed between her and the door of Zapulla's shop, and stood there. The people could see that he was merely taking his place at the head of the line to wait for bread.

Carmelina, who was annoyed by having had wood-coke thrown at her, said truculently: "Mister Gargano, you were Chief of the Carabinieri under the old regime, and that entitled you to stand at the head of the line. I am not sure that you are still Chief of the Carabinieri."

Gargano said: "I am the Chief," and he made a kind of Fascist salute with both hands.

Carmelina said: "I doubt it. Where is the proof?"

Gargano said: "See my uniform," and he ran his two forefingers from his shoulders to his knees.

Carmelina said: "That is no proof. The Americans do not care how we dress. I could dress as a rabbit and the Americans would not arrest me."

Gargano said: "Woman, stop your shouting, or I will arrest you," and he gripped his own left wrist with his own right hand, signifying arrest.

Carmelina said: "Where is your authority?"

Margherita the formidable wife of Craxi said: "I believe that this man is still Chief, since the Mister Major is keeping many Fascist scoundrels in office until they prove themselves bad. But I do not believe that under American law he has the right to go to the head of the line. That is where I think you are right, Carmelina."

Gargano stepped out of the line. "Who questions my right?" he roared, and he pounded one clenched fist on the other clenched fist.

Carmelina, wife of the lazy Fatta, standing right beside him, startled him by whispering in his ear: "I question it, Two-Hands."

Up to this time Zapulla the baker, standing in the front of his shop, had been torn between the two authorities, the old and the new. But he was so annoyed with Carmelina for having prodded him that he now said: "Arrest her, Mister Chief, if you have any courage."

Up to this time Gargano the Chief, somewhat unsure of his ground, had been trying to think of a way of retiring gracefully. But now his manhood, as well as his authority, was challenged. He moved toward Carmelina and said: "Woman, you are under arrest."

Carmelina shouted: "Keep your two active hands off me, Gargano."

Zapulla said: "Will you let this woman shriek down your courage?"

Gargano clapped his hands on Carmelina. She screamed. All up and down the line women shouted: "Out with the Fascist Chief of Carabinieri. Out with Two-Hands. Out with men who push themselves to the head of a line ahead of women who have been waiting three hours."

Gargano dragged Carmelina off screaming and kicking, and the anti-Gargano, anti-Fascist screams in the line grew louder and louder. Even Mercurio Salvatore, although as crier he was more or less an official and should have remained neutral or even taken the side of Gargano, raised his huge voice in a careful shout: "Down with injustice!"

When Gargano pulled Carmelina into Major Joppolo's office, she was still screaming. But the Major jumped to his feet and said sharply: "Silence, shrew," and she fell quiet at once.

"What is this all about?" the Major asked.

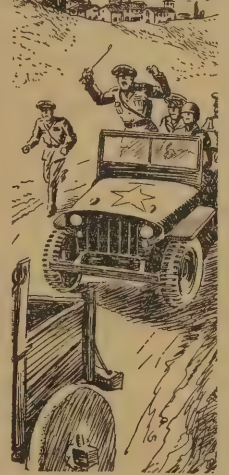
Gargano said: "This woman questioned my authority," and he pointed at her with both forefingers.

Carmelina said: "There is more to it than that."

Major Joppolo said: "Your authority to do what, Gargano?"

Carmelina shouted: "To push his way to the head of the line in front of Zapulla's bread shop."

Gargano said: "It is a privilege the officials of the town have always enjoyed."



Major Joppolo said: "Is that so?"

Gargano said: "I charge this woman with disturbing the peace and questioning authority." Gargano was shrewd in saying this, for he saw that things were going against him, and now he had put the matter on an official rather than a personal basis. The Major would have to decide the case officially.

The Major decided with a speed which dazzled Gargano. He decided that the woman was right but that he could not say so, because if he did the Chief would never regain his authority, and the Major wanted to keep him in office. Therefore he said: "I sentence this woman to one day in jail, suspended sentence. Let her go, Gargano, and gather all the officials of Adano for me at once."

When Carmelina got outside, she ran straight back to the bread shop. The bread was not ready yet, and the people gave her back her place at the head of the line and shouted to her: "What happened, Carmelina? What did they do to you?"

Carmelina told what had happened and she said: "Did you ever hear of such a light sentence in Adano? I believe in my heart that the Mister Major thought I was right. And what was the meaning of assembling the officials? I believe that he was for me."

In the Major's office, the officials gradually assembled. Some were held-over Fascists, some were new appointments to take the place of Fascists who had fled to the hills. In whispers, and with ample gestures, Gargano described to them the humiliation he had suffered, until Major Joppolo said: "Silence, please."

The officials drew up in a circle around the Major's desk. The Major stood up.

"I want you to be my friends," he said. "As my friends, I will consider it my duty to tell you everything I think, for we do not want Adano to be a town of mysteries and a place of suspicion.

"Adano has been a Fascist town. That is natural, because the country was Fascist, therefore the town was also. But now that the Americans have come, we are going to run the town as a democracy.

"Perhaps you do not know what a democracy is. I will tell you.

"Democracy is this: democracy is that the men of the government are no longer the masters of the people. They are the servants of the people. What makes a man master of another man? It is that he pays him for his work. Who pays the men in the government? The people do, for they pay the taxes out of which you are paid.

"Therefore you are now the servants of the people of Adano. I too am their servant. When I go to buy bread, I shall take my place at the end of the line, and I will wait my turn. You too must behave now as servants, not as masters. You must behave as the servant of the man without shoes just as much as of the baron. If I find that any of you are not giving the type of service that I desire, I shall have to remove you from office.

"Remember: you are servants now. You are servants of the people of Adano. And watch: this thing will make you happier than you have ever been in your lives."

On the ninth morning, General Marvin was driving along the road toward Vicinamare and came to the town of Adano. From time to time along the road his driver had had to slow down behind the little Italian two-wheeled carts of the country-side until traffic from the opposite direction had gone by. Then he passed the carts.

As they passed each cart, General Marvin waved his riding crop in such a way as to indicate that the cart should move over. Since there was nothing to move over into except the ditch, which at intervals along the road expanded into tank traps, the carts never did move over. The General grew angrier and angrier.

Now it happened that just as he came to the Fiume Rosso, or Red River, just before Adano, the General's armored car was obliged to slow down for a cart which meandered along right in the center of the road.

The General stood up in his car and shouted in his deep bass voice (you've read about that voice in the supplements; it's famous; one writer said it was like "a foghorn gone articulate"): "Get off the road!"

Unfortunately the driver of the cart was one Errante Gaetano, who earlier that morning had sold three dozen eggs to American soldiers at fourteen times the proper price, had immediately sunk most of his profits in the wine of his friend Maltaliano, and was now sleeping a deep and happy sleep on the seat of his cart. At this particular moment, he was dreaming about eating the nicer parts of a fish nine feet long. Naturally he did not pay much attention to the voice of General Marvin, no matter how famous the voice, because he could not hear it.

General Marvin roared at his driver: "Blow your horn. Blow him off the road."

The driver, a nice boy from Massachusetts, put the heel of his hand on the horn button against his own wish. He was in no hurry, and knew that no matter how fast they went, he would only have to wait when they got wherever they were going.

The mind of Errante did not react to the horn, even though the horn was something urgent called a klaxon. The cart kept right down the middle of the road, inasmuch as Errante's mule was a cautious creature, just as wary of ditches on the right as of ditches on the left. This was a quality in his mule of which Errante Gaetano often boasted to his friends. "Give me none of your lop-sided mules," he would say, "give me a mule with a sense of the middle."

This sense was going to be the undoing of his mule just now, because General Marvin's face was beginning to grow dark, and some veins which have never been described in the supplements began to wriggle and pound on his forehead.

"I've had enough of these carts," the General shouted. He was standing up in the car, waving his riding crop around. "Do they think they're going to stop the invasion with carts?"

Errante slept beautifully. He was coming to the gray part of the fish just under the ribs. It melted in the mouth of his dream. There was, however, a sound of thunder in the distance which made him think perhaps he had better cover the fish and finish eating the nice parts after the rain.

General Marvin roared: "Do these Italians think they're going to stop a bunch of tanks with a bunch of wooden carts?"

Colonel Middleton, the General's Chief of Staff, and Lieutenant Byrd, his aide, could see the violence coming. Lieutenant Byrd looked back along the road, but he couldn't see any bunch of tanks. The only thing he could see that was being held up besides the General's armored car was one seep, or amphibious jeep, which did not seem to be in a hurry.

Here it came. General Marvin shouted: "Throw that cart off the road."

Errante stirred in his sleep. The thunder of his dream was the most beautiful and most continuous thunder he had ever heard.

The six men surrounded the cart. Colonel Middleton reached up to waken Errante, but the General's roars grew louder. "What are you doing?" he bellowed. "I told you to throw the thing off the road."

"We were just going to wake this fellow up and get him off first," Colonel Middleton shouted back, but the shout was weak because he knew what the answer would be.

"Serve him right. Throw him too. Just turn the whole thing over."

There was no protest from any of the six men. The only thing which was said was muttered by Lieutenant Byrd: "The old man hasn't been getting enough sleep lately."

Colonel Middleton went to the head of the mule and guided it to the side of the road. He directed the other five men to take positions on the left side of the cart and to lift together when he gave the signal.

General Marvin roared: "Come on, get it over with. What a bunch of softies. Get it over with."

Colonel Middleton gave the signal. The five men lifted.

In his dream, Errante rose up above the nine-foot fish and soared off into space. The sensation was extremely pleasant.

THE LAST WEEK

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:6-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest.—Matthew 21:9.

The official presentation of Himself to the Jewish people as their King, their rejection of Him and, what was even more solemnly meaningful, His rejection of the Hebrew nation because of their unbelief—such are the stirring events which face us as we go with our Lord into the last week of His earthly ministry.

The first event in that sequence is the one we study in our lesson for today, namely, the coming of the King to Jerusalem.

I. Preparation and Presentation (vv. 6, 7).

The King comes, but even in His hour of royal triumph He gives to His followers the unexplainable but inestimable joy of meeting His need.

1. "The Disciples Did As Jesus Appointed" (v. 6). He had need of disciples who would do His bidding without question or hesitation. How precious is such obedience! Let us also go and do what He commands.

He needed the colt and the ass. How simple and lowly was that need, and yet how glorious that man was ready to meet it!

God's plans are worked out in the little things as well as the great. Prophecy was being fulfilled here (see v. 5) by a little thing. Is God waiting to carry out some great purpose through some little thing which you are withholding from Him? Why hinder Him any longer?

2. "And He Sat Thereon" (v. 7). Though He did not come with the pomp and trappings of an earthly potentate, the King of Glory came to His people to offer them for the last time the opportunity to receive Him.

He asks you to yield your life to His kingship. What will your answer be?

II. Acceptance and Rejection (vv. 8-11, 15, 16).

1. "The Multitude . . . Cried . . . Hosanna" (vv. 8-11). The fact that before the week was over some of the same voices cried, "Crucify him!" should not obscure the fact that there were childlike believers (v. 16) who really had faith in Christ.

There is something inspiring about that picture of enthusiasm and devotion. Real faith in Christ ought to result in a fervor of spirit which will stir our hearts and our cities. Are we not altogether too dead and formal in much of our worship today? Do we not need more holy enthusiasm for Christ and for His Church?

2. "The Chief Priests and Scribes . . . Were Sore Displeased" (vv. 15, 16). Small wonder, for not only had the children put them to open shame by recognizing the Christ whom they had ignored, but He had also ruined their polite religious "racket" which produced for them such a lovely profit.

Mark this—when anyone is displeased with Jesus or with His children or with His work on earth, you can be sure that there is a reason, and not a holy, upright or good reason either!

III. Judgment and Compassion (vv. 12-14).

What a remarkable picture! In the midst of flaming judgment and destruction we find His loving compassion upon the blind and the lame. Folk who think that Christ has no message but love need to look on Him as He cleanses the temple. On the other hand, those who think that He has no word but judgment need to behold Him as He stands in the midst of the overturned tables and debris and heals the needy.

1. "Jesus Cast Out . . . and Overthrew" (vv. 12, 13). He knew where to begin to cleanse the city. He started in the temple. Absolutely right is the man who suggested that the place to start to clean up a city is not in the slums but in the churches.

You will not be ready to clean out the tavern or that other low place where the gang hangs out in your town until you have cleaned out the church if sin is being harbored there.

The same is true of the individual. A regenerated heart will bring a reformed life, not vice versa. You can live only after you have been born.

2. "He Healed Them" (v. 14). The very hands which had just overthrown the tables and cast out the money-changers now gently touched the lame and the blind with healing. The eyes which had blazed with holy indignation now shone with love and compassion. The scene of judgment and chaos became the house of prayer and of answered prayer. On the very spot where one man had received condemnation, another received healing.

Each one received that which He sought by his own attitude and action. How will you, my dear reader, meet Jesus—as your Judge or as your Saviour? You must make the choice. Choose Christ today.

We decided last Friday that we were entitled to a half day a week off like other human beings and started closing at noon Fridays. Wonder if we couldn't get Rip Burnett to plow our garden for us. While driving by his house Saturday afternoon we saw him out plowing his garden. Now we know what he wanted the automobile dealers to close at noon on Saturday for—he wanted to get back to earth once in a while—in his garden.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Evans have five sons. Ordinarily you would say, "so what", a lot of people have five sons. But listen to the record of these five sons. First is Rollin H. Melvie Blondell Davis, age 3, died at a local hospital Friday morning. Funeral services were Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Pates Chapel, services conducted by Rev. Rabie Crumpton; burial in adjoining cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Junior Ray, Herman Campbell, William and Bud Caton. Flower girls were: Mayo Campbell, Ruth and Mae Scott.

She is survived by her father, R. T. Parsie Davis, U.S.A., England; mother, Janie Mae Hubbard Davis; one sister, Linda; one brother, Melvin; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hubbard, all of Jemison, Ala., Route 1; Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Davis, Cumberland, Md.

Yes Sir, IT'S PERFECTLY NATURAL

Preference for Chilean Nitrate is Just as Natural as the Product Itself

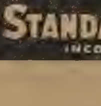
Doubly Lucky...Pop brings home a soldier son on furlough, and natural nitrate to side dress the crops.

Good farmers—for over a hundred years—have hauled natural nitrate for their crops. Since 1830, when the first nitrate cargo arrived from Chile, millions of tons have been used on American farms . . . 3,300,000 tons since the outbreak of the war. This year's supply of Chilean Nitrate depends largely on ships available to bring it in. If everyone takes his share promptly when offered, at least 850,000 tons can be supplied for this year's crops.

While some nitrate normally goes into mixed fertilizer, most of it is applied direct to the crop —top dressing for grains and grasses, side dressing for corn and cotton. Direct application to fruit and vegetable crops is vital to yield and quality.

Chilean Nitrate is quick-acting inorganic nitrogen. It is immediately soluble in normal soil moisture. It is all available to the crop But beyond all this, Chilean Nitrate is natural . . . the only natural nitrate in the world. Because of its natural origin, Chilean Nitrate of Soda contains, in addition to large proportions of nitrogen and sodium, small amounts of boron, iodine, manganese, copper—34 different elements in all—many of which are known to be essential to healthy plant growth.

Good farmers the world over have learned by experience to prefer Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda. In experiments, test plots and in the field, it has demonstrated its worth. It is the safe, sure nitrate for your crops.



Easy to Handle . . . Easy to Use
Natural Chilean Nitrate comes in two forms—Champion brand and Old Style. It reaches you in fine mechanical condition, in even-weight bags, for easy storage and handling.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Wives Who Are Saboteurs

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"When I got my captaincy and sailing orders, she came a thousand miles, with my little girls, to wish me Godspeed."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

WHAT has happened to the honor and fidelity of American women in this war? What has become of the old-time fineness and faithfulness that made it second-nature for our war wives to cherish the memory of the men who were away on battlefronts, to preserve the sacredness of home and home ties in their absence?

Gone with the wind, evidently. Recently an eminent military authority was responsible for the statement that among married men in the fighting forces today, one out of every three receives news from home that his wife is no longer faithful.

That he is no longer loved. That the home of which he dreams, in the smoke and blood and horror of the firing line, is no longer ready to welcome him back. That the children for whom his arms and his heart hunger are no longer to be his, to live under their father's roof—if indeed he ever has a home again.

The cruelty and selfishness of the women who write such letters to lonely, homesick men is sufficiently dreadful. But even worse is the implication that our girls are being brought up without any respect for marriage, motherhood or themselves.

When a woman goes through years of weakness and illness, as many women do, there is no comfort in the world to her like the deep happiness of knowing that her husband is faithful, is concerned, is eager with tender help and care.

Soldiers Give Up Much.

And when men leave their homes, leave safety and friends, beloved small children and wives, behind them; when they are regimented out of all individuality; when they may no longer have a will of their own or be free for a single hour without some other man's permission—then what sort of a wife is it who begins at once to entertain herself with friendships of other men, who presently writes her homesick soldier that she has met another love, that she wants to be free, that he must make some other living arrangements when he gets home?

The army official above quoted says one soldier out of every three gets this sort of letter. Our enemies could hardly devise anything more destructive to the morale of our troops. To wait for mail from home and to eagerly receive it, only to be stunned by fresh misery and loneliness, a sense of inferiority and failure, is an experience that may well weaken the courage and determination of any man.

"We have one baby girl, Mary," writes Corporal W. J. J. from northern France. "I think the world of her, and God knows I dearly love my wife, too. But now Ethel writes that she wants a divorce, she is going to marry a fellow I know, and take Mary with her. I wish I knew what to do, ought I try to hold her, feeling like she does? I get almost sick, being so far away, and not able to get home and see her. In my mind I think I'll go coocoo imagining myself talking with her and saying 'Forget it, Baby. Let things go on like they were before, until I get home. I didn't ask to get into this war, I'm doing my best to finish it up in a hurry and it seems like you could pull your weight, too!' "

This is a genuine letter, one of many that come to me. Here is another, this one from a professor of English who has been overseas for more than a year.

Wants Wealthy Man.

"Ann and I have been married 10 years," he writes. "She wanted me to volunteer, and when I got my captaincy and sailing orders she came a thousand miles, with my little girls, to wish me Godspeed. That was 14 months ago. We have been very happy, have a lovely home, books, friends, work in common. Now she writes me that she wishes to go to Reno; she has promised to marry a much older man, quite wealthy, and prominent in our town. He is 52, Ann 34. She asks me not to make any 'fuss' and hopes that I will someday find a woman more worthy of me. She says the girls will share their time between us.

"Is that the way wives write to their husbands in war time?" the letter concludes bitterly. "Is that the best they can do to brace their men through the cruelest ordeal that human flesh and blood ever faced? We're tired, discouraged, homesick, over here. We know how this war is going to end, and that we'll come home—some of us—victorious, but believe me, it's a slow, hard pull, and to have nothing to which to look forward, nothing for which to work, nothing loving and comforting to which to come home, is pretty disheartening. If anyone had told me this Ann I'd have knocked him down. Written by her own hand, I have to believe it, and it has shaken the foundations of my whole life."

Thousands of wives are piling up eternal regret and shame for themselves. For thousands of others perhaps it isn't too late to stop short, to take the course of courage and honor, fidelity and plain old-fashioned goodness, as wives.

"He is quite wealthy and prominent..."

AIDING THE ENEMY

As if the cruel hardships of war weren't enough, many men in uniform have to endure the loss of their wife's love. Just the fact that their husbands are absent seems to be an excuse for many women to find pleasure in some other man's company. Often this illicit romancing leads to a desire for a divorce. Thousands of wives have written to their husbands in service, asking for a separation.

Miss Norris calls these disloyal wives "saboteurs." They are wrecking the morale of fighting men—and far more effectively than any enemy propaganda could do. They are not only wrecking their own and their husband's lives—they are endangering their country.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

EDUCATION SHOULD ORGANIZE STRONGLY

WASHINGTON. — Biggest industry, by far, in the United States is education.

In plant, this nation has invested $14,223,489,985 (1940 figure from the United States office of education) compared with a paltry $2,750,000,000 in plant of the No. 1 commercial industry, motor vehicles, bodies and parts,

We have put five times more money into the value of education production buildings, from kindergarten through college, than in our vast and fabulous motors production, yet front page readers rarely notice this leading industry, and people generally pay little attention to it, although they own the stock in it.

Annual operating cost of education is $3,203,547,586 (same source, covering 1941-42) which is more than half the total of wages paid in every other industrial area in 1939. Yet practically every day you notice strikes and arguments about industrial wages.

For those we have labor boards, Little Steel formulas and great political agitation and interest. In the nation's largest industry, into which the public actually annually pays $2,671,653,202, there is no comparable interest—and no comparable results.

Not Run by Business Men.

There are other significant distinctions. The nation's largest industry is not run by business men.

County and city officials operate the bulk of it (their taxpayers furnishing $1,826,937,572 for the public schools) while the states furnished $979,539,773; the federal government $83,338,030 and privately controlled schools spent $551,998,864 (all 1941-42 figures).

The federal government, furthermore, acts vigorously to control inflation and deflation in all industries, excepting only this one, the biggest. A great watch is kept on the security, salaries and management of all businesses, except this one.

The school text book concessions must constitute a tremendous business, but no commissions nationally watch it.

Postwar planning for industry is a primary occupation now, but this one is neglected excepting that more federal funds for building more schools are to be provided. The industry is practically unrepresented in Washington except for a few lobbying organizations seeking appropriations, and these are not managed by business men—indeed they could not furnish me with the figures above quoted.

I think it is clearly suggested by the outer evidence that this industry is the least well managed as well as the least attended to.

Wants Government Control.

It is time the stockholders in this business started paying more attention to their investment. It is time also that national leaders, citizens and even government started recognizing the vastness of the industry, its financial influence, its economic effects, as well as the efficiency of its production, rather than leaving all this authority and control spread around loosely and not only uncontrolled but unadvised in various uncoordinated hands.

It is time also that the workers in that industry, the teachers, realize that they are in the largest industry and more aggressively protect their economic rights and defend their leading political and economic position.

I certainly do not mean by this that they should join a union, and particularly not a union nationally or internationally controlled by workers in lesser industries or their leaders, and pay tribute with high initiation fees and dues for the privilege of such leadership, which might be far from the best with which they could provide themselves.

So I think the teachers should seek the wisest possible direction, politically and economically, a democratic leadership based on superiority of ability, rather than placing their cause upon the ground of sheer numbers as unions so often do. They are not masses, but individual personalities, capable of finding a joint expression in a way they will enjoy more and which should better serve their particular interests.

The straw polls are galluping (CQ) over the country, heralding or drumming up what is called "an overwhelming majority support" for compulsory military education.

"Are you for military training? Should it be universal?"

Nearly everyone is for "military training," and not one in a hundred thousand people in this country realizes that "universal," in this case, is not being used in its dictionary sense, but to cover with diplomatic language, a bold drafting of 17 or 18 year old youths.

SANITARY DISHWASHING

Washing dishes does not insure sanitary cleanliness if the dish cloth has lain wet, concealing all kinds of bacteria. Scalding dishes after washing removes the film which holds bacteria to the sides of the dishes.

Dish cloth and dish towels for drying dishes must be boiled and sunned often. Yellow laundry soap and scalding hot water is a disinfectant, and a half teaspoonful of concentrated lye added to water in which towels are boiled will whiten them and kill germs.

Fear of His Spouse Is New Draft Excuse

SAN FRANCISCO. — Samuel V. McDonald, 44, who said he "was more afraid of his wife than Uncle Sam," was indicted on a charge of failing to register for the draft. McDonald said he had left his evangelist wife and five children in Worcester, Mass., and feared she would trace him if he registered.

Yank Bluff Good, Nazi Kills Self

German Officer's Nerve Is Weak; Seven Give Up.

WITH NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY.—A Nazi SS (elite guard) officer committed suicide in the front line hamlet of Welz because he didn't have guts enough to call a Texas bluff.

The last ditch defenders of Welz had just been ejected from the town when First Lieut. Jerrold E. Scott, Houston, Tex., came wandering up the main street with a buddy, First Lieut. Randall Nelson, Mobile, Ala.

They were looking for a house with enough left of it to make an observation post. They found a likely place, but Scott became suspicious when he saw a German motorcycle in the yard. He and Nelson silently entered and searched the upper floors. They found nothing, and Scott opened the cellar door.

"Anybody down there?" Scott yelled.

There was no answer, but he was not satisfied.

"I'm gonna throw a hand grenade down there," he bellowed.

This was strictly psychological warfare, as neither Scott nor Nelson had anything except carbines. But it worked.

One after another seven Jerries emerged and meekly surrendered. They indicated one officer remained below, so Scott approached the cellar door and ordered, "Come out with your hands up or I'll let go this grenade."

There was a moment of silence and then the sharp crack of a pistol. Scott entered the cellar to investigate and found on the floor the body of an SS lieutenant, the top of his head blown off and a smoking Luger still in his hand.

Her Fake Attack Story Leads to Accused's Death

ST. ALBANS, VT. — A teen-age girl's fictitious story that she had been attacked prompted her older brother to beat to death the neighbor she accused, police here have revealed.

Eleanor Hoague, 16, confessed that she had made up the story to avoid a scolding for tearing her stockings in a fall.

When her brother, Earl, 22, heard her version he called the alleged assailant—Fred Wanzer, 42—from a theater and took him to a doctor's office where Eleanor was under treatment. After she identified him, Hoague took Wanzer outside and punched him in the jaw. As the latter fell, he struck his head on a curbstone, fractured his skull, and died.

Grandmother Goes to Prison as a Shoplifter

SCRANTON. — A 48 - year - old grandmother with a shop-lifting record dating back to 1921, Mary Gavern of New Haven, Conn., formerly of Scranton, was sentenced to 10 months in the county prison by Judge M. J. Eagen on her plea of guilty to four charges of shoplifting.

Mrs. Gavern, represented before court by attorney Jerome E. Parker and with assistant District Attorney Ellis Berger appearing for the Commonwealth, was taken into custody by city detectives November 11, 1944. She was charged with pilfering merchandise from four central city stores.

Car Bounds Up Steps, Leaps, Ends in Crash

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—A car got out of control in front of East high school recently, bounded up the main entrance steps and then leaped 30 feet into space to crash into the building.

Driver of the vehicle, Mrs. Gail Shea, was extricated through the rear of the wreckage and taken to a hospital. Her condition is fair.

The head of a doll, which an excited student dropped in front of the careening car, rolled out from the wreckage, causing near hysteria among several high school girls.

'Whiz, Whiz, Whiz,' Went Trolley on Frolic

YONKERS, N. Y. — A vexed Yonkers railroad company reported to police: "One of our trolley cars is missing."

Then followed a flood of calls from irate suburbanites. Bell clanging, the trolley had whizzed along an unscheduled route through a half dozen communities and was found abandoned 15 miles from its barn.

The ghostly motorman apparently knew trolley cars well enough to negotiate several electrically operated switches.

A REFUGEE child, homeless, his clothes hanging in shreds, slouched against the high wall that bordered the narrow street. He gazed apathetically before him, but when the near-by gatehouse doors suddenly opened and a foreign woman, accompanied by her amah and coolie, emerged, his eyes brightened.

This fair woman, with the light-brown hair and gray eyes, reminded him of the one who used to live near his home. She had been kind to him and had often asked him in and given him sweetmeats. Perhaps this one would be like her, and give him food and a bed to sleep on. With this thought in mind he followed Lydia Denton as she walked listlessly to the Wong compound.

Lydia had not wished to attend this feast in honor of the arrival of a son and heir to Mr. and Mrs. Wong, but Wong was a valued business acquaintance and her husband did not wish to offend him.

The serving woman, her black hair oiled and smoothed into a neat bun at the nape of her neck, glanced at her mistress. She had not been the same since the bombs of the "little black devils" had struck the hospital and she had lost her wee son. After that there had been no more happiness in the Denton home.

The child peered into the basket the coolie carried. Red eggs—and fruit and sweet cakes! The eggs must be a present for the mother of a newborn son, and the sweet cakes and fruit would help defray the expenses of the feast.

In the Wong compound the serving woman proudly proffered the knitted wool jacket. The coolie emptied his basket of eggs; red eggs for a son.

At the earliest possible moment Lydia took her leave, and the amah reluctantly followed. Outside the gatehouse the boy was waiting and

"I lived in a house with a wall around it."

the serving woman stopped to speak to him. "What is your name?" she asked.

"Truly Bright," was the answer.

"Very good indeed." This was a common name for a child in her country. She opened the square of paper she carried and handed him a cake.

When they reached their compound the child went in with them. "Where did you come from?" queried the amah.

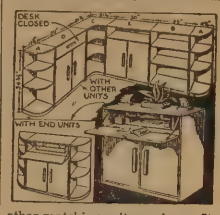
"A long way off," the boy replied. "I lived in a house with a wall around it. I used to play in the garden until the day strange soldiers broke in and I hid. When they were gone I came out and—and—" his voice faltered "—my father and mother were lying there but they couldn't speak to me. Some neighbors took me and we walked and walked. Then I lost them and went with a man on a boat. He brought me to this city."

The serving woman turned to her mistress. "He has no home," she said, "may I feed him?"

"If you wish," Lydia replied indifferently. Her mind was fixed on a plan. She intended to leave this country and go to America.

One day she paused outside the room she had fitted as a nursery. She had an impulse to bid goodbye to the dear wee clothes and the dainty belongings. Slowly she turned the key and went inside, too engrossed in her memories to notice that Truly Bright was behind her.

He stood still, his eyes roaming from the lace-trimmed bassinet to the baby carriage.



He saw the mistress touch a small flannel garment and gently lift a silken coverlet. Suddenly a delightful thought came to him and he hurried away on slippered feet as noiselessly as he had come. Presently he returned, his face aglow, a small bamboo basket in his hand. "For the new baby," he said happily.

It was as if scales had fallen from before Lydia's eyes, permitting her to see clearly for the first time in months. Her selfish absorption in her sorrow had poisoned the air around her and had caused her to forget her duty and her love for her husband. She took the basket and tears rolled down her cheeks as she looked at the contents. "Perhaps" she whispered brokenly "—perhaps—"

In the woven nest were three eggs crudely colored red. Red eggs for a son.

Desk That Matches Unit Book Shelves

IF YOU can saw straight and drive a nail you can make this useful desk. Combined with curved end units it becomes an important piece of furniture to fill a wide wall space, or it may be used with other matching units as shown. Its sleek modern lines also make it perfect for a boy's or girl's room.

Those nicely planned compartments are as easy to make as a box slipped in place and secured from the back. The pattern also shows how to make shelves and compartments underneath for storing files and records.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Overloading has been responsible for much lost tire mileage on commercial and farm motor trucks. Loading of a truck or trailer so the weight is evenly distributed to all load-carrying wheels will prove an important rubber conservation measure. It pays to check loads.

If the average rubber consumption in China, Russia and India were brought up to American rubber consumption standards, they would require 4,500,000 tons of rubber a year, nearly twice as much as the anticipated world supply of natural and synthetic rubber after the war, B. F. Goodrich officials declare.

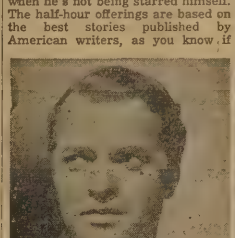
Constipation is the cause of Much Suffering

Constipation may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless corrected will finally impair the health. Symptoms associated with advancing constipation are loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired feeling and mental depression. Headache, dizziness, anemia, and skin disturbances such as acne, are commonly experienced. In severe cases, neuralgia and joint pains occur. Indigestion, with gas formation and colic, and piles and fissures frequently add to the discomforts of severe chronic cases.

No matter how many other medicines you may have tried for constipation, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION, with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you satisfactory results or your money back. Caution: Use only as directed.—Adv.



Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

By VIRGINIA VALE

ORSON WELLES is always news. Right now, vacationing from the movies and the stage, he's radio's first "head man." The title's unofficial, but it exactly describes his new radio stardom on "This Is My Best," Tuesday nights on CBS. He serves as host, narrator, and plays leading man opposite Hollywood's top-notch stars when he's not being starred himself. The half-hour offerings are based on the best stories published by American writers, as you know, if you've heard the program, and Welles plays anything from a star role to a character part. Network officials couldn't decide how to describe his job, so they finally decided just to call him "head man."

"With Abbott and Costello" is the title of a forthcoming film for Bud and Lou, heard Thursday nights on NBC. In it they'll introduce Bob Haymes as juvenile lead; he's the brother of Dick Haymes, and has just been discharged from the army.

Bob Hope will soon be represented in Madame Tussaud's famous London wax museum. The star of "The Princess and the Pirate" recently received word that he'll join the immortals of history whose effigies have been seen by millions. But Bob won't be homesick, for a friend of his, Bing Crosby, now working in "The Bells of St. Mary's," will be similarly honored.

American naval officers rescued by Rangers in the raid on the Cabanatuan prison camp on Luzon will be seen in RKO's "The Invisible Army." Arriving at San Pedro by navy PBY boat from San Francisco, they were taken to the studio, where motion pictures of them were made before they departed for home. One of the film's highlights will be a re-enactment of the raid on the camp.

"Truth or Consequences," the radio show, has been signed by RKO for "Radio Stars on Parade," musical with Wally Brown, Alan Carney and Frances Langford. Ralph Edwards and company also appear in "Seven Days Leave".

His Majesty's Canadian Grenadiers, famous military band, will represent the Dominion of Canada in Andrew Stone's musical, "Pan American Sensations of 1946." It's scheduled for early fall production, and will combine theatrical talent of both North and South America, filmed against authentic backgrounds.

That new Ginny Simms show is doing a lot for discharged veterans who were professional entertainers before they went into the service and are now trying to pick up the threads of their pre-Pearl Harbor careers. They're heard by a coast-to-coast radio audience, and a drive is made to interest producers, agencies, etc., and get contracts for the veterans appearing on the program.

"America's Town Meeting" will extend its spring tour to include San Francisco, originating its April 26th broadcast there, while the United Nations peace conference is in session. Originally California was included in the summer tour.

Jimmy Durante, starred with Garry Moore on CBS Friday nights, won't go overseas till he has his summer vacation, but his famous voice is heard on recordings at the battlefronts. Portraying the role of "The Mole," notorious gangster, Durante recorded an hour-long adventure of "Dick Tracy," with an all-star cast; the records will be shipped overseas.

ODDS AND ENDS—A lot of people drew a long breath of relief when it was announced that, after all, "It Pays to Be Ignorant" had been renewed by its sponsor, and would go right on—same show, same cast—same laughs. . . . Ted Osborne, who appears weekly in character parts for "Mystery Theater," estimates that he's appeared on every single program on the air; sounds impossible. . . . Robert Sully has solved the material problem on the new guest house he's building on his property in Brentwood. He's using discarded box-car walls, instead of new lumber, and is doing all the work himself. He's a former engineer.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

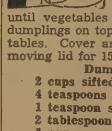
Stew and Dumplings Are a Point-Saver
(See Recipes Below)

Meat Magic

In 1944 the average civilian ate 143 pounds of meat. This year the outlook per civilian is estimated at about 134 pounds per person.

It doesn't take much mental arithmetic to make us see that we'll be doing with less meat this year than before—but then, you've probably already noticed that trend at your butcher's.

As a nation we're greater pork eaters than beef eaters, says a recent survey made by the government, but that will have to change at least for this year. Pork loins, hams, shoulders, spareribs and bacon will continue to be scarce. The higher grades of beef are going to the armed forces, while lower grades of beef, though not abundant, will be more abundant. Veal supplies are quite scarce as are the top grades of lamb.



All of this means one thing for Mrs. America. She will get less meat, and if she wants to get meaty flavor it will have to be stretched. If she doesn't do that, she will have a few meals with meat and others without.

There are good ways to stretch meat — old-fashioned ways like dumplings, bread dressings and stuffings, rice, macaroni, noodles and spaghetti. For those of you who choose having meat "as is" in your menus, there are delightful fish dishes to fill in the days when meat is unobtainable.

When you want those precious red points to do the most work for you, buy the low-point cuts and dress them up with herbs, flavorful gravies and colorful vegetables. Here's a lineup of recipes you'll well appreciate these days:

Lamb Stew With Dumplings.
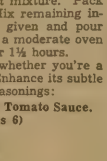
(Serves 6)
2 pounds lamb
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons lard
6 small potatoes
6 carrots
6 small onions
1 cup water

Cut lamb breast, flank or neck meat into 1½ inch cubes. Dredge in flour, then brown well on all sides in hot lard. Season, add water and simmer 1½ hours. Add vegetables. Cover and continue cooking until vegetables are tender. Drop dumplings on top of meat and vegetables. Cover and cook without removing lid for 15 minutes.



Dumplings.
2 cups sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lard
1 egg
About ¾ cup milk

Sift together dry ingredients. Cut in lard. Break egg into a one-cup measuring cup. Beat slightly with fork and add enough milk to make 1 cup liquid. Add liquid to dry ingredients. Stir lightly. Drop by spoonfuls into boiling broth or stew. Cover tightly and cook for 15 minutes without peeking. Do not remove cover. Serve at once. This recipe makes six large dumplings.

Liver is known as a variety meat because it has variety of texture and flavor. Here is a grand way to fix it:

Liver Supreme.
(Serves 6)
1½ pounds liver, sliced
¼ cup french dressing
6 carrots, sliced
6 onions
1 green pepper, sliced
½ cup water

Marinate (soak) liver in french dressing for 30 minutes in refrigerator. Brown liver in hot drippings. Top with vegetables and add the water. Cover tightly and cook slowly until both liver and vegetables are tender. Beef and pork liver require 45 minutes cooking time while lamb and veal liver need 30 minutes.

Whenever it's possible, use a combination of veal, pork and beef in your meat loaves. In the following recipe, the tastiness is increased by using sour cream, prepared mustard, paprika and Worcestershire sauce. Lemon juice adds piquancy to the meat when used, while brown sugar gives a bit of sweetening that you will enjoy. Use a large sized loaf pan for baking or shape into loaf when baking in a utility pan.

Spicy Meat Loaf.
(Serves 6 to 8)
1 pound ground beef
1 pound ground pork or veal
1½ cups bread crumbs
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup milk
Salt and pepper
½ cup sour cream
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ cup lemon juice or tomato catsup
2 teaspoons brown sugar
Dash of Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup hot water

Combine ground meat or have it ground together. Mix next four ingredients into meat mixture. Pack into a loaf pan. Mix remaining ingredients in order given and pour over loaf. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1½ hours.

You'll like trout whether you're a fish lover or not. Enhance its subtle taste with these seasonings:

Baked Trout With Tomato Sauce.
(Serves 6)
2 pounds trout
2 cups tomatoes
1 cup water
1 slice onion
3 cloves
½ teaspoon sugar
3 tablespoons bacon drippings
3 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cook tomatoes, water, onion, cloves and sugar 20 minutes. Melt drippings, add flour and stir into hot mixture. Add salt and pepper. Cook 10 minutes and strain. Clean fish and place in baking dish. Pour half the sauce over it and bake 35 minutes in a moderate oven, basting occasionally. Remove to hot platter and pour remaining sauce (hot) over fish. Garnish with parsley.

Lynn Says:

Meat Needs Stretching: Bread and cracker crumbs are natural for extending ground meats like lamb, beef, pork or veal. Use for meat loaves and patties.

Vegetables should start coming into their own for stretching stews, short ribs, roasts, etc. Carrots, onions, potatoes, green beans, tomatoes and cabbage are all mighty fine.

Don't neglect such dishes as meat pies with biscuit or mashed potato crusts. The meat mixture may be extended with gravy and vegetables.

Make surprise meat balls with rice tucked inside. Or, stretch the roast or braised meat with noodles and rich gravy.

Spaghetti and macaroni make a meal complete even if only a little meat is used. Use cream sauces with diced egg, seasoned tomato sauce or tasty gravy.

Born when the South was yet young, the L&N—now "The Old Reliable"—has survived a destructive Civil War, the reconstruction period and the passing of three generations of men both great and small.

For 95 years it has been an energizing bloodstream to the South's expanding agriculture, industry, commerce and social growth. Now, as ever, its interests are inseparably linked with the South's highest welfare and fruitful development.

With almost 5,000 miles of self-maintained steel highways and a half billion dollar investment, it daily reflects its faith in the South and the quality of its people, by still further expansion of territory, facilities and service.

It aids mightily in the present war and looks hopefully to peace when, as Private Builder and Public Servant, it will continue to work cooperatively and constructively to make a more livable and prosperous South.

It wants to be friendly, neighborly and helpful and hopes for such acceptance.

BUY WAR BONDS FOR VICTORY

L&N

Judged by any standards you please—employment, payrolls, taxes, public service—what not—the L & N is one of the great industries of the South. It is private enterprise performing a highly essential public service in peace and war. It enables Southerners to EARN MORE—BUY MORE—HAVE MORE and, as such, is entitled to receive just consideration always.

VOLUME XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1945 — NUMBER 14

SCHOOLS TO RATION CANNING SUGAR APRIL 13-14

(NOTE: This date is for Chilton County only. OPA will announce dates for other counties in Alabama

Applications for canning sugar will be prepared for all families planning to can fruit during the 1945 canning season, at the following schools on Friday, April 13, between the hours of 8:00 and 12:00 in the morning and 1:00 and 5:00 in the afternoon:

Alabama Mills School, Chilton County High School, Clanton Elementary School, Collins Chapel, Concord Junior High, Cooper Junior High, Enterprise, Isabella, Jemison, Maplesville, Mineral Springs, Mt. Pleasant, Stanton, Thomas Junior, Thorsby, Union Grove, Verbena, Vermont, Clanton Colored, and Chilton County Training School.

On Saturday April 14, the following schools will accept applications from 8:00 until 12:00 only: Chilton County High School, Jemison High School, Verbena High School and Maplesville High School.

It will be easier to file applications on Friday afternoon, April 13, between the hours of 1:00 and 5:00 o'clock than at any other time. Schools will close at 12:00 o'clock on that day so all teachers will be available for handling registrations. Only skeleton forces will work on Friday morning and Saturday morning.

Any member of the family group who is 18 years old or older can apply for the family's canning sugar. Boarders will have to file separate applications. All Ration Books No. 4 held by the family must be carried to the school where applicatons are made. The following questions will have to be answered:

1. How many pounds of sugar did you use in 1944 for making jams, jellies, preserves, etc?

2. How many pounds of sugar will you use in 1945 for jams, jellies, preserves, etc? (maximum allowance will be 5 pounds per person).

3. How many quarts (or equivalent) of finished canned fruit did you can with sugar in 1944 ?

4. How many quarts (or equivalent) of finished canned fruit will you can in 1945?

5. How many pounds of sugar did you use for canning fruit in 1944?

6. How many pounds of sugar did the Board grant you for home canning and preserving in 1944?

Answers to the above questions will have to be presented at the school and a Ration Book 4 will have to be shown for each member of the family. It will be necessary to bring a straight pin to attach ration stamps to your application.

HIGHWAY PATROLMEN MAKE QUICK WORK OF RECOVERING CAR

S. V. Miller had his automobile stolen Saturday night. It was parked in front of the Clanton Lunch Room. At 1:45 a. m. Sunday the car was recovered by local Highway Patrolmen, Glenn and Brown at the Texaco Service Station, after a running chase that just about covered the city.

According to Officer Glenn, finger prints were taken from the steering wheel and sent to Montgomery for classification, and arrests are expected in the near future.

Francis Lamar Stagg, Infant son of Mr and Mrs E. R. Staggs of Clanton, Route 1, died April 3.

Funeral services will be held at New Harmony church. Interment in New Harmony Cemetery. Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

SYMBOL OF SEVENTH WAR LOAN DRIVE. The flag raising scene shown in the forefront of the picture above is an actual view of the raising of the flag by Marines on Iwo Jima and has been selected as the official symbol of the Seventh War Loan.

Two Divisions To Lead 7th War Loan

Payroll Workers And Schools To Set Pace As Advance Guard

Alabama's Seventh War Loan drive will be led by an advance guard of Payroll Savings workers and school children who will take to the field the first week in April to start the mighty campaign aimed at dealing the killing blow to the Nazis and beginning a renewed battle against the Japs.

Units of the Payroll Savings Division even now are putting into practice various forms of strategy planned as the kick-off for the "Mighty Seventh". Every wage earner in Alabama will be urged to increase his or her savings by investing in the safest investment in the world, the United States government.

"An investment in War Bonds now is an investment in the future of Alabama cities and towns," asserted Ed Leigh McMillan, chairman of the Alabama War Finance Committee.

Intensive campaign plans have been worked out to spur the Payroll Savings program through a three-month period of active and increased War Bond participation. The accounting period for the drive will begin April 9 and continue through July 7.

The Schools At War forces, the boys and girls whose future promise depends on winning a sound peace, will add their strength to the drive by backing up the Payroll Savings group as a prelude to the drive period beginning May 14. A school Treasure Hunt has been mapped for some specially designated day in every school in Alabama. April 19 has been set as official Alabama Treasure Hunt Day but many schools whose closing date comes earlier in the season are planning to observe the day earlier, some as early as April 4.

The eyes of the whole state will be focused on these two great forces to set the pace for the opening of the drive May 14, Mr. McMillan reminded.

The follow-up guard, the seven other divisions of volunteer War Bond workers, will be set to step in and back up the advance work of the Payroll Savings Division and the Schools at War Division with new energy during the offical period of the drive.

"A good percentage of Alabama's quota is expected to be realized through the work of these two groups before the guns are sounded for the official opening of the drive," said Mr. McMillan.

"Although we might see the collapse of the Germans before the drive is started we feel sure that if this momentous announcement should come it will only serve to add a stimulating touch to the army of volunteer War Bond salespeople whose purpose will not be daunted until the war in the Pacific is over.

"Be prepared, Alabamians, to dig down deep and put your money into War Bonds when the Payroll Savings worker or the school children approach you to ask that you play a bigger and more patriotic part in the vanquishing of our enemies."

CEMETERY CLEANING AT MACEDONIA

There will be another cemetery cleaning at Macedonia Church Beat 14, on Saturday afternoon, April 7th. Everyone interested, please come and bring tools to work with.—Mrs. D. E. Moore.

GOVERNOR PROCLAIMS FRIDAY APRIL 6, ARMY DAY

Governor Sparks has proclaimed Friday, April 6th, as Army Day, in line with a congressional resolution designating the day, "I urge the civilians of the State to reconsecrate themselves on that day to the task of producing in fullest measure and with the greatest possible speed the weapons and ammunition and the materials and supplies required to equip our Army and to sustain it unto final victory", Gov. Sparks said.

A patch of imitation or real leather sewed on the knees of boys' play trousers saves time and clothing when it comes to cleaning off the mud that goes with spring marble days.

SEVENTH WAR LOAN QUOTA ANNOUNCED

Chilton County's Seventh War Loan quota of $469,000 of which $299,000 must be in Series E Bonds, was announced this week by State War Finance Chairman, Ed Leigh McMillan, who warned that this would be the hardest home front job to date but one that must be fulfilled at all costs.

The local Committee have held their first meeting and laid the groundwork for the most complete coverage of the county ever undertaken

Chilton County has set a fine record in the past six war loan drives and she will certainly repeat in the "Mighty Seventh", our biggest task so far.

Any boy wishing to take this test should be present at the above high school at 8:45 on the morning of Apr. 12. He will be expected to provide himeself with two pencils, perferably number two.

SOLDIER DROWNS IN COOSA RIVER SUNDAY

Woodrow P. Tharson, stationed at the PW Camp on the Maplesville Highway, was drowned about 3:15 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The body was recovered Monday night at 8:45 by Elijah and Milton Smitherman a short distance from where the accident occured Sunday.

Sunday night's storm had prevented work by the crew from Maxwell Field and the local citizens who aided in the search. Glenn and Brown, local Highway Patrolmen also assisted in the work

It is reported that Tharson, along with several others who were spending the day at the river, was asked to accompany a party to work a trot line. The tragedy occured while they were undertaking to do this. Miss Alice Mae Robinson and Mrs Evelyn Baron came near losing their lives in the accident but were saved by other members of the party.

The body was taken immediately to Maxwell Field where it will be prepared for burial and sent to California.

County Schools Go On Short Schedule Monday, April 9th.

Beginning next Monday, April 9, all county schools will open at 8:00 o'clock and close at 1:30 o'clock so that school children can work as much as possible on farms in the county. This short schedule was announced by the Board of Education because of exteremé shortage of farm labor.

Teachers in the county schools are making careful revisions of classroom schedules in order to maintain teaching efficiency at the highest possible level.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Stop Criticizing Women!

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

Certain idle women do drift about to afternoon bars and lounges, accumulating "whisky blotches," but the percentage is very low. Probably they are useless, anyway.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

IT SEEMS to me manifestly unfair in Congresswoman Clare Luce to say that millions of American women have done little or nothing to help the war effort except perhaps to keep their skins lily white and soft for some G.I. to touch when he comes home.

And manifestly unfair in Damon Runyon to quote this in a syndicated article, and add, on his own account, that keeping skin white is better than to let it become covered with whiskey blotches. Mr. Runyon blames what he calls the failure of women to respond to the war effort upon the "remissness of the leaders of their sex in showing the way." "If some of the prominent women of the day," he goes on to say, "had lunged forward, it would have been an inspiring example to the rank and file." He suggests that such leaders might have "marshalled big parades of females into defense plants."

He goes on to say in contrast that "hundreds of thousands" of prominent men have offered their services to the wartime effort: industrial chieftains, famous actors and journalists, doctors, movie directors and producers, and members of Mrs. Luce's own house of representatives.

Men Are Drafted.

This sort of talk makes me indignant; it seems to me unworthy of one of our top journalists. In the first place, men are drafted, and drafted with them is all the glory of uniforms, marching, flags, music, the excitement and change so dear to youth. Just how large our armies and navies would be if they were composed only of male volunteers is a question,—you know, and I know, many a stalwart lad who is safely doing something here at home when he might well be in the ranks.

The notable lack of enthusiasm in Canada's men for overseas service is causing that government grave concern. It is not entirely of their own volition that our fighting men have been flung to all the danger spots of the world.

It is the fashion now to speak slightingly of our nurses, to lament publicly that more of them do not volunteer for army and navy service. The strange thing about this criticism is that when a call was sent out for 40,000 nurses little more than a year ago, 72,000 volunteered, and 42,000 were actually accepted. There has been no call since until now, and because response to it is somewhat slow, the whole profession suffers disrepute.

The real and obvious answer to such critics and Mrs. Luce and Mr. Runyon is, of course, that women are not, never have been and never will be, as free as men to follow their desires, in war or in peace. There are close to 40 million homes in America; less than one-third of 1 per cent of these homes—about 1 in 300, is managed without a woman. Women cook, wash, clean, raise children, teach in schools; children are their supreme responsibility, husbands and homes and children need them. War is the abnormal, the extraneous thing; wifehood, motherhood, homes, are the indispensable essentials of all civilizations.

To be sure, certain idle women do drift about to afternoon bars and lounges, accumulating the aforementioned "whiskey blotches." But the percentage of these women is very low; perhaps they are mentally, physically, spiritually of a type that would make them practically useless anyway.

"Their supreme responsibility."

Highest Standard Ever.

The great mass of our women maintains a higher standard than women have ever maintained in the world before. It is a standard of decency, honesty, devotion to home and husband and children; eagerness to serve them, to prepare endless meals, wash inexhaustible dishes, gather small pencils and rubbers, telephone teachers, push a perambulator to market, decide anxiously between lessening stores of fruits and meat, go home hot and weary to put the lunch potatoes in to bake, to sterilize the baby's bottles, to mop up the front hallway, to carry a tray upstairs to a sickroom—and to go on with it, day after day, early morning until late at night.

These things must be done, and it is women who must do them, and women who do do them. A man may lock his office for a week, a month, he may close it for a whole year and be off overseas. Nobody suffers except perhaps himself, in his pocket.

But a woman may not lock two small babies in a perfectly safe room for an hour without deadly risk. She may not neglect the dish pan for one day. There are 312 items, according to recent calculations, that she must see supplied, refreshed, refrigerated, heated, dusted, smoothed, washed, ironed and starched, every day of her life.

Her husband will not wear rumpled shirts to the office; her children must not go about in wet shoes; her soup must be skimmed for government fats; her tin cans washed and flattened; her Red Cross dues paid; the six o'clock baths for Betty and Junior, their supper, the table-setting, the dinner-getting, the five minutes attention to her own appearance, may not be neglected, not one single day.

When any man's work is as vital as that of the humblest wife and mother, then it will be time to talk of the "remissness" of women in war service.

Losing Vitamin C

Homemakers who use only the juice of oranges are literally throwing vitamin C out the window, according to dietetic experts. Juicing discards edible orange flesh and materially decreases the amount of ascorbic acid (vitamin C), they say. Slicing gives better ascorbic acid value, and unstrained juice has a higher vitamin content than strained juice. Strained juice contains only half to three-fourths as much ascorbic acid as do orange segments.

HOMEMAKING COMES FIRST

By the natural organization of life, women are the homemakers. It is foolish to prate about "home front morale" and then expect women in great numbers to leave their homes and children and join the WACs, or get into factories. True, millions of women have responded to the call of national duty, without any compulsion, and have enlisted in the auxiliary services, nurses' corps, or have gone into war plants.

Most women, however, cannot desert their first responsibility, the care of their children. They cannot go to war, or to work, without neglecting the welfare of the next generation. As Miss Norris points out, they are doing a far greater service to the nation by quietly taking care of their homes than they could in some form of war work. Many mothers are giving every spare moment to the Red Cross, or some other service as it is. There are few slackers among American women, even though they do not wear uniforms and carry arms.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

WELL MANAGED PEACE ECONOMY MUST BE PLANNED

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Some gross misreading and misinterpretations have developed over a series of four column reports I wrote from south Atlantic war centers concerning the outlook and thinking of the people in all walks and works of life, their fears and discouragements.

Their attitude cannot possibly be misunderstood. It is reasonable, nonpartisan, not a "viewpoint" but a general condition—simply this:

A—There is more cash in private hands than ever before in the history of any nation; more money in savings accounts; more cashable bonds. At the same time there is a greater demand for goods needed in every phase of living. If this piled-up cash could be used for the orderly purchase of needed goods, there should be no chance of depression or bad times for three to five years ahead.

B—Yet the people generally do not think about such things. Naturally they are inclined to look only at their own individual future problem, the soldier to his returning job, the war worker to a new job somewhere at how much money, the war community to how it will fare in reconversion, also the business man; the poor about inflated ,postwar prices, the rich about taxes, the teacher and white collar worker about his fixed income in a world of inflated prices, etc., etc.

No class can see security ahead, and as a result there has grown up a large number of people whose thinking about their own problems has led them to discouragement and disheartenment on the threshold of victory.

C—This discouragement should be dispelled by government action holding out prospects of security. These fears need not be realized because we have the ingredients for success —the cash and the demand for goods. All we need is wise, sound handling of these ingredients:

D—To solve the problem, Mr. Roosevelt could well call in the brains of the country as he did for the war production job. He could organize national reconversion for labor, business man, farmer, etc., on a firm basis to inspire general confidence. He could organize economically to avoid inflation in prices and deflation in wages, for stability in both, altering his tax program, spending, lending and every other government policy toward the job at hand. This would restore a sense of security all down the line—and do the job.

The reaction to this simple analysis of observable facts and a constructive, rather obvious, remedy betrayed the confusion existing in the country.

One editor said this was a political attack upon the New Deal, trying to spread fear. The truth is the New Dealers are more discouraged than any other group, as witness their (Wallace) proposal to spend-lend huge government sums for 60,000,000 jobs to handle unemployment.

Another editor considered it an attack upon the south, although the report said I had observed the same condition in public thought on a trip through the midwest a few weeks earlier and in mail from all sections.

Claims No Fear.

A San Francisco editor said the condition could not be true of the Pacific coast because he had interviewed most of the people on his paper and found not one of them discouraged about their future.

I would go further and say that the average person who does not look ahead is in that same category, but that the leaders of every group from labor to capital must look ahead and do see these things. Newspaper people on fixed salaries would suffer as much as any other group from price inflation.

A Chicago financial editor said: "But look at the stock market."

Yes, look at it, and look at what it was in 1929 with inflated values that no one did anything about in time. And while you are looking, ascertain how many race track gamblers are playing stock-horses now that the tracks have been closed, without any thought of the future of the country.

I do not believe in pessimism. A man who allows himself to be either an optimist or a pessimist in these critical times is only fooling himself.

It may be true a great many war workers have only an amount set aside equal to one or two months' salary, and therefore must get jobs within 30 to 60 days after losing their war positions, or go on relief. They may have been spending wildly, but this phase also could be handled by an orderly program pushing this type first into the millions of jobs now crying for a worker in civilian life—stores, filling stations, restaurants, etc., releases from the army should be tied in with national economic necessities.

New York Township Has Jail for Sale

NEW YORK. — Castile township in New York has a jail for sale and an official said it would make a very satisfactory garage.

The town board rejected 3 bids because they were too low — the highest was $300. The building is said to be worth $1,500.

There has been no occupant of the jail for the last three years.

Officer Kills Six, Has the Evidence

Mails Home Photographs of His Victims.

IN GERMANY. — The skinny young lieutenant looked almost girlish except for his sandy mustache. But killers come in strange trappings, and he had killed six men—all Germans.

He had pictures to prove it.

"I didn't have any camera of my own," he said, "so I just crawled up to the men I shot and took their pictures out of their paybooks.

"I mailed them to my folks. I wanted to show them I wasn't over here for nothing—and that was the best evidence I could think of. I am pretty sure I have killed more than that—but there were other soldiers shooting too, those times. That makes it hard to be certain. But those six guys I nailed myself. I fought them alone and killed them alone."

He paused and then added slowly:

"I don't mind my folks knowing what I did in the war, but my children will never know that I ever killed a man. For all I will ever tell them they will think I spent my time in the army sitting in a supply dump, passing out rations. I couldn't stand for my little daughter to learn I had killed anybody. She might not understand. Things will be different in a few years when she will be looking at things in a different way.

"She might not understand—and I don't want her ever to know."

Dog Roams 6,000 Miles; Finally Locates Owner

PITTSBURG, CALIF. — Joker,, a black cocker spaniel, was desolate when his master, Capt. Stanley C. Raye, went off to war.

For 13 days he wandered restlessly around home, then disappeared.

But Joker knew where he was going—and got there.

Mrs. Raye this week received a letter from her husband—6,000 miles away on a South Pacific island. Joker is with him and as excited as the captain at the reunion.

The captain wrote that he was sitting in his tent when an officer came down the road leading a black cocker on a leash.

Raye shouted one word: "Joker!" It was enough. The little dog's frenzy of joy persuaded the foster owner to surrender title on the spot.

Captain Raye said the officer told him he had found the dog trotting through an army camp, hurriedly sniffing this way and that "as though he were looking for some one." The officer adopted Joker and took him along with him to the Pacific.

Though Income-Tax Free, This Man Pays Up Anyway

LOS ANGELES.—J. M. Myska, 65, who makes cotton candy for carnival concessionaries, says he doesn't earn enough to pay a federal income tax, but he always contributes something to "my government."

Usually it's $100 a year, but this time Harry C. Westover, internal revenue collector, announced he had received $75 from Mr. Myska with a note explaining the latter had been ill and couldn't make so much cotton candy.

"I hope this enclosure, although it is not so large as I would like, will help bring this horrible war to an immediate end, so we all can be free again and our boys on both fronts can return home," said Mr. Myska's note.

Russian Soldier Finds His Long Lost Sister

MOSCOW.—Sgt. Ivan Uliashenko was happiest of all the Red army conquerors of Elbing. He found his sister there.

The sergeant was riding in a truck past a group of 100 Soviet women near the East Prussian city, where they had been held as labor slaves, Pravda related. His sister spotted him and called out. Uliashenko jumped from the truck and embraced her. The sister, Alexandra, was taken off by the Nazis when they overran an Orel province village in 1941.

Maritime Commission Is Selling Surplus Stocks

WASHINGTON. — The maritime commission announced that its surplus stocks available for disposal on January 1 amounted to $6,142,721.

About 50 per cent was in new and used marine engines, ranging from 200 to 1,000 horsepower. Some sales have been made for export account. The Contract Settlement and Surplus Materials divisions of the commission has been using a "fixed price" sale policy, with the result that sales thus far have brought 81 per cent of original cost.

PRESTON FOSTER has 20th Century-Fox over a barrel regarding his motorcycle. A clause in his contract says he mustn't ride it while he's working in a picture—but from the first days of "Thunderhead—Son of Flicka" he rode it into the studio and nobody said a word. He hadn't enough gas to drive his car from Newhall every day, so the ban on the motorcycle was lifted. He took Rita Johnson on a death-defying ride around the studio to celebrate—Rita's one of the leads in the picture—and afterward she commented "No wonder the studio doesn't want him to ride that thing. With him a motorcycle isn't a means of transportation—it's a lethal weapon."

John Conte, who's back at his post as master of ceremonies of the Frank Morgan radio program, accomplished a lot during his six-months absence. He had his first featured role in a picture—"Lost in a Harem," with Abbott and Costello—in which he played opposite a handsome gal named Marilyn Maxwell; and they were married a short time after the picture was finished.

Barbara Brown gave up the role of Robert Hutton's mother in Warners' "To Young to Know" because of illness; when she recovered they cast her in the same picture, this time as the woman who adopts Hutton's baby.

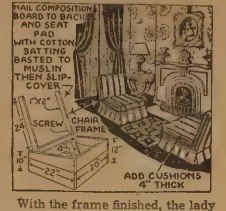
A wedding performed on September 26, 1922, was reenacted down to the last detail for "Captain Eddie." On the screen it duplicates the news pictures of the original ceremony almost exactly. Even the signs on the back of the car the bride and groom drove away in are the same. Fred MacMurray and Lynn Bari are the actors; the original participants were Adelaide Frost and Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

Like a lot of us, Frank Ross is tired of those Hollywood searches for "unknowns" that end with a Hollywood personality getting the role. He's really searching for an unknown beauty for the role of "Salome" in "The Robe"; he gets mail by the ton, but looks at every photograph himself. Attractive girls between the ages of 16 and 25 still have a chance.

Audiences gasp and laugh at a scene in "It's a Pleasure" in which Sonja Henie goes up to Michael O'Shea's apartment in an elevator, because the elevator operator looks so much like Frank Sinatra. His name is Dave Willock, and he says he's lost a good many movie parts because of his resemblance to "The Voice"; resemblances like that have wrecked more than one Hollywood career.

Florence Lake, who has practically made a career of playing Edgar Kennedy's wife in his RKO comedies, has been cast for a comedy role in "George White's Scandals of 1945." Just for a change, this time she plays a mother—not Kennedy's either.

Ingrid Bergman has a "gismo"—marine lingo for an "oscar." The bronze statuette of a marine was awarded to her by Leatherneck, the official publication of the corps, as the top actress of 1944, and it's a trophy to be proud of.



Dick Long, Hollywood high school student, not only landed the role of Claudette Colbert's son in "Tomorrow is Forever," but his screen test was so good that he was given a term contract with International Pictures, instead of a one-picture contract.

ODDS AND ENDS

The Warner Bros.' picture based on the story of Sgt. Al Schmid, blinded marine hero of Guadalcanal, has a new title—instead of "This Love of Ours," it will be called "Pride of the Marines." . . . Florence Halop, radio actress currently appearing in "David Harding—Counterspy," is the sister of Billie Halop, one of the Dead End Kids, now with the army signal corps in France. . . . Kathleen Norris makes her bow as a writer of radio daytime serials; the popular novelist is writing "Bright Horizons," the serial starring Joan Alexander and Dick Kollmar, on CBS.

Easy to Make Your Upholstered Chairs

THIS pair of chairs, so much at home in a Victorian setting, would be just as appropriate in a modern room. They are comfortable too, and anyone who can nail together a box can make the wooden frame. Scrap or even old boxes will do, for this foundation part is entirely covered.

With the frame finished, the lady with needle and thread and a few tacks will probably take over. The padding is easy—just cotton batting basted to muslin over the seat and back. The cushion may have a cotton filling or may be filled with feathers or kapoc. The rest is a simple covering job.

NOTE—Pattern No. 250 gives large diagrams for all parts of the chair frame with construction steps, padding and covering clearly illustrated. A bill of materials giving lumber estimate, amount of padding and covering materials is included. To get Pattern No. 250 enclose 15 cents with name and address direct to:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

One government synthetic rubber plant, operated by The B. F. Goodrich Co., in 14 months produced in synthetic rubber the equivalent to the rubber yield of approximately 14 million rubber trees during the same period.

Four lumber companies subscribed to the cost of building a 50-mile private road for hauling logs from an Oregon forest. The road is entirely on private ground and free from all state and local regulations, and trucks can be operated thereon license-free.

Shoes made with new non-marking synthetic rubber soles are among the new items in the rubber footwear field.

Constipation Is the cause of Much Suffering

Constipation may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless corrected will finally impair the health. Symptoms associated with advancing constipation are loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired feeling and mental depression. Headache, dizziness, anemia, and skin disturbances such as acne, are commonly experienced. In severe cases, neuralgia and joint pains occur. Indigestion, with gas formation and colic, and piles and fissures frequently add to the discomforts of severe chronic cases.

No matter how many other medicines you may have tried for constipation, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION, with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you satisfactory results or your money back. Caution: Use only as directed.—Adv.

So Clever

By ALICE WRIGHT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

SATSUMA strutted on his bantam legs as he worked about the hedges of the park close to the great shipyards. So clever! Many things could be concealed among the lowly tools, and many too beneath the humble guise of a gardener. But no temporary abasement was too much when it was for the glory of the Rising Sun. None—not even the killing of one's own brother.

It had been so easy to be smuggled into the barbarians' country and make his way to where lived his brother Mitsuna in this mid-western city of shipbuilding along the muddy river. A swift rip of the knife, a note of resignation to the Yankee capitalist who had employed Mitsuna as yard boy, and Satsuma became Mitsuna, a naturalized citizen of the United States whose record was faultless in the eyes of the investigators.

He spat venomously as he recalled the large, lazy man with so sharp eyes who pretended to enjoy the park the while he was observing Satsuma. But Satsuma was too smart to be caught off guard and, by ways known to himself, he had discovered that the man, also disguised in humble dress, was Lieutenant Roland Mason of Naval Intelligence.

As the morning wore on he began to wish that Lieutenant Mason would appear. It would be so good to fool him with his new ruse, to look so stupid while knowing he was being so clever. His shears clipped sharply along the hedge, his bright little eyes intently watching the entrance to the park.

Ah! The lazy-looking one had entered and seated himself on a bench across the lagoon. It took Satsuma over half an hour to move toward him, methodically clipping as if oblivious to the other's presence. Satsuma had patience. If Lieutenant

Ah! The lazy-looking one had entered and seated himself.

Mason should decide to speak he would halt and prattle in the loose American fashion though he would be guiding the conversation to an objective. If not, he would continue on his way and await another opportunity.

"Nice day." Lieutenant Mason's voice was as lazy as he pretended to be, and his eyes regarded Satsuma dully.

Satsuma straightened, a mask of stolidity slipping over his features. "Very nice," he said in careful English. He could not resist adding, "You visit often."

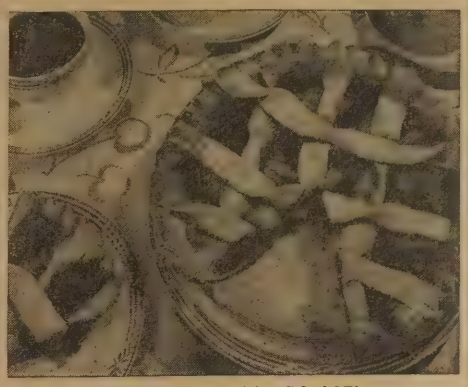
"I like the view. Don't you?"

Satsuma gazed around the park, carefully avoiding the yards. "Much work," he shrugged.

"It helps to keep up appearances." Mason idly tapped the newspaper he was holding. "You Chinese are making it plenty tough for the monkey-men."

Although his spirit writhed under the double insult Satsuma was too wary to let the lieutenant know his barb had hit home. "I am good American citizen." He smiled blandly and bent to resume his work.

Now was the time to let the picture work itself out of his pocket. The lieutenant would rise to the bait.



The fact that he and his brother looked much alike had made Satsuma's precaution simple. He had secured a car of the same make and year as Mitsuna's, had pored over the records at the courthouse to get the correct license number, and had manufactured a plate of that same year. Then, a snapshot of himself in front of the automobile with the license showing.

At last the photograph fell from his pocket, and Satsuma moved slowly on his way. He barely concealed a triumphant grin as he saw the slow one move swiftly for it and examine it with so sharp eyes before he called in his slow voice, "You dropped something!"

"Ah yesss! Thank you so much." Satsuma returned with a gleam of something akin to pleasure in his bright little eyes. As he held out his hand to take the picture the cold bite of metal snapped over his wrist.

"So sorry!" Lieutenant Mason's voice crackled. "You Japs are so good at copying. Too bad! But in Missouri in 1943 the licenses were only small tags set over the outdated large metal ones which you have taken the pains to reproduce. You see, the metal we saved that way has long been flying over Tokyo."

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Morale Builder . . . Juicy, Colorful Pie
(See Recipes Below)

Dessert Appeal

There are some foods that just naturally make for a good, homey feeling. There's pie for one. The family likes to see the preparation and then smell the good and finally, taste the juicy sweetness of berries or fruit nestling against a tender, flaky crust.

Fondness for pie goes back a long way and has not abated even during rationing and shortages of sugar and fruit. It's a good dessert with which to top off the meal which has been light or a little shy of appetite appeal.

Then, too, there are cakes that fill the need for sweetness and cater a bit to the appetite. Fortunately there have been developed recipes which are low in sugar and easy to make.

A good pie or cake, baked once a week, will give the family a sense of well being and hominess that is so important in these days of rush and activity. Select one of the following recipes especially designed for wartime eating:

Cherry-Rhubarb Pie.

1 package frozen red tart cherries or 1 cup canned
1 package frozen rhubarb or 2 cups canned or fresh
1 cup juice
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca

Combine all ingredients and place in an unbaked pie shell. Top with full crust, crisscross or cutout crust. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 30 to 40 minutes. Meringue topping may be used on the pie if desired. It should be piled on after the pie has baked, then baked for 15 minutes longer in a moderate oven.

Chiffon Pie.

1¼ cups sugar
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups boiling water
1 lemon
1 orange
3 eggs
1 unbaked pie shell

Mix the flour and sugar together in a saucepan. Stir in boiling water and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add slightly beaten egg yolks, the juice and grated rinds of both lemon and orange. Cook until thick, then cool. Pour filling into the crust and pile high with meringue made by beating the egg whites with ½ cup granulated sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Bake in a slow oven for 15 minutes.

Pecan pie adds a rich, hearty finishing note to the meal. Part of its sweetening is corn syrup, so little sugar is required. To prevent crust from becoming soggy, let the unbaked crust chill thoroughly in refrigerator before baking.

Pecan Pie.

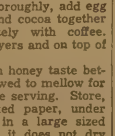
¼ cup butter or substitute
½ cup sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
3 eggs
1 cup shelled pecans
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter, add sugar, syrup and beaten eggs. Mix well, add pecans and vanilla and pour into an unbaked pie shell. Bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

A pie that is becoming increasingly popular is this cottage cheese pie because it uses inexpensive ingredients for both crust and filling. The spicy, lemony flavor is delicious and the texture of the cheese filling is light and fine-grained:

Cheese Pie.

Crust:
12 to 15 vanilla wafers, rolled fine
¼ cup sugar
3 tablespoons butter or substitute
Filling:
1 cup cottage cheese, sieved
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¾ cup milk
2 eggs
½ cup sugar
Rind of ½ lemon
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
Cinnamon



Press the cheese dry and put through a sieve. Add the melted butter to it. Dissolve cornstarch in milk. Beat eggs, add sugar. Combine the mixtures, then add rind and juice, salt and dash of cinnamon. To make crust mix crumbs, butter and sugar. Press on bottom and sides of pie plate or spring form, keeping ½ cup mixture for the top.

Bake the pie in a moderate oven for 35 to 40 minutes.

Honey Nut Cake.

½ cup butter or substitute
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup honey
¾ cup water
2¼ cups sifted cake flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped nuts
4 egg whites

Cream butter, sugar, honey. Add alternately the sifted dry ingredients and water. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites last. Bake in two nine-inch layer pans in a moderate oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

The nicest kind of icing for this cake combines the texture of creamed sugar and butter (or substitute) and the flavor of mocha, which may be left over cold coffee:

Mocha Icing.

6 tablespoons butter or substitute
1 egg yolk
2 cups powdered sugar
2 tablespoons left over coffee
1½ tablespoons cocoa
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter thoroughly, add egg yolk. Sift sugar and cocoa together and add alternately with coffee. Spread between layers and on top of cake.

Cakes made with honey taste better if they are allowed to mellow for several days before serving. Store, covered with waxed paper, under a cake cover, or in a large sized cookie tin so that it does not dry out.

When baking honey cakes, it is best to grease the pan, cover with waxed paper which is greased before pouring in the batter.

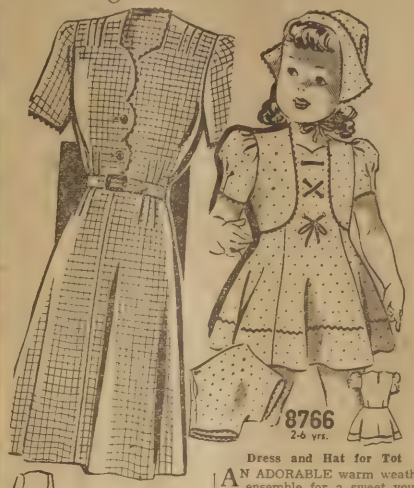
Sugar-Easy Sweets: When you want a good icing for a cake, sprinkle chocolate bits over top of warm cake and allow to melt in broiler and run over the sides.

Beat two egg whites until stiff and fluffy and whip in 1 cup of jelly. Colorful icing.



Powdered sugar can't be beat for angel food or sponge cakes. Sift it on the cake through a cut-out doily to get a pretty pattern.

Beat egg whites stiff and add honey gradually to them. One-half cup of honey for 1 egg white is the correct proportion.

For plain yellow cakes there's little better than creaming 2 tablespoons of butter with 6 tablespoons of brown sugar and ½ cup of chopped nuts. Spread on warm cake and broil for 5 minutes.

World Peace Jubilee Held In 1872 Stupendous Event

The most stupendous musical event to take place in America was the World Peace Jubilee, held in Boston from June 17 to July 4, 1872, to celebrate the end of the Franco-Prussian war, says Collier's. Supplemented by a chorus of 20,000, the orchestra comprised 2,000 instruments, including a bass drum 25 feet in diameter.

To lead this vast aggregation in a rendition of one song, "The Beautiful Blue Danube," the composer, Johann Strauss, was brought from Vienna at a cost of $20,000.

Easy Raised Muffins a Welcome Change

Make them with Fleischmann's yellow-label Yeast—the only fresh yeast with more EXTRA vitamins.

RAISED CORN MUFFINS

1¾ cups corn meal
1½ cups milk, scalded
2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons brown sugar
4 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1 cake Fleischmann's Yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
2 eggs, well beaten
3 cups sifted flour

Stir the corn meal very slowly into the scalded milk. Mix in salt, brown sugar and melted butter or margarine. Cool to lukewarm. Dissolve Fleischmann's Yeast in lukewarm water and add to lukewarm corn-meal mixture. Add eggs and flour; beat well. Fill well-greased muffin pans half full. The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Way To Verify Peace Rumors

There is a new crop of peace rumors in the air, with news from various neutral capitals that the Germans are putting out feelers, seeking terms.

The military situation in Europe furnishes evidence to support the idea such a move is overdue from the Germans but there is little use in becoming excited.

The is one sure way to know when the peace rumor is authentic—when General Eisenhower says so.

Speed And Greater Speed

An idea of what is ahead of the country, so far as railroad travel is concerned, is easily obtained by noting that a new 4,000-horsepower Diesel passenger locomotive is geard for a speed of 98-miles an hour.

A fairly good indication of what is ahead of the country, so far as automobile transportation is concerned, can be gleaned from the experience of the past. The laws limiting speed have been gradually raised with the development of better highways and improved automobiles. The same thing will continue in the future.

It is in the air, however, where the average American will get his speedy travel in the years to come. The aircraft of today travel much faster than one would have expected and nobody is foolish enough to put a limit upon speeds that may become possible in the present generation.

Old Clothes Can Save Lives

A national drive for 150,000,000 lbs. of used clothing will get underway this month and the clothes collected will be shipped to war victims as a free will gift from the American people.

Officials who know their facts tell us that as many war victims have died from exposure and lack of adequate clothing as from starvation. Clothing relief they say, ranks high in urgency.

Henry J. Kaiser, industrialist, has accepted the chairmanship of the nation-wide drive and key men are being asked to cooperate all over the nation. Back of the drive is the idea that many Americans will make a generous effort to provide clothing for the children, the aged and the homeless—the helpless victims of the great war.

While the drive is not to collect scraps it is based upon the conviction that many of us have old clothes which we do not need but which we, for many reasons, have kept. These articles of clothing can be of great value to those who have none as good and your gift of surplus clothing may save a life somewhere.

Backing Price Control

The effort to establish price control on a firm basis in the United States, in the interest of all the people, cannot succeed unless the OPA has the active support of Americans.

Regardless of the rules and regulations set up by the OPA, the situation will get out of control if buyers willingly pay more than ceiling prices. The black markets that have sprung up throughout the country, and which threaten the success of the price control effort, are supported by individuals who, for all practical purposes, are just as guilty as the sellers.

Everybody knows that there is a huge surplus of money in the United States, that there is a scarcity of goods and services and that without regulation prices would skyrocket. This would lead to a disastrous inflation.

The control of prices is a necessity in connection with the prosecution of the war. Without control, the nation would have to spend many additional billions to promote its warfare and, in addition, a vicious spiral of adjustments would pyramid prices to a dangerous and artificial level.

The average American, who reads this article, may think that the job of price control can be left to the Government. This is a serious mistake. No Government can enforce regulations to prevent inflation unless it has the cooperation of its citizens. Everytime an individual pays more that the ceiling price for anything, or she, adds impetus to the force that threatens inflation. It will not do to blame the avidity of sellers without denouncing the callousness of buyers.

Where they are and How they are

Pfc James M. Parrish, Jr., of Clanton and Birmingham, husband of Mrs Nelle Ross Mullins Parrish, and son of Mr and Mrs James M. Parrish has been in the service 13 months and overseas since August 26, 1944. He is a member of the 99th Division of the 393rd Infantry of the First Army in Germany. Pfc Parrish was awarded the "COMBAT INFANTRYMAN'S BADGE" for outstanding duty in combat with the infantry in Belgium in December.

Following is a write-up taken from the paper "BATTLE BABY" which is the official paper from the 99th Divisional headquarters of the First Army.:

"WIRE CREW LOOPS A HUNDRED JERRY'S"

"One hundred Germans captured by the 3rd Battalion of the 393rd Infantry in it's push to the Rhine will never know they were taken indirectly by three members of a wire crew.

Pfc. James Parrish of Clanton, Ala. was laying wire in the dark toward Cologne when he saw approximately 100 Jerry's silhoutted against a burning straw stack. He called his buddies Pfc NOBEL BOSQUEZ of Fort Worth, Texas and Cpl. ANTHONY ZEIKOSKI, of Wapwallopen, Pa., and told them what he saw.

Zeikoski phoned the message to rear and then all three laid down their pliers and other tools to pick up their M1's to stand guard over the unsuspecting prisoners until a 24-man patrol arrived.

After a brief, but decisive skirmish the Germans were taken prisoners.

Technician Fourth Grade William C Littlejohn, son of Mrs Annie C. Littlejohn, 1309 2nd Avenue North, is now serving as motor sergeant with the 205th Military Police Co., which was awarded the Meritorious Service Unit Plaque at Allied Force Headquarters in Italy.

This plaque was presented for outstanding work done by the company in providing security when Allied Force Headquarters moved from North Africa to Italy in the summer of 1944. Sgt. Littlejohn has been over seas 38 months.

RECEIVES COMMISSION IN NAVAL RESERVE

Joseph Rhodes Haun, 22, son of Mr Charles Carrol Haun of Thorsby, Ala. was commissioned an Ensign in the Naval Reserve and designated a Naval Aviator recently at the Naval Air Training Base at Pensacola, Fla.

Having completed his intermediate training at the "Annapolis of the Air" he will be ordered to duty either at an instructor's school for further training or at an operational base.

Prior to entering the Naval service, Ensign Haun attended Berea College for three and a half years.

Sgt Thomas H. Phalan, son of Mrs Anna L. Phalan, of Thorsby, boasts possession of the only mode of private transportation at an Aleutian Base. His vehicle is a bicycle. He recently acquired it, new and sparkling, as a prize for submitting the winning entry in a contest to name the new post exchange on that island. The name Sgt Phalan suggested was "Aleut".

This Sgt can now enjoy the services of the newest and most completely stocked post exchange in the Northern Pacific area, and at the same time have, always at his disposal a way to get there.

S-Sgt Dan C. Alred from Gunter Field spent the weekend here with his mother, Mrs. Hattie Alred.

T-5 Thomas Noah, son of Mrs Nettie Noah, of Route One, Clanton, is among the men who served with the famed 42nd Engineer Construction Battalion, that "built and rebuilt Alaska". This Battalion received a long-due honor from the War Department this week, when it was presented its own hard-won battle streamer at Fort Lewis Army Service Forces training center.

Pvt. James Carl Martin from Fort Lewis, Washington is spending some time here with his wife and parents, Mr and Mrs J. Mell Martin.

Sgt. and Mrs Earl Melton and daughter of Montgomery spent the weekend here with relatives and friends.

Pfc Bill Minor from Fort Benning, Ga., was here for Easter with his family.

Pfc Marcus Folk, from Camp Lee, Va., spent the week-end here with his family and friends.

Pvt. James (Gabby) Tiffin from Camp Shelby, Miss., spent a few days recently with his wife and children.

Corp Harry U. Boyd, husband of Mrs Eula Faye Boyd of Clanton, recently arrived at an A. U. S. Strategic Air Force Station in England, and received a brief orientation course designed to help him adjust himself to life in a combat zone.

Jack Lawrence, Store keeper 2-C and Mrs Lawrence and their daughter, were here with Mr and Mrs J. P. Lawrence over the week-end, Jack is enroute from Miami, Fla., to Galveston, Texas.

Agricultural Classes Visit Experiment Station At Auburn

The vocational agriculture classes of Chilton County High School visited the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station located at Auburn last Friday March 30.

The boys met at the agricultural building Friday morning at 7:00 and began the trip by way of Wetumpka. The group traveled by a truck driven by Mr. James Dennis, graduate of Auburn in 1938, and were accompanied by their teacher, Mr. James D. Tyler.

The classes arrived in Auburn at 10:00 a. m. and began a tour of the experiment station under the guidance of Mr. Turney, a professor in the Animal Husbandry Department. The boys were very much impressed with the methods and work carried on by the experiment station. Much attention was given to the livestock program being carried out by the station. The boys visited the swine, beef cattle, and dairy cattle experiments which were explained briefly by professor Turney.

The group had a chance to see "Teddy" 1944 grand champion calf of the International Livestock Show at Chicago, who was on exhibition at the Firestone Rubber Co.

The return trip was made through the Tuskegee Institute and Montgomery. The classes had a chance to compare and discuss the different farming methods carried on in different sections along the two routes.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Beginning this month, all Circles of the Baptist W. M. S. of Clanton First Church, will hold their home meetings on the second Monday instead of the fourth. This will be explained in detail at the next meeting which will be held on April 9th in the following homes at 3 o'clock:

Circle Two — Mrs Patterson Hicks.
Circle Three — Mrs Chas Wade
Circle Four — Mrs Lester Wagoner.
Circle Five — Mrs. R. W. Lowe.
Circle Six — Mrs. J. P. Hayes.

The regular Second Sabbath service in this church will be held as usual at 11 a. m. on the Sabbath; at the close of the sermon, the Lord's Supper will be observed and at the close of the morning service the Session will meet for a few minutes.

The pastor expects to reach Clanton sometime during the morning. He will be happy to know of any who may be sick, so that he may visit same.

As we have but one service the pastor hopes to see all our people at this service, and all friends and strangers who will worship with us, a welcome awaits you.

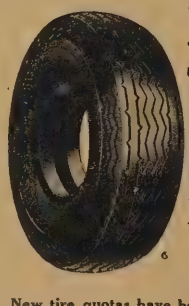
CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager



It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens, affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an Abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

CASUALTY LIST

By B. F. AUSTIN, M. D., State Health Officer

This is a casualty list. Not the kind you see in our papers every day reporting those killed or wounded or missing on the field of battle. But a casualty list just as tragic and just as important to America.

It is the casualty list which tells of the thousands of men, women, and children who are killed or wounded by venereal disease in this country every year. It tells of the 100,000 deaths syphilis causes in the United States each year. It tells of the hundreds of thousands of men and women—the crippled, the blind, the insane—who are the victims of syphilis and gonorrhea. It tells of the thousands who are missing, from the home, from industry, from active life in the community because of venereal disease.

It is a casualty list even larger than our war losses!!

There are an estimated 3,200,000 cases of syphilis in this country. Approximately six times as many cases of gonorrhea are contracted each year in comparison with new syphilis infections.

The efforts of our public health officers and our private doctors are reducing this appalling casualty list each year. But the progress is slow and we will never reach our final goal—the wiping out of these diseases—until the public gives its interest and its aid. There are ways every citizen can help—through educational campaigns, through support of local health departments, through cleaning up vice conditions. Will you do your share?

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Smash at Heart of Reich As Enemy's Defenses Crumble; Congress Renews Tariff Fight

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

As General Patton's drive into the Reich developed, droves of German prisoners like these surrendered when entrapped.

EUROPE:
Berlin Bound

In what the Germans themselves called the week of greatest decision, U. S. and British armies poured across the Reich from the west while the enemy high command strove desperately to reestablish organized resistance.

Touched off by the crossing of the Rhine along its entire length, the mighty push, involving upwards of 1,200,000 U. S. and British troops, threw the enemy's defenses into turmoil, with Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' 1st and Lt. Gen. George Patton's U. S. 3rd armies leading the advance deep into the heart of southern Germany.

As the great U. S. and British thrust unfolded, the Germans put up their staunchest resistance about the Ruhr valley in the north, where Field Marshal Kesselring strove to hold his lines at all costs to prevent a break-through to the east.

Patton Upsets Foe

To the south, however, it was a different story, with Generals Hodges' and Patton's armored bursts through the thinly held and forested westerwald posing a difficult problem for the Nazi command. Apparently caught off balance by Patton's quick passage of the Rhine after the collapse of resistance in the Saar, the enemy could not react sharply to the breakthrough and lost valuable time in organizing reserves far to the rear.

Gen. Eisenhower

Considering the U. S.'s southern push of the greatest significance, the Germans said it could not only lead to a juncture with Russian forces driving eastward from Silesia, but could also achieve the historic objective of cutting the Reich in two along the Main river.

While Supreme Commander Eisenhower's U. S. and British forces streamed eastward across a crumbling Germany, Russian forces maintained the heaviest pressure on enemy lines all the way from the Baltic to Hungary.

All along the Berlin front, the Reds poured in additional troops for the tough drive through the capital's heavily defended forefield, while farther to the south two Russian armies hammered at the historic Sudeten mountain gateway to Czechoslovakia and two more forces smashed at the Hungarian passage to Austria.

Break-throughs in the south would imperil Nazi plans for a last ditch stand in the surrounding mountain mass of their remaining large industrial area.

Hard Fight Ahead

But though Allied armies were on the quick move both in the west and east, General Eisenhower cautioned against the conclusion that the road to Berlin would stand wide open.

Because of the eventual necessity of U. S. and British forces to brake their romp to enable supplies to catch up to them, the Germans may be allowed enough time to reorganize a line to the rear, he said.

"I believe that, so far as he is able, the German will stand and fight wherever we find him," Eisenhower said. "The elimination of German troops west of the Rhine was one of the greatest victories of this or any other war."

LOSE RESOURCES

When deprived of the Philippine islands, Japan will lose large tonnages of iron ore, chrome ore and manganese which her steel industry needs for vital war production. The islands also are rich in other natural resources.

In 1940, Japan obtained 1,310,805 net tons of iron ore from the Philippines, the entire production of iron ore in the islands. In seven months of 1941 iron ore shipments to Japan totaled 954,300 tons, it was disclosed.

PACIFIC:
Warns Japs

Even while American forces closed on the approaches to the Japanese homeland, Fleet Comdr. Adm. Ernest King declared that we were first gaining a position from which we could assault the heart of the empire.

Latest of the American assaults was on the Ryukyu islands, lying midway between the big enemy air base of Formosa and the Japanese homeland. Possession of the Ryukyus would furnish the rapidly growing U. S. air force in the Pacific with yet another advance base for peppering vital military and industrial installations in enemy homeland, already smoking from concentrated B-29 and carrier plane raids.

In declaring that American forces were gaining a springboard for the all-out smash on Japan itself, Admiral King made no bones about U. S. objectives. Said he: "That is our goal and the enemy is welcome to know that we shall continue to press him with every means at our command. We must never forget that there is a long, tough, laborious road ahead."

TARIFF:
New Fight

America's historic tariff question came to the fore again with President Roosevelt asking congress to slash levies 50 per cent under January 1 levels in extending the reciprocal trade agreements for three years, and Republican members of congress opposing the move.

Should the program go through, it would mean that tariffs on some items would be cut 75 per cent under the rates established by the Smoot-Hawley bill of 1930. The original reciprocal trade agreements act in 1934 provided for a 50 per cent cut in those rates, and since that reduction already has been made on some items, another decrease of 50 per cent would amount to 75 per cent in all.

In advocating a further cut in tariffs along with extension of the reciprocal trade agreements, the President said that not only would increased exports to the U. S. enable foreign countries to buy more goods from us, but additional employment would be created in the U. S. in the processing and distributing industries. Approval of the program would be vital to the foundation of postwar international cooperation, Mr. Roosevelt added.

In bucking the President's proposal, GOP members of congress repeated the traditional argument that lower tariffs would spell an increase in the importation of cheaper goods with which higher paid American producers would be unable to compete. Such a situation, they said, would tend to defeat the administration's goal of 60,000,000 postwar jobs.

Meanwhile, a review of tariff reductions under the reciprocal trade agreements since 1934 showed that of 1,226 rates pared in the 15 standard schedules more than 500 were cut in half.

Of 245 reductions made in agricultural products, 156 were cut in half, it was revealed. Other reductions included 237 in metals and metal manufactures, with a third cut in half; 126 in chemicals, oils and paints, with nearly 63 cut in half; 107 in earths, earthenware and glassware, with 46 cut in half, and 78 in wool and wool manufactures with 25 cut over 40 per cent.

BIG BUSINESS REPORTS

In doing over a 2,000,000,000 dollar business in 1944, the U. S. Steel corporation turned out 30,-800,000 tons of ingots and castings, with profit of $60,791,281.

Reporting a drop in taxes for the year to $106,000,000, the corporation said that wage increases included as expense cut down the figure from which taxes could be figured. As a result, taxes decreased $25,700,-000 while loss of income only totaled $4,300,000.

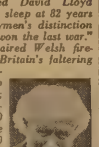
WAR PRODUCTION:
At Peak

Because further diversion of resources and cuts in supplies for war-supporting and essential civilian activities would probably impair the nation's economy to the point of adversely affecting war production, munitions output has just about reached its peak, it was revealed.

At the same time, the War Production board revealed that military authorities had joined in studies to determine what readjustments could be made in munitions output so as to divert more material and manpower toward the manufacture of needed civilian goods.

Though bad winter weather and nuisance strikes have complicated the task of meeting higher production goals, output has been satisfactory, WPB said. While production of guns and fire control, ammunition and combat and motor vehicles showed increases in February over the preceding month, output of extra heavy trucks, aircraft, ships, communication and electronic equipment and other supplies was down.

BANK CREDIT:
For Little Business



Opportunities of little businessmen seeking money for enterprises in the postwar world have been greatly enhanced by bankers' pooling of funds for general use in meeting applicants' requests.

With such credit pools already organized in 27 districts throughout the country, with funds of over one-half billion dollars, individual bankers who cannot furnish money to a prospective borrower will be able to obtain it for him from others.

Putting the policy into action, banks have established small business loan departments set up easier borrowing conditions and revitalized communication between institutions looking for use of surplus funds.

MOURN STATESMAN

To Britain's mourned David Lloyd George, who died in his sleep at 82 years of age, went his countrymen's distinction of being the "man who won the last war." For it was the bushy-haired Welsh firebrand who reorganized Britain's faltering war effort in 1916 by converting her industry to munitions production; raised an army of 5,500,000 soldiers and 5,000,000 workers; and for the construction of 4,000,000 tons of shipping; made truck gardens of the big landed estates and established conscription in a free and spirited country.

Lloyd George

If Lloyd George played a vital part in the winning of the war, he played an equally vital part in the making of the peace, being one of the Big Four at the Versailles conference. In 1921, he negotiated the treaty creating the Irish Free State.

Though critical of Chamberlain's appeasement policies, Lloyd George counselled consideration of German offers for a negotiated peace early in the war.

WORLD FARMING:
New Organization

Declaring that the U. S. must work to eliminate the unstable economic conditions which cause unrest and lead to war, President Roosevelt called upon congress to authorize American participation in the Allied food and agriculture organization.

With the work of the organization primarily technical and advisory, it will provide for the pooling of knowledge and information looking to the improvement in standards of nutrition, increase in levels of farm income and avoidance of surpluses, the president said.

In advocating participation in the organization, the president said that, in lacking power of direction or control over any country in adoption of policies, it would not impair the U. S.'s sovereignty over its own domestic agriculture.

POLITICS:
'First Battle'

Thwarted in his efforts to have Henry A. Wallace appointed secretary of commerce with power over the vast financial resources of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, President Roosevelt met another rebuff in the senate's refusal to confirm the nomination of Aubrey Williams as Rural Electrification administrator.

In opposing nomination of Liberal Williams, the senate's opposition followed the lines of its rejection of Wallace's appointment, until the RFC was divorced from the commerce department. Williams, like Wallace, was charged with favoring a government spending program, which might impair the nation's fiscal soundness, and also leaning to the left in his political beliefs.

Commenting on Williams' rejection, James Patton, National Farmers' Union chieftain, declared: "This is just the first battle in the war of issues as to what's going to happen to this country."

NEW FIBERS

Research into the chemistry of clothing is developing new fibers, including some made from milk, soybeans and peanuts—and better methods of making fabrics waterproof and fungusproof, scientists report.

New fibers recently "have been spun from a great variety of proteins such as casein (the principal protein of milk), soybean, peanut, zein (a soft, yellow protein from Indian corn), collagen (a main constituent of bone and flesh), chicken feather keratin and egg albumen.

New Committee Controls Clamor for Food Stocks

Directs Allocation of Limited Supplies; Heavy Demands Made on Army to Feed Civilians In the Fighting Zones.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The fight for food is on and a lot of people who "don't know there's a war going on" are going to learn about it at the breakfast table.

The first shot was fired in the battle of the bureaus in Washington by Food Administrator Marvin Jones early this month. Since then the President was moved to express himself on the subject at a White House press and radio conference. When he casually tosses off some comment like that it means a lot of memoranda have been written on the subject. We will have to take at least one hitch in our belts.

However, the situation is not quite as black as painted but unless it is painted as black as possible it will be blacker. I choose the word black advisedly for that is the color of the markets that arise to thwart the war effort everywhere.

It was a realization of this fact that caused the quiet, modest, soft-spoken Marvin Jones to shout a loud-spoken "Halt" to this food-ordering spree, begun in the last months by the various agencies whose job it is to get food but not to grow it. America was doing pretty well, that is the American farmer was doing pretty well making two and sometimes four blades of this and that grow where only one grew before and by teaching the cows and the chickens how to multiply. We were feeding ourselves pretty well at home, we were turning out a G.I. ration the like of which fighting men never put their teeth into (in such quantity and quality) before.

Also considerable food—though not nearly as much as was asked for—was going out to countries in the immediate vicinity of the war zones and under the lend-lease arrangement. UNRRA was making some shipments but not many.

Jones Locks Cupboard Door

Food Administrator Jones knew about what could actually be shipped abroad and how much was needed at home and he was able, with the help of the sweating tillers of the soil, to conjure it out of terra firma. Then all of a sudden things began to happen, and the demands on Uncle Sam's larder began to swell in such proportions that Jones said it would be bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard if all the hungry folk got there before he locked the door.

"There just isn't that much food in the world," one of Jones' lieutenants told the newsmen.

There is something about the business of sowing and reaping, of breeding and feeding, of plowing, harrowing and thrashing that just can't be hurried. Jones knows that. The President knows Jones knows it and so he listened to Jones.

The edict went out, no more food shipped to anybody anywhere, except for the army and navy and the already-agreed-upon lend-lease shipments, until it is approved by a committee composed of the agencies who take the food and the one which produces it. This committee is presided over by Leo Crowley, the President's No. 1 trouble shooter. The army, the navy, the shipping administration and the food administrator are members of that committee.

Besides feeding its own mouths the army has to feed the people in the battle areas in which it lives. You have to maintain the economy of those areas if you live and fight in them. The Germans had to do it and that is why when they departed (taking everything movable with them) the liberated areas were worse off as far as eating went than they were before. As our army moves forward more and more areas must be fed.

Also as they move ahead and lose interest in the economy of the areas farther back, or as countries become completely liberated as France, Belgium, and most of the Balkans have been, food is essential to keep the peace.

There is nothing so conducive to revolution and civil strife generally as an empty stomach. The function of alleviating the distress in these countries falls to UNRRA which so far has not been able to do much. One reason for this, which applies also to countries which don't need borrowed food, but can buy it, is the lack of ships. Ships have to be used to carry war supplies.

Until January such supplies as UNRRA could send had to be sandwiched in in "broken lots" between guns and shells and what have you. In January two full shipments went over. And they got a hurry call to distribute food to some of the "left behind" areas which the army had been taking care of.

These are the things which swelled the flood of demands on Marvin Jones' boys. These and many others like them.

Europe's Distribution System Collapses

There are two potential factors which will bring even heavier demands from the hungry world. One is the gradual restoration of transportation media within the devastated areas and the other is the eventual release of more shipping. The latter cannot be expected soon for even when the organized resistance in Europe ends—as it might before these lines reach you—many ships must be diverted for use in transporting men and supplies from Europe to the Pacific. Of course such empty bottoms as move from America to Europe can carry food but many will be in service between Europe and Asiatic waters.

At present the transportation system in France and the occupied areas of France is one of the greatest deterrents to shipping food to Europe which exist. There is no use of having food pile up in ports waiting to be transshipped to the interior.

One American who flew from London to Paris said that he did not see one single bridge on the way. Of course there are some left or the army could not be supplied, but thanks to one side or the other no bridges remain in the pathway of a retiring army if it can be helped. We have seen what happened at Remagen when the Germans failed to smash the Ludendorf span before the Yanks could grab it and use it.

A vivid example of how this destruction of transportation has affected France is revealed in the story of the potato lamps. Normandy is a rich farming country and there is enough grain and potatoes to help feed the impoverished French cities of the interior if they could get it. But there is no fuel or light in Normandy. The Norman peasants can afford to hollow out potatoes, fill them with melted butter and attach a wick to them. That is their only means of light. Yet if the transportation lines were going they could get some oil from other places and they could ship their butter and potatoes to people who sorely need them.

At present food demands are heavy and until now the allocation of supplies has not been coordinated. Government agencies which didn't have to produce the food, ordered it. And their orders frequently overlapped. Now all demands will be screened through Crowley's committee and the food administration will not be asked the impossible.

Purposely the same man is never given the job of making up quotas of desired war supplies and also of actually producing them. It has been found this is dangerous. There would be too much temptation to cut the quota to fit the available supplies. Now a certain amount of rivalry exists which forces each party to try to get a little more than he thinks he can. But there has to be someone to act as final arbiter to bring reach and grasp together with as little spillage as possible.

The number of civilians employed in the United States declined to 50,-120,000 in January, or to the lowest figure since the record high peak of 54,750,000 was reached in July, 1943, according to the Alexander Hamilton institute. Nevertheless, practically the largest possible percentage of the total labor force was employed in January.

The decline in employment was thus not due to a lack of jobs but to a reduction in the available supply of labor. The reduction in the labor supply was caused partly by persons withdrawing themselves from the labor force and partly by persons entering the armed forces. No alleviation of the labor shortage is in prospect until after the war.

DOAN'S PILLS

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

An organist from the Grand Central Dept. in New York was broadcasting a few days ago, and this is what he had to say about the songs being requested by the soldiers passing through that station. "The boys ask me to play, "The Old Rugged Cross" more often than any other song." The young men in uniform had rather hear that Christian hymn than to hear any of the tunes of the hit parade, or of any war song. Don't you think that it is heartening when our boys had rather hear and sing, "The Old Rugged Cross", than any other music in the land?

The Bible tells us that on the morning of the Resurrection that Jesus greeted Mary with these words, "All Hail." This salutation is still in our King James' version, but about three hundred years ago an author translated into these words, "Good Morning." This salutation brings our Risen Lord right into our every day living. It was a sad morning when Jesus was in the tomb, but when He arose it was indeed a good morning, and that is what He said to Mary. On greeting your friends with "Good Morning" you are saying to them, "This is a good morning, for indeed Christ is alive." Speak this salutation often, cheerfully and reverently, for it is a message of joy and hope.

When Wellington won his great victory at Waterloo, the news had to be carried to England. They had no telephones or radios in those days and the news was brought by way of sailing boats, and then wigwagged to London by semaphores. The semaphores on the roof of Winchester Cathedral was in action and the people below read, "Wellington Defeated" and just then the fog hid him from view. The fog hung around the messenger for some moments and a gloom fell over London. Then the fog lifted, and this time they read, "Wellington Defeated His Enemies," and their sorrow was changed into joy. The Apostles turned from Calvery, saying, "Jesus is dead" and they were filled with sorrow. On the Third day they said, "He is alive" and they were filled with joy. The completed message of the gospel brings joy to the world. Victory over death.

I stood by and watched a contractor as he built a beautiful residence on the Prairie in Texas. This man dug deep and placed cement pillars, and then he bound the foundation securely to the cement blocks with steel rods and ropes. This builder was looking ahead to that day when the gales would blow in from the Gulf. Only the well built houses are left when one of those Gulf storms go roaring in from the sea. Ah, my friends, in your home you are building lives for a stormy experience and only the children who are well grounded in character elements are going to be able to stand in the testing storms of life. Better give to the children in your home a solid character foundation.

In an American city recently, a group of High School students carted a pile of furniture and rubbish into a room that was hard beside a movie, and then set it on fire. They craved excitement, and they had it. Complaint was carried to the principal of the school, and this is the reply he made, "Well the movie people had it coming to them. They have sowed to the wind and now they have reaped the whirlwind in the rotten morals of the youth of today." I tell you, my friends we are living in a sad day when our youth is getting it's morals from our movies, and it's character from our cowboys. There is a cause for the moral brakdown that is cursing the land in our day.

LOCAL NFLA RECEIVES DIVIDEND FROM LAND BANK

A dividend on all stock of the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans held by national farm loan associations and direct borrowers as of March 31, 1945, has been declaired by the bank's directors.

The announcement that the bank would make the dividend payment was made by R. L. Thompson, president, through J. H. Yates, sec.-treas., of the Bibb-Chilton National Farm Loan Association.

Payment of the dividend will be made on or after April 16, 1945. Bibb-Chilton Association holds 2300 shares of the New Orleans Land Bank's stock with a par value of $11,500.

In making the announcement, which is good news to farmers generally and to members of national farm loan associations particularly, President Thompson said "the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans is in a strong financial condition. It has established adequate reserves and unless some unforeseen adversity such as a crop failure or market disaster overtakes our farmers, it is anticipated that the bank will continue in a favorable position."

"Payment of this dividend is a reflection of sound lending operations of the land bank". President Thompson stated, "and is in keeping with the established policy of our cooperative farm credit system to pass on to the stockholders the benefits of operating savings fater the establishment of adequate reserves."

"The dividend payment marks another achievement of the land bank and the farm loan associations during the past two years. Under the 1943-44 rehabilitation program initiated by the bank all impaired national farm loan associations except one were restored to a strong and solvent condition."

During the past year the rate of interest on land bank loan installments maturing after June 30, 1944 was reduced to 4 percent and the rate of interest on land bank loans made thru national farm loan associations was fixed at 4 percent.

The bank also continued its decentralization program under which more and more authority has been extended to the local national farm loan associations to enable them to handle local problems promptly and to render the maximum service to members at their own local offices.

FOREST, brush and grass fires frequently endanger power lines and occasionally have damaged them to such an extent that electric service has been interrupted.*

This results in not only inconvenience to homes, stores, hospitals and schools, but also causes loss of time in industries engaged in vital war production.

You can help prevent such interruptions to electric power service if, when you observe a fire which is endangering a power line, you will go to the nearest telephone, put in a call to our nearest office (charge collect) and report the location of the fire. That may enable us to get men to the scene of the fire in time to prevent an interruption to electric service.

CARL McDOWELL SENDS NICE STORY FROM CHAPLAIN

This is a sort of general diary of our Christmas, written by one of our Chaplains known to all of us. Everyone has requested a copy of it because every sentence is applicable to each of us alike. Every incident narrated is so well known among our group that any member reading it is absorbed in his own deep silence of quiet memory—My Christmas of 1944 with my buddies.

"TWAS THE DAY BEFORE CHRISTMAS"

"Twas the day before Christmas in a little town in France. The weather was clear and cold but there was no snow to help us catch the Christmas spirit. However that was not the only factor lacking to make ours a very Merry Christmas.

News had come that our little town was one of the major objectives of the all out German drive. In fact the "Boche" had said that they would be here for Christmas. The roar of artillery fire could be plainly heard by day and by night.

The natives were moving out in a constant stream. Some were going by train or auto, others on bicycles and many on foot, wheeling baby carriages and wheel barrows, pulling carts and packing luggage on their backs. The rumors that they carried concerning the oncoming Germans were more varied, fantastic and highly colored than their methods of evacuation. To hear them talk or to watch their hasty exit you would have thought that we should have joined them in a hunt for a safer place to live.

Then there was "Bed-check Charlie," as we had nick-named him, with his JU 88. For several nights at the same time he had kept us alert with the roar of the motor of his plane and the occasional burst of his guns. Yes, he did his share to try to spoil our Christmas.

Since the beginning of the big German drive the weather had been rainy, foggy, misty all to the advantage of the enemy. Our Allied Air Force was to a large extent grounded. The mist and fog made good camouflage for the on coming tanks and Panzer units.

To attempt to describe the gallantry and heroism of our men in the front lines would take reams of paper and exhaust the vocabulary of the best of writers. However these reports of action just ahead were continually coming in as units were returning or withdrawing to our area to reorganize and as wounded were being treated and sent on back to a Field Hospital.

It was in such a situation that we were aroused this "Day Before Christmas" with mingled emotions. The dull roar of the motors of American bombers was sweet music to our ears on this first clear winter day in over a week. However any thoughts of peace and safety were being rudely interrupted by the blast of bombs and artillery fire.

In our Sunday worship services this never to be forgotten "Day Before Christmas" our Christmas hymns and sermons were punctuated and emphasized by the rumble, blast and roar of guns in action just ahead. How far ahead our front lines were cannot be told. One C. O. who came into our area with his wounded for treatment and the rest of his men for feeding and reorganization was asked where our front lines were at the moment. His reply was quite revealing for he turned to our Commanding Officer and said, "You ought to know for you are now our front lines." This opinion was reiterated time and again by wounded and returning battle weary fighting men who said that there were no other defense units between us and the enemy. The stories of German massacre of our wounded can hardly be described here.

Of course our own Battalion defenses had been set up for days. These defenses were now being strengthened hourly by reinforcements of efficient fighting units. Our guards, road blocks, patrols and all were keenly alert to the situation.

A part of the afternoon of this memorable "Day Before Christmas" was spent in our Battalion Dispensary which had become a Battalion Aid Station for the wounded coming in by truck and afoot. The never to be forgotten impressions of the afternoon beggar description. Some of them were confidential and most too sacred to put in writing. As we knelt on the dirty floor beside the stretcher of a fine Protestant lad, whose life was in the balance, we tried to offer a few words of encouragement and breathe an earnest prayer in his behalf. Beside us knelt his buddy, a Catholic lad, and he too, was praying earnestly for his battle chum.

From this scene, after a few bites of chow, we turned to our Christmas Eve Service in an atmosphere and under circumstances far different from the Christmas Eve scenes brought to us by memory. However in a humble place of worship amidst these strange and untoward conditions a fine group of men gathered to sing Christmas Carols and worship. No words of man can convey the enthusiasm or spirit of their singing which rescued us from the tenseness of the situation and brought to us some of the true Christmas spirit. As the strains of Silent Night died away we made our way to our place of sleep or duty fully conscious that where war had stolen most of the material factors that have made up our previous Christmas seasons, the Christ of Christmas was permitting us to partake of His spirit and thus enjoy the real spirit of Christmas.

From this service we went to Battalion Headquarters to learn that our defenses were being further strengthened and that additional reinforcements were due in the morning. We looked at our watches; it was now time for "Bed-check Charlie" to put in his appearance again. However smiles of thanksgiving were on our faces as we gave vent to a variety of remarks, for we knew that one of our American planes had efficiently and effectively and adequately taken care of or disposed of our tormentor the night before. Yes, "Bed-check Charlie" and his plane were resting in peace or should I say pieces on yonder hillside.

And thus as this strange and eventfull "Day Before Christmas" came to an end we alertly watched and waited for Christmas Morn. At 1:30 or 0130 hours, after wishing a few a "Merry Christmas" we slipped off to bed at the C. O.'s instructions. We felt like saying, "Young man (?) you have had a busy day" and went off to sleep to the tune or rumble of artillery fire and the burst of ack ack.

Christmas morning we were aroused by the melodious drone of the motors of our Allied bombers and fighters. It was now daylight and strong reinforcements had come in and were still coming. All of which was mighty good news to us.

As we made our way to our Christmas Worship Service, it was with a sincere prayer that the Lord would help us bring to these men of our armed forces the Christ of Christmas. Yes, and here they came, these men of whom parents, loved ones and country alike may well be proud. These fighting men who for days had stood up to the worst the enemy could dish out came trooping in fully armed with their trusty rifles and other weapons. There they sat keenly alert to the whole situation. They sang the Christmas Carols and entered into the spirit of the service with the same whole-hearted enthusiasm that had made them such good soldiers the day before Christmas and many days before that.

We have preached to larger and better dressed audiences in more beautiful places of worship and under circumstances more favorable to the Christmas spirit. However we have never spoken to a more interesting—challenging or appreciative crowd of men. We tried to lift up the Christ of Christmas and challenge these men to extract from this very different and strange Christmas amidst the tragedy of war, the true spirit of Christmas. We urged them to join the wise men of all time by bringing their lives, their gold, frankincense and myrhh to the Christ of Christmas.

Their firm manly handshakes and sincere expressions of appreciation as they said, "Thank you, chaplain," were enough to make up for the lack of Christmas Tree and packages from home. Thus we had a Merry Christmas and thus ends our story of "TWAS THE DAY BEFORE CHRISTMAS."

Dear Folks:

I am getting along fine. Just thought I would let you read a very nice letter by one of our Chaplains, which is very true. I should say was very true because as you know news is much better now. Do not worry, because it is all over now. All my love to everyone. Hope to see you soon.

Love,
CARL.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth, an M.P., was in charge of security. The Major set out at once to win the confidence of the citizens and promised to replace the town bell which the Germans had taken. General Marvin, chief of American forces in that section, was delayed at the outskirts of Adano, by a cart driven by Errante Daetano. The General ordered the cart thrown off the road and the mule shot. He then ordered Major Joppolo to see that all carts were kept out of the city in the future. The orders were issued against the wishes and better judgment of the Major.

CHAPTER VII

Erba, like the town, had run dry. He turned to his friends. One of them said: "Erba, the proclamation, the matter of being clean."

Erba said: "Oh yes, the proclamation. In one proclamation, Mister Major, I forget the number of the proclamation, there are so many, does the number matter, Mister Major?"

"No, Erba. I am sorry, there are too many proclamations." And the Major turned to Erba's friends, who were a little more intelligent and would understand. "That is the fault of the authorities. I did not wish to post so many proclamations. That is not my fault. I am sorry. The number does not matter, Erba."

Erba said: "The number does not matter. The proclamation says it is necessary to be clean. It says the people must be clean with water, and even the streets must be clean. Our streets, which have been the same since the time of—who was it the time of, Afronti?"

Afronti roared: "Since the time of Pietro of Aragona and of Roberto King of Naples."

Erba said: "The streets have been the same. Now the proclamation speaks of being clean with water. There is much sameness which has accumulated on the streets since the time of those men of whom Afronti speaks. This being clean takes much water. My cart is on the other side of the bridge, Mister Major."

Major Joppolo said: "The cleanliness is very important, Erba. Let us make Adano the cleanest town in the whole province of Vicinamare."

Erba caught the challenge. His eye brightened. "We will do this thing, even if the sameness has piled up since the time of Jesus, Mister Major." Then his eye went dull again. "But my cart is on the other side of the bridge. You have said it may not pass."

The Major said: "Let the next one speak. You. Your name?" And he pointed at the third man with his pen.

Erba said: "Thank you, Mister Major."

The third man jumped up. He was quite fat but comparatively handsome. His hair was plastered down with something off the axle of his cart, and his black coat was the newest looking of the four. "Basile Giovanni, Mister Major," he said.

"You wish?"

Basile spoke gravely and slowly. "Mister Major," he said, "the worst of all the things about the carts is the food. You can see, Mister Major"—and he ran his hands down over the size of his belly—"that I am a man who can speak of food with understanding. This matter of the carts does not hurt me. I am like a man with money in the bank, I have something to draw on in hard times. But there are others in Adano who are not so lucky. Gailoto Bartolomeo is so thin that you can count the several teeth of his mouth even when his lips are closed. The nine children of Raffaela who is the wife of Manetto have big bellies, but their bellies are big only with the gas of hunger. Shall I name others who are very thin?"

The Major said: "No, go on."

Basile said: "I am the one to tell you about the food and the carts. You have not seen my cart, have you, Mister Major?"

"I may have. I have seen many of them."

And then, with great craft, Basile said: "There is nothing in all the proclamations, even though it takes you a week to read them, which says that the Americans came to Adano in order to make people die of hunger. And there is nothing in all the proclamations which refers to such things as the dead mule of Errante Gaetano. Why then do we have this thing of the carts?"

The Major reached for the field telephone, cranked the handle and said: "Give me Rowboat Blue Forward."

While he waited for an answer, the Major said to Basile gruffly: "Sit down.

"Hello. This Rowboat Blue Forward? Captain Purvis, please. . . .

"Purvis? Joppolo. Listen. . . .

"No, now this is serious, Purvis. This thing about the carts. I've made up my mind. By one sentence General Marvin destroyed the work of nine days in this town. I know it may mean a court martial, but I've decided to countermand his order. What? . . .

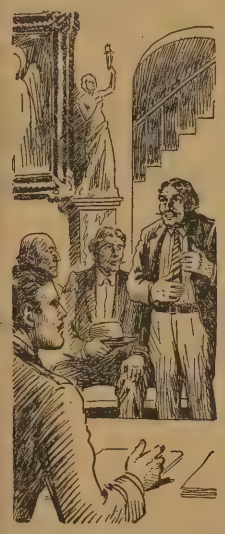
"I know I'm taking a chance, but I've got to do it. We can't let these people starve. . . .

"I have to do it, Purvis. This town is dying. No food can get into the town if the carts don't come. The town depends on the carts for water: there isn't any running water here, you know that. The people can't go out into the fields to work in the morning. Taking carts away from this town is like taking automobiles away from a country town in the States. You just can't do it all at once. People will die. I'm not here to kill people."

Captain Purvis evidently put up an argument.

Finally the Major said: "Purvis, I order you, on my authority, to start letting carts back into the town, beginning now. I take absolute and complete responsibility for countermanding General Marvin's order. . . .

"Listen friend, if we never took chances around here, this place would go right on being a Fascism. All right, it's on my responsibility."



The three cartmen sat through the telephone conversation not comprehending. To judge by their faces they seemed to think that Major Joppolo was devising some punishment for them. They had the habit of fear, and they thought that this man of authority would of course be exactly like the men of authority they had known for so long.

Major Joppolo hung up. He turned to the three cartmen and said: "You may bring your carts into the town."

For a long moment they did not understand. Then they stood up and began shouting and waving their caps.

"We thank you, we thank you and we kiss your hand," they roared.

"Oh, Mister Major, there has never been a thing like this," the fat one named Basile shouted, "that the poor should come to the Palazzo di Citta, and that their request should be granted."

"Their bellies are big ones with the gas of hunger."

"Especially," shouted the loud one named Afronti, "especially without a wait of two to three weeks."

"It was not necessary to write you a letter," Basile shouted.

"The police did not even examine us," roared Afronti.

The slow one named Erba finally got out a sentence. It was one of the few beautiful sentences he ever managed to say, and one of the longest. He said: "When the people come and take water from my cart to drink for their thirst, I shall say to them: 'Thank the Mister Major, my friends.' "

Major Joppolo said: "Get out of here. You are wasting my time and the time of all the people who are waiting outside that door." And he gestured impatiently at the men.

The cartmen went out, shouting and congratulating America.

The command post of the M.P.'s was housed in the Fascio, the one-story building which had been the headquarters of the Fascist Party. It was simply a string of rooms facing on the Via Dogana, just off the Piazza. The walls of the rooms were covered with pictures of various Fascist heroisms. Each room had a couple of desks, a filing cabinet, three or four uncomfortable chairs, and that was all. The building made a very convenient headquarters for both the M.P.'s and especially for Sergeant Borth's security detail, because the filing cabinets contained complete records on practically everyone in town, both party members and anti-Fascists.

On the morning when Major Joppolo called about the carts, there were three men in the main office of the M.P.'s. Besides Captain Purvis, there were Technical Sergeant Frank Trapani, who kept Captain Purvis's records and was more or less his secretary, and Corporal Chuck Schultz, who was the M.P. on guard.

Captain Purvis put down the telephone and said: "That Joppolo, I think he's nuts."

Sergeant Trapani said: "What's he done now, sir?"

"Oh," the Captain said, "he's always talking about democracy like it was his mother. He ought to relax and have a little fun. Bet he's never been drunk in his life."

Corporal Schultz said: "He can have this Dago wine." He put his hands over his belly and made a face.

The Captain said: "Besides, he's going to get us all in trouble."

Sergeant Trapani said: "What's he done, sir?"

An Italian stuck his head in the door just out of curiosity.

"Get out of here, Trapani, tell that wop to get out of here and stay out." Captain Purvis did not speak a word of Italian, and it made him feel frustrated. Trapani told the curious one to move along.

"The carts," Captain Purvis said. "Joppolo has the nerve to tell General Marvin he knows where he can stick the carts, he wants them to come back into town."

Sergeant Trapani said: "It wasn't a very wise order in the first place, I think maybe the Major's right."

"Right?" Captain Purvis put his palm against his cheek in a gesture of amazement. "Why, man, General Marvin'll shoot him and us too. What do you think this man's army would be like if everybody just did what he wanted and went around countermanding orders every day? We got little enough discipline in our army anyhow without going around ignoring orders, especially from generals." Captain Purvis had been commissioned just eight months. He was very military.

"Yes, sir," Sergeant Trapani said. He knew what to say when his Captain started lecturing on discipline.

"Well, I got my orders," the Captain said. "I got to go out and take the guards off the road by the bridge and the sulphur works. But listen, I'm not going to burn for this guy Joppolo. He's all right, but he's just too serious. I'd sure like to see him high just once."

Corporal Schultz said: "Last night, oh, I'll never drink that stuff again."

"Listen," the Captain said. "I don't want to get in trouble and you don't either. We got to carry out this order and let the carts back in, but if General Marvin should drive back through this town, we'd all get hung for it. Just to cover ourselves, we'll make out a report saying just what happened, that General Marvin ordered us to keep the carts out, that Major Joppolo countermanded the order. You make it out, Trapani, and send it to G-one of the division."

"Yes, sir." Captain Purvis left.

Sergeant Trapani said to Schultz: "That's a fine note, General Marvin's liable never to come back here, and if he did he'd probably never notice the carts. But once you get the thing on paper, it's just a sure way to ruin the Major. And he's so right about these carts anyway."

Corporal Schultz said: "Don't bother me, I got a headache of my own this morning."

Sergeant Trapani rolled a slip of purple paper, off a Fascist pad, into his typewriter. He wrote:

"For Lieutenant Colonel W. W. Norris, G-1, 49th Division.

"From Captain N. Purvis, 123rd M. P. Company, Adano.

"Subject: Mule Carts, town of Adano.

"1. On July 19, orders were received from General Marvin, 49th Division, to keep all mule carts out of the town of Adano. Guards were posted at bridge over Rosso River and at Cacopardo Sulphur Refinery. Order carried out.

"2. On July 20, guards were removed on order of Major Victor Joppolo, Civil Affairs Officer, town of Adano, because carts were essential to town and town was in bad shape without same."

Sergeant Trapani read over what he had written.

Then he said: "Schultz, listen to this, do you think this'll get the Major in trouble?" And he read the report out loud. "I thought that part about the town needing the carts might make it okay for the Major."

"What's this Major to you?" Schultz said. "If he can't have any fun, what's he to you?"

Sergeant Trapani said: "Oh, nothing, I just hate to see a guy get in trouble when he's trying to do right."

Schultz said: "Well, then, why don't you let the order get lost in Captain Purvis's papers? Don't bother me, I feel awful."

Sergeant Trapani looked hard at Corporal Schultz. Then he stood up and went over to Captain Purvis's desk and put the purple slip in the middle of a disorderly pile of papers which Captain Purvis touched only in adding to it.

"Good idea," Trapani said.

"You're Eyetalian," Schultz said, "what do these Eyetalians put in their booze?"

Early the next week, Giuseppe the interpreter came to Major Joppolo in some embarrassment.

"I'm a sorry, boss," he said.

"About what?" the Major said.

"Boss, you say you want a go out with a blonde a Tina. I'm a sorry, boss."

"I never said any such thing, Giuseppe. What's got into you?"

"Boss, you tell a me other day you want a see Tina's old a man."

"Yes, I do want to see him."

"I'm a sorry, boss."

"Well, what's that got to do with going out with the blonde?"

THE BOOK AND THE FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 143:10-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—The word of the Lord endureth forever.—I Peter 1:25.

Christians are the people of one book—the Bible. They read and use other books, but the book is God's Word, and everything else must be in accord with its teaching.

In this blessed Book they find the only revelation of God's saving grace. Other attributes of God may be found in the book of nature. There we find that God is powerful, orderly, wise, etc., but nowhere in nature is it written that God can save a man from his sin. We find that only in the Bible, God's written Word as it reveals Jesus Christ the Saviour who is the Living Word.

I. The Eternal Glory of God's Kingdom (vv. 10-13).

The kingdom of God refers to His reign over all things and beings, but with special reference to those who are willingly subject to Him and eager to live for His glory.

Everything in God's creation is to be lifted up in praise of that kingdom. All His works shall praise Him. They reveal Him in part, but even that limited revelation is glorious. The man who cannot see God in nature is indeed a dull clod. The heavens declare His glory and the earth shows forth His handiwork (Ps. 19:1).

Greater and more precious in God's sight is the praise of His saints. Dumb adoration is acceptable only from a dumb creation. We, His saints, are to speak His praise, to "bless" Him (v. 10). We are to spread abroad among all men (v. 12) the news of God's greatness and goodness.

"His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom," and thus it at once takes its place as so superior to what men call kingdoms as hardly to be mentioned in the same breath. There is no limit to God's kingdom either in its extent or its duration.

How stupid then that some, yes many, foolish men and women set themselves up in rebellion against God. That is the height of all folly and leads only to disaster. How wise are those who yield their lives to His control that their little span of life may find rich meaning in the One who endures forever.

II. The Abundant Provision of God's Mercy (vv. 14-16).

We are all completely dependent on the mercies of God for everything that we need for life—physical, mental, and spiritual.

Consider the food for the body. God opens His bountiful hand and every living creature is provided with the food necessary for its sustenance. How this is accomplished is a mystery and a marvel to us, but God is able to do it.

Centuries ago men were fearful that the earth could not produce enough food to keep the increasing population of mankind alive, but God sees to that even when He has to do it in spite of man's waste and destruction.

However, life is not just material. There must be a satisfying of man's spiritual nature. He needs someone to save him from his own sinful weakness, to deliver him from his sorrow and affliction. Who can do this but God? And He does it (see v. 14).

How does He do it? Through the ministry of His Holy Word. There in man finds salvation and satisfaction. The Bible is the light that shines upon his way. It is his comfort in sorrow and his strength in temptation. It exhorts and encourages, convicts and cures.

How endless and how overflowing is the mercy of our God. Let us "wait upon" Him, knowing that He is not only mindful of our need, but eager to do for us more than we can ask or think.

III. The Saving Power of God's Grace (vv. 17-19).

The Lord, who "is nigh unto all them that call upon him" (v. 18), is able to save because He is "righteous in all his ways and holy in all his works" (v. 17). Only a just and holy God can deal with sin, and yet only a merciful God would provide redemption; but in our God mercy and truth meet (Ps. 115: 1; Ps. 103). He is both "just and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus" (Rom. 3:26).

He it is who is near to all that "call upon him in truth" (v. 18), and surely it is such a calling on the Lord which is in mind in Romans 10:13, where we read that "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

Notice that God's nearness, His salvation, and His fulfillment of the desires of man are for those who call on Him and who "fear Him" (v. 19). This is not a matter of magical use of a name, or an outward profession of faith. It must come from the heart, and when it does, God responds.

So we find God's word to be the source of our instruction concerning those things which can make us wise unto salvation (II Tim. 3:15). It is the Book of our faith!

Defeated Teutons Returned Home 'World Conquerors'

The arrogance that has always permeated the German army was typically expressed in the fall of 1918, says Collier's. Before the armistice, its general staff had already started the lie that it had not been defeated by the Allies, but by the German people at home.

The troops that later returned to Berlin marched through the Brandenburg victory gate and down the Siegesallee, or Avenue of Victory, as though they had conquered the world

AMERICAN HEROES

by JULIAN OLLENDORFF

WHEN Nazi planes strafed the SS Samuel Parker, setting fire to its cargo of high explosives and aviation gasoline, during unloading operations at a Sicily beachhead, Fred A. Anderson, able seaman, dropped into the hold and extinguished the blaze in the ammunition. Then he went into another hold and put out fires in the gasoline. He was awarded the Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal. War Bonds helped supply the gas, munitions and fire extinguishers. U. S. Treasury Department

EASTVIEW CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The Worship Service will be held on Sunday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock. We hope that the attendance of the children will continue to increase so that other features may be added to their program.

Help to tell everyone about the sound, motion picture, "The River" which will be shown at Eastview on Tuesday night, April 10th.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends, relatives and neighbors for their condolences and beautiful flowers, rendered us during our sorrow in the sudden death of our darling son Robert Morris Stokes.

Especially do we thank the preachers of our community and our pastor for their comforting words.—Mr and Mrs. Kelly Stokes, Maplesville, Ala.

THE RIVER

"The River" an attractive motion picture, appealing for the conservation of America, is being shown in different communities in Chilton county, Saturday night, April 7th, is being kept open for Clanton, our county seat, and will be shown at the court house on this date.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

In the days of my childhood my mother went out into the fowl yard and I remember hearing her say to a setting hen, "Old hen, if you are going to hatch nothing, it is time for you to get off the nest." This hen had been busy on that collection of eggs for a week longer than it takes to hatch biddies, and was pulled from her place. Since that day I have seen preachers, Sunday School Superintendents and other church officials who have occupied their places longer than it should take to bring something to pass, and I have wanted to say to them as my mother said to the hen, "If you are not going to hatch anything get off that nest." Why hold a place and do nothing.

On an Eastern shore a warning lighthouse stood with its revolving light telling all passing ships that there was danger on that shore. One morning there was a wrecked vessel on the chags, being beaten to pieces by the waves, but no one came down to look and blame the lighthouse. Have you not heard people say, "Do away with the church, it is a failure. Sinners are not saved." That may be true, but remember that sinners are not lost on the account of the church, but in spite of it. They will not be warned when the church cries out against danger.

AMERICAN HEROES

by JULIAN OLLENDORFF

WHEN the tanker Virginia was struck by enemy torpedoes and exploded, Mike Kuzma, seaman, suffered severe burns in the blazing gasoline. He ignored his hurts, however, when he saw two shipmates worse off. He succeeded in towing both men out of the flaming area and supporting them until picked up by a rescue crew. Kuzma was awarded a Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in War Bonds must be sold to replace that tanker and the fuel. U. S. Treasury Department

AN EXPRESSION OF THANKS

We are unable to command words that will fully express our thanks to the Birmingham News and Age-Herald subscribers of Clanton for their cooperation in helping us get started with the distribution of said papers. With this cooperation we were able to place almost 700 papers Sunday morning with only twelve or fifteen reported errors so far. Without your full assistance we could not have done this.

I have a team of splendid boys who will deliver your papers properly when we get more thorough organized. We just ask you to bear with us and continue your splendid cooperation.

I also wish to thank the other fine boys who have offered their services and hope to use them when we can get more paper.

Again thanking you and asking your patronage and continued cooperation we beg to remain,

Yours truly,
J. Z. MIMS,
and Force.

Dr. E. M. Moore Addresses Clanton Study Club

The April meeting of the Study Club was held last Friday in the home of Mrs. Horton Walker.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. ducted the business session.

M. C. Hayes filled the chair and con-

Mrs. J. E. Gowan, program leader, presented Dr. E. M. Moore, County Health Officer, who spoke most interestingly on "Cancer Control," including other interesting data of the great progress made in recent years in the control of other diseases and particularly what Alabama's State Health Department is accomplishing Mrs. Sophia L. Jones. County Commander of the Field Army of the American Cancer Society spoke briefly in the interest of this great work, commending the Study Club most highly for its 100 percent enlistment in and support of this worthy cause for the past two years.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Warr, served a delightful salad plate to 12 members and guests—Mrs. Sophia L. Jones, Mrs. Sparkmore and Dr. E. M. Moore.

MRS. ESTHER TYUS

Mrs. Esther Tyus, age 34, died at her residence, Billingsley Route 2, Sunday morning. Funeral services were held Monday at 3:00 p.m. at Pilgrim Rest Church, conducted by Rev. A. C. McMinn; interment in adjoining cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, Preston Tyus; two sisters, Mrs. Redie Kayal of Selma, Mrs. Lillian Tyus of Billingsley, also mother, Mrs. Amanda Abbott, of Billingsley.

Pallbearers were: C. A. Hill, Burt Tyus, Bill Traywick, Leon Hayes, Clyde Carter and Lewis Tyus.

Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

FUND RAISING DRIVE CONDUCTED BY SOCIETY FOR CONTROL OF CANCER

April is the month designated by an act of congress for waging war on the dread disease of cancer. Two requests are made of the people: First enlist in the Field Army and second, buy a membership, which is $1.00. The funds raised in April go to research in cancer control, and to a campaign of education. Those enlisting in the Field Army pledge themselves to visit the Doctor at least once a year for a general checkup.

Do these two things: pay $1.00 to the cause; and visit your Doctor once a year.

Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer is Treasurer of Chilton County Branch of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. Send your enlistment fee to her.

During the week of April 16th volunteer workers in the Field Army will make a house to house canvass for members. Have your dollar ready when they come, or better still mail it direct to the County Treasurer.

Vermont News

The Jr. III Class is putting on a play Wednesday night, April 11, 1945. The title is "Leave It To Grandma". She can fix things, if you need a husband, let grandma find him.

Vermont boys played Enterprise in soft ball Friday, April 6th. The score was 27-29 in favor of Vermont.

The certificates for canning sugar will be issued at Vermont School. School will turn out at 12:00 o'clock instead of 1:30 on that day.

Majorette Contest At High School Friday Night

The Chilton County High School Gymnasium will be the scene of the most colorful event of the season Friday night when the Majorette Contest is held by the High School Band.

The winner in this contest will go to the State Contest at Tuscaloosa and compete there with representatives from all over the state.

The Grammar School majorettes will also be presented in this review and get a chance to "show" before the parents and other spectators.

The contest will start at 8:00 o'clock. Admission will be 25c to all. Come out and support your High School Band.

SCHOOL CHILDREN PLAN WAR BOND CAMPAIGN

School children are planning to do their part in helping Chilton County to go over its Seventh War Loan Quota in seven days by canvassing every home in the county during the period of April 14 to April 21. Each child has been enlisted as "Private" in the Chilton County War Bond Army. Each war bond sale made by a child advances him one rank until he has become a Four-Star General. In each school the child having the largest dollar volume in sales will be promoted to the rank of General of the armies, or Five-Star General.

To get credit for a sale, a child must have his customer turn in through the bank or postoffice a stamped card showing that a bond, or bonds, were actually sold. Certificates of rank will be issued from the county office.

Many sales of war bonds have already been made by school children and the campaign will gain momentum on Saturday, April 14, when the drive officially gets under way. People are urged to be ready to purchase bonds from the children so that recognition can be given them for their work.

MOUNTAIN SPRINGS CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Every one is invited to take part in the worship service at 2:30 p.m. Following the service there will be a discussion of plans for motion pictures.

One G. I. shoe repair shop re-soles nearly 1,000 pairs of shoes a week in the Rome area of the Mediterranean Theatre of Operations.

Farmall Tractor To Be Given Away In 7th War Loan Drive

The prize in the Seventh War Loan Drive is a Farmall Tractor. With each $25 Bond a free chance on the tractor will be given. Here is your chance to own the finest piece of modern farm machinery available and at the same time, make money for yourself by lending it to the Government at a good rate of interest—the safest investment in the world today.

With each Bond you get a chance on the tractor. When the Chilton County quota is reached there will be a drawing. The lucky number wins the tractor. That's all there is to it. You stand as good a chance as anybody.

Buy all the Bonds that your bank account will allow. You are helping yourself most, when you buy War Bonds.

PAN-AM SERVICE STATION CHANGES MANAGEMENT

The local Pan-Am Service Station, which was formerly owned by W. E. Owens, changed hands this week. Mr. C. M. Baker bought the station and he and his son, Willie Claude Baker will operate it on a 24-hour schedule.

Mr. Baker invites the public to visit him at his new business, and promises a courteous welcome at all times.

MR. ANDREW JACKSON DURBIN

Mr. Andrew Jackson Durbin, age 79, died at his residence, Clanton, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mollie Durbin; three sons —H. D., F. M. and M. C. Durbin, all of Clanton; three daughters — Mrs Allie Headley, Mrs. Maudie Hines Mrs. Adelie, Chancellor; 10 grand children.

Funeral services will be announced later, pending the arrival of grandsons in the services.

Infant son of Mr and Mrs Clifton W. Judy, died in Clanton Saturday morning. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Liberty church in Autauga County, conducted by Rev. A. C. Weaver. Surviving is the mother and father, four brothers and three sisters.

J. Mell Martin and Sons were in charge.

1. How many pounds of sugar did you use in 1944 for making jams, jellies, preserves, etc?

2. How many pounds of sugar will you use in 1945 for jams, jellies, preserves, etc? (maximum allowance will be 5 pounds per person).

3. How many quarts (or equivalent) of finished canned fruit did you can with sugar in 1944 ?

4. How many quarts (or equivalent) of finished canned fruit will you can in 1945?

5. How many pounds of sugar did you use for canning fruit in 1944?

6. How many pounds of sugar did the Board grant you for home canning and preserving in 1944?

Isabella News

Bro. Stuckey brought us two very inspiring sermons Sunday at Mulberry to a good crowd at both services.

Our Sunday School is progressing now. We had a good quarterly report given Sunday by our Superintendent, W. T. White. We are urging every one to attend every Sunday.

There will be a service of songs, prayer and thankfulness and praise at Mulberry on V-E Day when General Eisenhower gives the official announcement. Everybody is invited to be with us. Leave everything at home and come rejoice with us.

The Doreen Owens' G. A.'s will meet with Jacqulene Smitherman Saturday afternoon at 2:30. All our G. A.'s please come.

The Willie Kelly and Mable Woodward W.M.U. circles are meeting this week on Wednesday afternoon.

Robert Cummings from the Marines of South Carolina spent his furlough at home recently with his mother, Mrs. Ethel Cummings here.

Mrs. Bill Grooms is spending a few days here with her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Grooms.

Clara Jean Smith of Birmingham visited her aunt, Mrs. Lilla Carter, and other relatives here for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Little and children of Winchester, Tenn., and Mr. and Mrs C. H. Oliver and children of Birmingham spent Saturday night with their mother, Mrs. Emma Manning here.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jones and children of Birmingham spent the week end here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wells.

Big Day In Clanton Saturday, April 14th

Maxwell Field Band Of 30 Pieces Will Entertain

Be sure you come to Clanton on Saturday, April 14th. That is the day the "Mighty Seventh" War Bond Drive gets underway and there will be plenty of entertainment in store for you.

A 30-piece band from Maxwell Field will be on hand to furnish the music for the occasion.

Soldiers from Northington General Hospital at Tuscaloosa, Ala., who have been wounded and sent home to recuperate will be there to tell you just what war is like and what your son, brother or husband is going through for you and our "way of life."

There will be many other features to high-light the day and it is not only an opportunity to learn first hand about the war, but your patriotic duty to come and help make a big success of the occasion. Remember the Chilton County Slogan for the Drive is "The Mighty Seventh, In Seven Days."

DO YOU KNOW?

"Sunbonnet Jane of Sycamore Lane?" If not, just come to the Senior III Class Play April 20th, and meet her. She will have you full of delight

Doesn't "Sunbonnet Jane" bring a vision of a delightful heroine before your eyes and "Sycamore Lane" a very beautiful spot for lovers?

If you want to be in good standing don't miss "Sunbonnet Jane of Sycamore Lane" in the High School Gym Be sure of a seat—get your tickets early—you won't be disappointed.

E. J. KLINNER REPRESENTS COUNTY WITH FINE CALVES AT FAT STOCK SHOW

At the Montgomery Fa[illegible] Show, Chilton County was [illegible] resented E. J. Sho[illegible] were a credit to any show[illegible] though Chilton County entered only two calves, they carried a lot of quality and finish which can be proved by the ribbons and price money that E. J. brought home. Both animals placed well in the show. One steer placed first in the Heavy Weight Angus Class and the other placed second in the Light Weight Class. In showing for honors in the Angus breed E. J.'s steers were judged reserve champion. In the pay-off show for Grand Champion and Reserve Grand Champion, E. J.s heavy steer was placed third best steer in the show.

E. J. is to be highly commended on the fine job of feeding and caring for his club calves. These animals went on feed in July and over a feeding period of 8 and one-half months they have almost doubled their weight.

This is a very rapid gain and can be gotten only by good feeding practices and management.

These calves will be shown in the County Show, May 3rd, and will go on to the Birmingham Show May 4, and 5th.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Coming-Home Problems

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"Give him a little responsibility about the baby. Let Carl see that Junior gets disciplined and isn't always first."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"AFTER 22 months overseas my husband came home last October, honorably discharged," writes a Springfield woman. "Carl is 24, I am 20. We have a boy who was born eight months after his father went away; Carl and I had known each other only four months before we were married, had only six weeks together. It seemed then as if it were the real thing; we loved each other deeply, and our letters never lost their tone of passionate devotion.

"His concern when he knew a baby was coming, the ridiculous things he bought for the baby in Wales, where he was stationed, his excitement over a son's arrival all helped to carry me through that bad time. We lived with my mother, Junior and I, and waited for daddy to come back to us. Carl Sr. was in the first parachute attack on France, was wounded and hospitalized for some months, went back into active service again, and was discharged because of an attack of stomach ulcers, for which he is now being treated. He has now rejoined his father and brother in a very successful catering and pastry business long established in the family. I am employed in this family business, calling on clients in their own homes and making arrangements for weddings and receptions. My father-in-law and two brothers-in-law are extremely kind to me, and the whole relationship is pleasant and easy.

Completely Changed.

"Now Carl comes back a completely changed character. In the first place he responded very indifferently to the baby; naturally Junior was not won by a father who glanced at him so coldly, and will not go to Carl at all. Then Carl didn't like my living with my mother, although he and I had never had a home here, but only six weeks together in California, near a camp. We have no furniture, and housing is scarce. My mother is very gentle and kind, and being with her would certainly solve my housekeeping problems and enable me to go on helping with the income.

"With me Carl is silent and disagreeable, shaking off all affectionate overtures, telling me briefly that he wants to 'get away,' saying that his father's business makes him sick, sneering at our optimistic remarks concerning the war, and at the same time refusing to tell us anything of his own experiences on the ground that he is sick unto death of the whole thing. He refuses to have the stomach operation the doctors think advisable, but not urgent, and is altogether unmanageable and miserable. Of course that makes us all sad. I am so willing to be a good loving wife to him and could so easily love him again, for he was a wonderful, wise, good-natured man when I married him, but I cannot much longer buck against this constant attitude of being bored or displeased! Would you advise me and the baby to leave him, would you advise a divorce, or what would you advise?"

Dear Lisa: I would advise you to give Carl time, and to employ that time with every means in your

"He is silent and disagreeable. . . ."

power to convince him that love and peace and home life are the normal status of American husbands and fathers, and that after a while he will begin to realize how much he has left.

He has had an overdose of cruel reality; loneliness, guns, danger, pain, illness, cold. He will gradually come back to his old cheerfulness of outlook.

Put Him First.

But while this slow curative process is going on, help him by being completely reasonable. That is, don't look for rational or normal conduct in him. If he feels the baby is spoiled, agree with him and be a little hard on the baby. If he is sick of meals in your mother's company, take him out to dinner, or encourage him with talk of hunting for a little apartment—or better, a little farm, of your own. If he glooms about the war, gloom with him, immediately afterward conceding that valor, courage, defense of America are splendid things, however they are evoked.

Above all, put him first. Make him important. At any cost be always free to walk with him, plan with him, buy architectural books and study them with him. Give him a little responsibility about the baby, let Carl see that Junior gets disciplined and isn't always first. Meet his look with laughter and affection; start every sentence with his name. "Carl and I want to—Carl was saying—Carl thinks—"

Two factors are working against you. One is the frivolous nature of the family business, sure to jar on a man just returned from facing such ghastly realities. The other is stomach ulcers. These come nearer to driving men insane than any other purely physical ailment I know of.

But you are not the only woman who has had this coming-home problem to solve, Lisa. You will soon be joined by a million others; this is going to be our real postwar problem. And a good marriage is worth saving. There is a very special sense of triumph and joy in the happiness that we win through doubt, difficulty and pain.

RECOVERY TAKES TIME

The terrible impact of war on a soldier's nerves is something people who stay at home can never understand. This is particularly true of a sensitive young man who has been exposed to some extremely horrible experience.

Such a case is related in this article. A young wife tells Miss Norris about her husband, Carl, a parachute trooper, who was released because of stomach ulcers. Carl was devoted and affectionate until he returned from service. Now he seems cold and detached, showing little interest in his baby son or his wife. Everything seems unimportant and trivial. He is critical of his wife and everyone else.

This difficult phase, says Miss Norris, is a common experience of combat veterans. The shock of battle lingers for months. There is nothing to do but to be patient and considerate.

Watering African Violets

Brownish or whitish streaks on the leaves of your African violet probably are the result of overhead watering or use of cold water, states J. R. Kamp, U. of Illinois college of agriculture. Always use warm water and shade the leaves until they are dry because discolorations appear if wet leaves are exposed to the sun. Putting the pot in a pan of water until the soil is wet is a satisfactory means of watering, provided the pot is then removed at once.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

EISENHOWER TO REPORT WHEN PEACE COMES

WASHINGTON. — The peace rumors have been coming from nearly every place except the spot that matters—inside Germany.

The widest spread expectation can be traced to a misunderstanding of newsmen from a White House order. Word was passed to them from those august portals to stand by for an important announcement.

The newsmen figured it must be a peace offer. When no announcement was issued they deduced the warning might have related to the Rundstedt peace offer (reported out of Paris by INS) upon which the White House decided not to comment in the end.

When the peace news does break eventually it is not likely to come from the White House but from General Eisenhower's headquarters, and there will be no possibility of doubting its authenticity. Arrangements to that effect have been made.

The surrender will be military in all probability and made to him, rather than through Berlin-Washington political channels, and he is empowered to announce it.

As for the Rundstedt peace offer, it was simply a bid to get us to sell out the Russians and therefore could not be seriously considered.

The other rumors in general have sprung from financial authorities in New York and were largely inquiries designed to sound out the administration.

FACING DESTRUCTION

The Germans, of course, are facing complete destruction of their entire country. If anyone with any common sense could get into authority, the Germans would decide to save themselves the rest of the fight.

But all our inner reports from Germany suggest the people are phlegmatic and in a mood to take whatever comes from anyone. They have been beaten into complete docility by years under Hitler.

The soldiers have shown an increasing aptitude for surrendering since their bulge in Belgium was broken. After the professional soldiers retired behind the Rhine to prepare for the spring campaign, the Volkstürmers, left alone at the front, have not fought well. But no collapse in morale has been apparent yet, and the army as a whole is still tough.

Events up to the Rhine and across the Remagen bridgehead have, of course, merely been leading toward a greater full scale assault. Even the brilliant Patton-Patch encirclement of the rich industrial Saar is merely preliminary.

Neither was the collapse of the Ludendorf bridge an impediment to our further advance. We had three other bridges set up and working actually before the announcement of the collapse was given out.

EARLY NEED SHOWN

For our big-scale offensive, however, we will need at least two or three other bridgeheads established in the north. The best fighting route to Berlin is across the northern plains.

Ahead of us in the Remagen area is difficult hilly country of volcanic origin and of little use except for Nazi defense. But ahead of us in the north is the industrial Ruhr and thickly settled communities, vital to sustenance of the German effort.

It is being commonly reported our strategy will be to effect a junction with the Russians, south of Berlin, rather than heading directly toward the capital. To do that, we will have to break through the Nazi defenses with a roving armored column.

Our immediate strategy no doubt will be to develop spearheads across the Rhine, switching our power from one to the other, as the Russians do, to find the weaker resistance, rather than taking a fixed route.

It will not be necessary to take Hamburg and the northern coastline, although, if we could land a force there in the rear of the German defense line, they could be dealt a crushing blow.

The Russians also have been mopping up, reducing pockets in their rear, knocking out a lot of German forces therein, and drawing up their power to the Oder river as we are to the Rhine. Both are threatening to cross at any point. When that movement starts, you will know the final drive is on.

Individual Americans had 148 billion dollars in liquid savings at the close of 1944 according to the statistical report of the Securities and Exchange commission for the year. This tremendous latent purchasing power included 22 billions in currency, 39 billions in time deposits, 34 billions in demand deposits and 53 billions in government securities.

Savings for the year 1944 were increased by the unprecedented sum of 40 billion dollars, ten times as much as in 1940. This in addition to war bond holdings.

MARJORIE REYNOLDS told it on the "Duffy's Tavern" set at Paramount. Seems her husband, Capt. Jack Reynolds, who'd just returned from overseas, told her that the British children and the American soldiers stationed in England have developed a new bit of repartee. When the children trot alongside the men, asking "Got any gum, chum?" the reply is "Sure, mister, but for your sister." On the same set, a naval officer told Ed Gardiner that his "Duffy's Tavern" is one of the most popular radio shows on the Mosquito network, a broadcasting chain organized last January, that now extends to every base in the South Pacific.

William Bendix, starred in "The Life of Riley" on the Blue, has a fat part in the new Fred Allen picture, "It's in the Bag." He's cast as a meek racketeer who "inherited" the gang from his mother. Quite a change from his usual tough roles.

The confusion that comes from Hollywood's habit of changing picture titles caught up with seven-year-old Nona Griffith recently. A producer, who was interviewing her for a role in a picture, asked her how many pictures she'd worked in. "Three," said she; "'Her Heart in Her Throat,' 'Fear,' and 'The Unseen.'" Nobody could expect her to realize that they were different names for the same film.

Wally Brown and Alan Carney have been so successful in RKO comedies that the studio is planning 'way ahead for them. When they finish "Radio Stars on Parade" they'll go into "Master Minds," playing radio detectives who become real sleuths.

Margaret O'Brien and Butch Jenkins have just been portrayed by a sculptor in the clothes they wear in "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes." Butch's mother, who chalked up quite a record for herself as an actress — she's Doris Dudley — is awfully busy these days, not acting, but seeing to it that her young son keeps the delightfully natural behavior that has made him such a success on the screen.

Everybody's waiting for "The Bells of St. Mary's." With three academy award winners — Bing Crosby, Ingrid Bergman, and Director McCarey—working on it, it's got to be something special. McCarey has given Ruth Donnelly a role as a nun which he says is comparable to that of the priest played by Barry Fitzgerald in the highly successful "Going My Way."

Bing Crosby not only does his regular movie and radio chores, but also appears on radio programs such as "Mail Call" and "Command Performance," for the boys overseas, and makes pictures exclusively for the army and navy.

When you see RKO's "First Man into Tokyo," don't miss the opening if you want to hear the voice of Japan's Premier Kuniaki Koiso—or maybe you'd rather miss it. A transcript of his voice urging the Japs to sacrifice everything to repulse the enemy was used.

Radio's first big feud, "The Battle of the Crooners," was waged by Rudy Vallee and Will Osborne. Vallee's been on the air ever since, apart from his time out for Uncle Sam; Osborne, though a topflight band leader, hasn't been too familiar a figure in the radio scene in recent years. Now he's returned, joining the Abbott and Costello show that's heard on NBC Thursday nights.

ODDS AND ENDS—William Seiter, director of Sonja Henie's "It's a pleasure," once was a member of that immortal aggregation, the Keystone Kops. . . . Anne Sterrit, of "Our Gal Sunday," began her career at the Cape Playhouse in Dennis, Mass., with Bette Davis—both were ushers there. . . . Joan Woodbury, Columbia Pictures star, taught Jennifer Jones, Selznick star, two dances which you'll see her performing in "Duel in the Sun." . . . The Hollywood grapevine went into action after a preview of "The Affairs of Susan"; nine loan-out offers were made for Dan Dare, who plays one of Joan Fontaine's romances.

PIONEERS OF FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 12:1, 2; Acts 7: 4-7, 12-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed . . . and he went out, not knowing whither he went.—Hebrews 11:8

Bible history is a story of men of faith called and used of God to carry out His purpose in the world. These thrilling accounts of worthwhile lives are to be our special concern during the three months we study the history of Israel and of the Church.

I. A Call and a Covenant (Gen. 12:1, 2)

God was now ready to make known His choice of a man to be the father of His chosen people. He went down into Ur of the Chaldees in the midst of heathen worship, and called out a man who had faith in the true God.

Abram, "when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went" (Heb. 11:8).

The Lord called him out from his own land and kindred, to get him away from his heathen forebears and their worship. God wants separated believers in our day, too (read and ponder II Cor. 6:17, 18). That call comes to every believer. To those who are to serve Him, there is a definite call much like Abram's (see Matt. 10:37-39).

With the call came a great covenant, a seven-fold promise given in Genesis 12:2, 3. That covenant God repeatedly renewed with Abraham and his descendants. It has been partially fulfilled, and God has put Himself on record that every bit of it shall be completed. He keeps His promises.

Why did God choose Israel? It was an act of His sovereign grace, not based on their merit or goodness. He had a threefold purpose: (1) That they should be the repository for His truth (the Old Testament) in the earth; (2) that they should be the channel for the coming of the personal Redeemer to the earth; (3) that they should be a national witness to the one true God amid the nations of the earth.

They accomplished two of these, but failed in the last, and are now under God's judgment for that sin and failure.

II. Obedience and Opportunity (Acts 7:4-7).

Abram went out at God's command, even though he knew that it meant suffering and trial, being obedient without question or hesitation. Bible history reveals that God delights to do mighty things for those who give Him unquestioning obedience.

God did great things for Abraham, and yet he did not live to see the fulfillment of the promise. He knew it was to be so, realizing that God's plan was to be carried out in the children which he did not yet have (see Heb. 11:9-11).

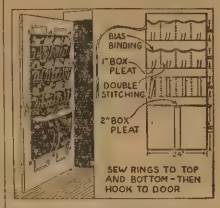
Here is a lesson for us. Our faith today, and the measure in which we apprehend the grace of God for life and service, will bless not only us, but our children (Ps. 103:17). For their sakes we ought to seek to increase the spiritual heritage of our families. Certainly we should do nothing to blight their lives (Exod. 34:7).

One may not be able to boast of the greatness and fineness of one's ancestors, but one can be determined by the grace of God to be a good ancestor.

Observe that Abraham's obedience opened up the whole history of blessing and usefulness to the entire nation of Israel, a history not yet concluded by any means. Think what opportunity he might have destroyed by disobedience.

III. A Family and Its Faith (Acts 7:12-17).

Stephen, a portion of whose address of defense before the council is here before us, reviews the history of God's dealings with Israel. Tracing the line down through Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph, he recalls how God provided a haven of plenty for them in Egypt until they were ready to be brought up into the possession of their inheritance—the land of Palestine.



Lack of space forbids the review of the lives of these pioneers of faith. The study would be most illuminating, for it repeatedly throws into sharp contrast the awful failures of these men when they forgot God, and the mighty victories they gained when they believed Him.

In spite of their failures they were essentially men of faith, for God has counted them worthy of a place in that remarkable list of heroes of faith found in Hebrews 11 (see vv. 17-22).

The days in which we live are not pioneer days in the usual sense, but they are days when God is calling for new pioneers of faith to serve Him in a befuddled and bruised world. There are stirring days ahead for the Church of Christ if we as Christians will, like Abraham, hear the call of God and go out in loving obedience to Him.

How to Cut and Make Door Pocket

HERE is extra closet space—a place for shoes, whisk broom, hat brush and other odds and ends including laundry. All you need to make this door pocket is 2½ yards of 36-inch-wide chintz, 8 yards of bias binding, 6 bone or plastic rings and half a dozen cup hooks for hanging.

First, cut a strip 8 inches wide from one side of the entire length of fabric; then cut this crosswise in three equal parts to make the shoe pockets. Now, cut the foundation piece 24 inches wide and 54 inches long. Cut the laundry pocket 18 inches deep and 28 inches wide. The diagram shows how these pieces are put together.

Fish With Bifocal Eyes Easily See Up and Down

A strange little fish with the scientific name of anableps dowei, inhabiting streams in Central America, has two eyes divided in halves, two which look up when swimming on the surface and two which remain submerged, watchful for enemies in the water.

The fish, ranging in size from six inches to a foot long, swims like an eel. Its upper eyes are adapted for seeing long distances, while the lower halves are short-sighted.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Proper inflation is a must for maximum tire service; and now we have reports of an ingenious post-war device which, through a series of lights on the car or truck dashboard, will warn the operator when the pressure in any tire is under what it should be.

• "Ducks," the amphibious 2½-ton trucks now used by the Army, have tires that originally were designed by B. F. Goodrich for desert use. The tires have broad tread and are exceptionally flexible and light in weight. These desert tires which went to sea are rendering heroic service in the South Pacific and on the European battlefronts.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Homemade Breads Stimulate Appetites
(See Recipes Below)

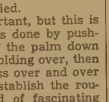
Let's Bake Breads

If you want to fill your home with delectable aroma, there's nothing like freshly baked breads with which to do it. Saturday baking is something which the present generation knows little or nothing about, because it's so easy to buy good bread.

Breads should be light and tender, tender crusted and flavor-packed. Hard to do? No, easy if you follow instructions. Many are the cooks who have baked perfect bread the first time they've tried.

Kneading is important, but this is not difficult. This is done by pushing the heel part of the palm down into the dough and folding over, then repeating the process over and over again. Once you establish the routine, there's a kind of fascinating rhythm to it. The dough should be kneaded until satiny and smooth.

Don't try to hurry up the rising process. It takes just so long, and good bread can't be hurried along. The temperature should be fairly warm, around 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit for bread raising.



If you want to avoid the dark streaks in bread, add all the flour at the time of mixing. If added later, fleur gives a coarse texture and makes unattractive streaks in the bread.

Two processes are used in making bread. If the sponge method is employed, the yeast is allowed to work in a batter-like mixture before other ingredients are combined with it. In the straight method, all ingredients are combined at once.

If you are trying to save on sugar, here is a good recipe to follow for making bread:

Enriched Bread.
(Makes 4 1-pound loaves)
2 cups milk
¼ cup light corn syrup or honey
4 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons shortening
2 cups water
1 cake yeast
¼ cup water (lukewarm)
12 cups sifted enriched flour

Scald milk. Add syrup, salt, shortening or water. Cool to lukewarm. Add yeast which has been softened in ¼ cup lukewarm water. Add flour gradually, mixing it thoroughly. When dough is stiff, place on lightly floured board and knead until satiny and smooth. Shape into smooth ball. Place in greased bowl. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk. Punch down. Let rise again. When light, divide into 4 equal portions. Round up each portion into a smooth ball. Cover and let rise 10 to 15 minutes. Mold into loaves. Place into greased pans and let rise until doubled in bulk.

Lynn Says:

Sweet Toppings: The foundation recipe for rolls may be varied many times to give variety to rolls and coffee cakes. Here are several good topping suggestions:

Mix ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons grated orange peel and 2 tablespoons orange juice on top of coffee cake during the last 10 minutes of baking.

Or, cream together 2 tablespoons of butter with 4 tablespoons brown sugar, ¼ cup nutmeats, chopped, and ½ cup coconut. Spread on coffee cake just a few minutes before it finishes baking and brown under broiler.

Mix 2 tablespoons butter with ¼ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg and ¼ cup chopped nutmeats. Sprinkle on top of quick coffee cake batter.

If you like rolls often, particularly for breakfast, may I suggest you keep this recipe for sweet dough conveniently at hand? It will make enough dough for 2 coffee cakes or 3½ dozen sweet rolls.

Foundation Sweet Dough.
2 cakes yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 cup milk
¼ cup butter or substitute
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
5 cups enriched flour

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk. Add butter, sugar, syrup and salt. Cool to lukewarm. Add 2 cups flour and beat well. Add softened yeast. Beat eggs and add. Mix thoroughly. Add remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until satiny. Place in greased bowl, cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down. Shape into tea rings, rolls or coffee cakes. Place on greased baking sheets or in greased pans. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes for coffee cakes, 15 to 20 minutes for rolls.

Honey-Orange Rolls.
1 recipe Foundation Sweet Dough
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons grated orange rind

When dough is light, punch down. Let rest 10 minutes. Roll out to rectangular sheet ¼ inch thick and 9 inches wide. Spread with honey and sprinkle with orange rind evenly over honey. Roll up jelly roll fashion, sealing edges. Cut into 1-inch slices. Place cut side down in well greased muffin pans. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in a moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Variations for Sweet Dough: Add 2 cups raisins to Foundation Sweet Dough and bake in two loaves for raisin bread.

Quick Coffee Cake.
(Makes 1 8 by 8 inch cake)
1½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
½ cup light corn syrup or honey
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg, add syrup, milk and shortening. Blend thoroughly. Add to flour mixture, stirring only enough to moisten flour. Pour over apricot or prune layer in greased square pan or top with cinnamon crumble mixture. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) 25 minutes.

Apricot or Prune Layer.
(For Coffee Cake)
½ cup chopped cooked apricots or prunes
1 tablespoon butter or substitute
2 tablespoons honey or light corn syrup

Blend ingredients thoroughly and spread over bottom of greased pan before pouring in batter.

Cinnamon Crumble Topping.
2 tablespoons butter or substitute
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup flour
½ cup dry bread crumbs
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Mix all together with a fork until mixture is of the consistency of coarse crumbs. Sprinkle over batter before baking.

Verdi wrote "Falstaff" at 80, and the "Te Deum" and "Stabat Mater" at 85. Tintoretto painted "Paradiso," a canvas measuring 74 by 30 feet, at 74; Goethe completed "Faust" at 80; Cato began to learn Greek at the same age; Tennyson wrote "Crossing the Bar" at 83.

Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote "Over the Teacups" at 78; Gladstone became prime minister of England for the third time at 77; and Titian painted that wonderful historic canvas "The Battle of Lepanto" (which hangs in Venice) at the age of 98.

Weapons Kept Dry

U. S. assault troops now carry their pistols, rifles and machine guns, during landing operations, in a new, flexible, waterproof bag that keeps the weapon dry, and afloat if dropped, and allows it to be fired, in emergencies, while still enclosed.

Quite Obviously That Was the Wrong Question

Two G.I.s on a day off were strolling along a suburban road outside London when they saw on a hillside a building which said over its archway "Hall of Remembrance"—the British phrase for crematorium. With usual G.I. curiosity, one of them went in to see what it was.

Moments later, he came flying out. To the other's question as to why the haste, the investigating G.I. replied:

"Darned if I know. I walked in and there were a lot of people in black standing around a pit from which flames seemed to be coming. All I said was:

" 'Hi, folks, what's cooking?' "

One Pound Out Of Sixty

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration says that it is only asking the people of the United States for one pound of food for war victims to every sixty pounds consumed in this country.

If this is correct and there is no reason to doubt it, there will be no hardship if we provide the food that the Relief Administration desires for victims of the war. The average Chilton County family wastes more than one pound out of every sixty-pounds of food consumed.

A Red Angus Victory

Who would have thought a Red Angus bull would come to Montgomery and win first honors in the fat stock show? Yet that is exactly what happened when the 400-pound Aberdeen Angus Premium bull "Victorious 36th" was declared grand champion of the show. Angus was the only cattle ever liberated. Years ago Angus cattle were driven in droves to Alabama from Scotland and pulled the plow.

It was then that the Angus bred it was the black Angus which sometimes appeared in the herds and through the years selected the black ones for further propagation. the result being the Aberdeen Angus of today. So that when a Red Angus appears, it is a throwback to those ancient days when all Angus cattle were red. When a Red Angus does appear it frequently has all of the marks and qualifications that win prizes. That is what happened at the Montgomery show this year. Breezy Nixon knew he had a good calf and proved it before the judges at the stockyards.—Alabama Journal, Montgomery.

Sergeant Becomes Ruler

The American Military Government in one German area was getting along fine until scores of German civilians from three suburban towns began to appear on the city streets in violation of the curfew carrying passes bearing the signatures of various "issuing officers."

Investigation disclosed that a first sergeant from an infantry company had gone A. W. O. L. and set himself up as military governor of the hamlet. For a few days he lived like a baron, ordering the village merchants to open their shops and the farmers to go ahead with their work. He appointed the prettiest girl in the town as public health officer and took her to another village to live with him.

When apprehended, the sergeant was unabashed, maintaining that he had been "selected and promoted" by a mysterious Colonel Williams, who passed through the town and told him that he had been promoted to first lieutenant and that he was the "military governor" of the town.

Other than tracking down the "mysterious Colonel" the military authorities have had little trouble with the 30,000 civilians, who, they report, have been orderly and cooperative. Apparently, there is no sign of the guerilla or gangster type of warfare about which Hitler constantly boasts.

Why Not Attract Tourists?

Governor Jeff Arnall, of Georgia, wants to make his state attractive to tourists so that Georgia can attract visitors.

Nobody has yet estimated the value tourists to California and Florida. Their state estimate that they receive millions of dollars a year from visitors who come in to spend vacations.

Alabama could develope more attractions to interest visitors who, after all are looking for a good time. Not every state has mountains and seashore, but there are lakes and hunting and fishing possibilities that provide recreation. In addition, nearly every state has scenic or historic sites which are interesting.

The automobile has produced a social revolution in the United States and together with the development of aerial travel, will enable the people of the United States to travel more in the future than in the past.

To attract tourists, it is necessary for the people of the states to provide accomodations at reasonable rates This means better hotels, better eating places and amusement and recreational facilities at fair prices.

After all, there is no reason why the state should not undertake a program along this line. While it will probably attract tourists, the truth of the matter is that the people of this state would benefit immensley. Such facilities would fit into the living plan of most Americans after the war and it will be just as well if Alabama gets busy on a suitable program.

Shorter Rations If Necessary

The increased strain of the war throughout the world has resulted in a situation where civilians in the United States may have to reduce their consumption in order that fighting men and ruthless victims of Hitler will be able to eat.

Faced with the facts the Government should not hesitate to reduce the rations that are now available to Americans at home. Regardless of the causes, there should be no hesitation whatever in assuring ample supplies for our fighting men and reasonable assistance to civilians in war-devastated areas, reclaimed by Allied armies.

The people at home will grumble, of course, because many of them continue to have the idea that a nation can fight a war without requiring its people to accept discomforts and inconveniences. Despite the fact that our food ration is far above that of our fighting allies, there will be political spell-binders to declare that starvation awaits us and their words will be picked up by disgruntled people whose main occupation in life is to complain about whatever occurs.

The bald-headed truth of the war effort of the United States is that not many people on the homefront have made any sacrifices. They have taken a few sporadic turns at war service. Most of them, including workers, professional men and capitalists, have enjoyed increased incomes, which, in almost every case, exceeds the increase in taxes and the increase in the cost of living.

The United States has escaped the destruction that war usually brings to a nation and we have had no damage inflicted by enemy bombers. In the main, life on the home front has proceeded almost as usual, with a few scarcities to let us know that we are engaged in two mighty wars. So far as real sacrifice is concerned, it has been almost an exclusive offering of men and women in the armed forces. About the only people on the homefront who have actually suffered are the grieving families of the heroic dead who gave up their lives for their country, its people and their civilization.

The individual at home should contrast his or her, present lot with that of soldiers, sailors and airmen who risk their lives in battle, accept wounds and the risk of death. They exhibit courage, patriotism and supreme devotion to country. Some of our brave women, connected with the war effort, deserve to be included with this fine company, but civilians who complain and grumble about minor inconveniences deserve the contempt of real Americans.

FOLKS & THINGS ABOUT TOWN

-By BEN

Rats! Rats! Rats! What Clanton needs is a rat extermination campaign. "Cat-fish" Eubanks tells us that a few days ago while they were idle and sitting around the Barber Shop, awaiting another customer, a large rat, about a foot long, (that's counting whiskers and tail) came out of the rear of the shop and climbed up on the labratory and was getting himself a drink of water out of the faucet. One of the boys killed it. There are several thousands in the heart of our business district that need killing we're sure and the Mayor should declare a "Rat Killing Day" here, just like the boys are doing in the South Pacific, only these rats here are four legged.

Mrs. Millard Lancaster tells us that a letter received from Burt Allison, pays the Chilton County News a high compliment. Burt is in the Army you know, and is stationed at Fort Benning, Ga. Burt says he keeps up with all his old friends through the columns of the News and it's better even than a letter from home.

Speaking of the Army reminds us that we heard recently that our old friend Sol Levine is in the army and stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C. Sol at one time, you will remember, was in business here with his brother, Doc, who operates Levines Dry Goods Co. Sol has many friends in Clanton and Chilton county.

Mr. W. M. Polk tells us that his cousin and her husband who were held for more than two years by the Japs in San Tomas prison camp on the Phillapines, are gaining back their weight and health and are going to be alright. According to Mr. Polk, when they were released, they weighed 105 and 109 pounds. Many friends here will be glad to know they are going to be o. k.

S. A. Jones says they ought to put a ceiling on the time a man has to work. Last week he worked 87 hours. After a long day in the store, S. A. says his day has just started good. After closing he had to set his incubators and take care of his hatchery. we can sure sympathize with him. We have been working hours like that for more than two years now, and it doesn't only grow old—it's making us grow old, also and definitely.

Allied Thrusts Across Germany Trap Nazi Troops by Thousands; Navy Cuts May Draft Call in Half

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TRAPS:
In Europe

As the final days of the war against Europe progressed with an increasing show of Allied might, the once highly touted Nazi army found itself split up and caught in a succession of military traps—some actual, some potential.

British troops drove hard for the North sea to pen in the large German army group H in Holland.

Patton's Third army thrust toward a junction with the Russians along the Oder river while other tank columns of his group swung off to pierce the Nazi lines before the border of Czechoslovakia.

Meanwhile combined blows of the American First and Ninth armies closed the perimeter of the Ruhr trap. These were the Nazi garrisons

GENERAL PATTON
His column swung two ways.

which General Eisenhower had termed as being "ripe for annihilation."

Aiding in closing the Holland trap was the Canadian First army. This drive had special importance because front line observers noted that the fleeing Germans had been taking with them much of the equipment used to launch the robot bombs which have given London and southern England so much trouble the past year. From the British civilian sources came word that these robot attacks had fallen off to a large degree. There were periods of several days in which no robots at all were reported.

But not all the action was confined to the British-American forces moving on Berlin from the west. Russian tank and infantry forces surged well into Austria and brought the great city of Vienna into the headlines. This drive also cut the main Vienna-Venice railroad and a transalpine highway connecting the war arsenals of Austria and Czechoslovakia with Nazi troops in Italy.

WORK OR FIGHT:
Takes a Beating

By a vote of 46 to 29, the senate rejected the bill which would have given the administration power to draft and freeze workers to war jobs and exert sweeping controls over industry. The bill, under which penalties for violators would have been $1,000 fine and a year's imprisonment, had been previously approved by the house.

The fight against the bill was led by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), but the last hope of its passage faded when Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), one of the original sponsors of the bill, lined up with those against it.

Conferences on a milder job control bill passed by the senate some time ago may be reopened, but this is very doubtful.

HERO GENERAL:
Slain on Surrender

U. S. army Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose of Denver was shot to death by Nazi tankmen while taking off his pistol to hand over to his captors. The general was captured near Paderborn, Germany, while trying to reach a portion of the 3rd armored task force, his aide, Maj. Robert Ballinger of White Plains, N. Y., revealed.

General Rose was one of the outstanding tankmen of the war. He led the 3rd armored division spearhead through northern France into Belgium. His unit was the first to break through the Siegfried line. While a hard disciplinarian, General Rose was always up in front.

PACIFIC:
Tokyo, 325 Miles

While an invasion fleet of 1,400 ships poured reinforcements of men, tanks, guns and supplies across the invasion beaches of Okinawa (only 325 miles from Japan proper) without challenge and 1,500 carrier planes roared overhead, the invasion of this vital island in the Ryukyus proceeded days ahead of schedule.

U. S. army troops who had sliced the island in two in a dash to the east coast widened their hold on the important Nakagusuku bay naval anchorage.

American observation planes operated off two of the main airfields wrested from the Japs, but units of Maj. Gen. Hodges' 24th army corps met with stiffening resistance as they advanced south along the west coast towards Naha, capital of the island, which, with other enemy strong points, was bombarded with shells and rockets from warships and planes. Casualties, however, were light on both sides.

Immense stores of supplies were moved to the beachhead, sufficient to supply the needs of the Okinawans. Great numbers of civilians were rounded up without difficulty, most of them badly undernourished from the spare diet of their Jap captors. Many came in from the hills and surrendered to the marines, eager for the marine chow. They had left the cities and airfield areas after being warned by leaflets dropped from U. S. planes before the invasion.

The island has an enemy garrison of from 60,000 to 100,000 troops, concentrated at the southern end where the landing was expected.

COAL CRISIS:
Delayed a Month

Threat of a nationwide coal strike vanished—for a month at least—when John L. Lewis agreed to extend the now-expired contract through the month of April.

His action came quickly after the War Labor board ordered an indefinite continuance of the contract with any wage adjustments later made to date from April 1. The operators who had asked for a 30-day limit on their retroactive pay obligation agreed immediately. Lewis however slapped an until-May-1 clause on his acceptance.

JOHN L. LEWIS
He got in line.

While this meant a crisis might develop at the end of the month, both operators and miners were hopeful that a new contract could be worked out before then. Negotiators went to work immediately in an effort to capitalize on the optimism emanating from both camps.

NAVY DRAFT:
Cut in Half

It meant only a 12 per cent reduction in total selective service calls for the month of May, but the navy's announcement that it would require only half the number of men it was scheduled to receive in that month caused plenty of speculation on the future of draft calls.

The official navy statement indicated that this wing of American arms was rapidly reaching authorized strength of 3,600,000 and after June calls would be necessary only for replacements.

Two main reasons were involved in the favorable progress of the navy's manpower problem:

1. High enlistments of 17-year-olds, and,
2. Casualties may not have been as high as estimated, therefore peak strength is being obtained more rapidly than anticipated.

RECONVERSION:
Another Change

Industrial observers all over the country pricked up their ears when the news came from Washington that President Roosevelt had accepted the resignation of James F. Byrnes as war mobilizer and appointed in his place Fred M. Vinson, federal loan administrator and former director of economic stabilization.

Importance was attached to the event because Byrnes had agreed last November to stay on the job until "Germany is out of the war" and the job of reconversion was ready for attention. Some sources

JAMES F. BYRNES

interpreted this move as the broadest hint yet given that Germany was considered beaten.

Vinson, former U. S. representative from Kentucky, is popular with congress. He got along good with labor in his job as economic stabilizer. With management he was equally successful in handling the problems of prices and wages. These facts augured well for his direction of the complicated job facing him as the new director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion—with emphasis on the second half of his title.

END TO BANS:
After V-E Day

As the events leading up to the final fall of Germany sped swiftly onward the Office of War Mobilization gave U. S. civilians a partial picture of what was going to happen to some of the much discussed bans which had been put into effect during the recent war months.

A few days before his resignation as war mobilizer was announced James F. Byrnes disclosed plans to end the midnight curfew, the brownout and the racing ban as soon as the Nazi fall was complete.

Price, wage and manpower controls must be continued into the indefinite future, the report stated, not only until the end of war in Japan, but until the complete economy of the country is back to a peacetime footing.

CONFERENCE:
Not a Tea Party

There were signs that the coming San Francisco United Nations conference would be anything but a quiet affair.

To begin with, Washington officials disclosed that the state department had joined with London in turning down a request from Soviet Russia that the Soviet-sponsored Polish provisional government at Warsaw be invited to the security meeting.

This meant that unless a new Polish government "of national unity" is formed before April 25 Poland could not be represented.

Also loaded with dynamite for the conference was the report that Russia would seek to divide its delegation into thirds or ask for three conference votes — one each for the U. S. S. R., the White Russian and the Ukrainian republics.

FASHIONS:
Paris or America?

From the department of commerce came a statement praising the contribution of American custom designers who, with confidence, took over the fashion situation after the German occupation of Paris, and, despite the limitation orders of WPB brought the industry to the high artistic level it enjoys today.

Whether American women will look to Paris or this country for ideas in fashions after the war ends is important to the commerce department because with the answer rests the future of huge U. S. ready-to-wear industry—largely an aggregation of small business houses.

The report was optimistic in the outlook for American designs for it revealed that retailers generally are enthusiastic over the realistic turn fashion has taken under American tutelage. More and more advertising and window display is going toward the promotion of American designs.

SPRING CLEAN-UP:

As housewives throughout the nation moved into the annual job of spring clean-up the National Fire Protection association issued a stern warning that the months of April, May and June show the highest incidence of home fires, with most of them stemming from careless housekeeping and failure to eliminate common hazards found in all homes.

Cleanliness, says NFPA, is the surest way to protect the home and family against the threat of fire.

FLOOD: The Mississippi river, hitting flood stage over a 1,544-mile course from Iowa to the Gulf, caused concern to Army engineers, who plugged gaps in the last line of flood defense at New Orleans. The engineers stood ready to operate the 100-mile Morganza floodway, hitherto unused, to divert 640,000 cubic feet of water a second from the lower river into the Gulf.

OBJECTORS: Seven conscientious objectors who were accused of deserting from the civilian public service camp at Germfask, Mich., drew sentences of three years and six months in prison from Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond of Grand Rapids. The camp is operated by the selective service administration for objectors not affiliated with religious groups.

United Nations' Parley Holds Hope of World

Russia Important Factor in Outcome of Peace Conference; U. S. Delegation Working For Successful Formula.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

I walked down the cool, twilit corridor of the senate office building and out into the warm spring sun. As I crossed the threshold, the light on the bright white marble steps blinded me and for a second I groped downward blindly.

As I stood a moment recovering my equilibrium the thought flashed through my mind that this experience was very much like the longer one which preceded it. I had been talking with Vice President Truman, Senators Connally, Vandenberg and others about the forthcoming meeting in San Francisco of the United Nations.

I recalled Truman's nervously energetic speech as he assured me that he was giving his time to just one thing: acting as liaison between the President and the senate to keep the chief executive and the legislative leaders as nearly in step as possible.

I recalled Senator Vandenberg's expression as I left him plunged deep in the thousand extra tasks and worries which his function as Republican member of the delegation had plunged him. He had said: "If San Francisco doesn't succeed it will be the greatest moral blow the world has ever experienced."

I thought of Connally's careful policy of withholding public comment or quotation concerning the coming conference, except carefully thought out statements or speeches such as the one he will make in the senate before the conference. His is the delicate task as senior administration representative on the delegation of maintaining a balance between the views of the Republican members represented on the delegation, the administration's viewpoint, and his own and other personal views. After all, as senate majority leader he is responsible for helping to carry out a policy which not only a majority, but two-thirds of the senate will accept.

I also thought of the wide variance of views expressed by members of both houses not directly connected with the negotiations and of the great reticence of many who hesitate to express any view at this time.

And I thought of the out-and-out isolationists; a very few who admit that position and others whose doubts and suspicions battle with what they feel has been the strong trend for wholehearted cooperation which the various polls and other media of public expression appear to register.

These kinetic thoughts moving now in harmony, now in friction, seemed suddenly to have generated a blinding light that burst into the shadows of the complacent assurance which had enveloped me and left me a little dizzy. What a tremendous opportunity seems to be offered to a war-weary world; what a fatal possibility if the effort fails.

Fear of Russia Shades Future

It is clear that such doubt and suspicion as may have arisen as to the possibility of failure of achievement of world cooperation arises chiefly from one thing: fear of Russia. Next is the feeling in some quarters that Churchill's inability always to get along with Stalin bodes ill for tri-party harmony and some feel that the United States instead of trying to bring the two closer together should identify American interests more closely with Britain as opposed to those of Russia.

Then there is still the unhealed sore which President Roosevelt's personal emissary, Edward Flynn, has been trying to heal, the friction between the Vatican and the Kremlin.

Lastly and perhaps more disturbing is what appears to be unilateral action toward small countries on the part of Russia in spite of the Yalta agreement.

Now those persons like Vice President Truman, who take the more positive and more hopeful view, feel that some of these factors have been built into bogey-men, that granted they exist as facts, that Churchill and Stalin don't always see eye to eye and that even less sympathy exists between the Catholic church and the head of the Communist party, none of these situations need affect the creation of an international organization.

As to fear of Russia. Well, frankly, I cannot understand the workings of the official Russian mind, I cannot understand the hysterical attacks in the Russian press on Walter Lippman, for instance, who has been in the first ranks of those who urge Russo-American unity; attacks on Senator Vandenberg against whom they throw their whole book of anti-fascist vocabulary when he is on record as supporting a three-power treaty for disarming the axis which would be the basis of the chief thing Stalin wants—an agreement of the only two great powers besides his own country, which would guarantee Russian security.

I do not understand all this. I do not accept the propaganda which tries to say that communist government is democracy. But there is one thing which sold me on playing ball with Russia. That is the patient, earnest and convincing argument of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who certainly has no more love for communism than he has for fascism, who was never accused of wandering with his head in the clouds or of trying to reform the world, or square the circle, and although he has faith a-plenty he wouldn't try to move a mountain without a bulldozer.

His argument boils down to this: Russia and America need each other. Russia knows this. There are fewer obstacles to a practical understanding between the countries than there are reasons why we should work together for mutual benefit.

Sponsors Provisions For Adjustments

Though it is generally agreed that the support of the American people of any international organization of which Russia is a part depends on the conduct of the Kremlin between now and the end of the San Francisco conference, Senator Vandenberg goes farther than that. He says that the support of the necessary two-thirds of the United States senate for any organization which recognizes international organization depends upon inserting into the document which defines it, what he calls an "escape clause." That escape clause would permit the readjusting of certain conditions now existing, certain sore spots which he feels may become cancers. The escape clause would permit the United Nations to escape from any restriction which prevented what they feel is the righting of wrongs.

"Injustice," says Vandenberg, "is a strait jacket and you can't keep the world in a strait jacket."

Of course, there are a lot of Polish votes in Vandenberg's constituency and a member of congress is such by virtue of, and the powers he exerts are delegated by, the people who put him in office. Nevertheless, he is not speaking merely for his Polish constituents when he talks about including in the jurisdiction of the United Nations, the administering of justice. That is the trademark he wants to put on any organization which comes out of San Francisco.

Other members of the delegation have trademarks of their own. But as nearly as I can judge all are willing to make considerable sacrifice of their personal views, rather than shake the world's morale with failure to produce anything

The safety record of the railroads in the present war is much better than that in the First World war, the Interstate Commerce commission reports.

This is true, the commission points out, despite the fact that there has been a substantial increase in the last few years in the number of accidents arising from the operation of trains and the number of casualties resulting therefrom.

"It appears," the commission says, "that for each class of person the fatalities were much greater in World War I than they were in World War II, the total for all classes being 10,087 in 1917 and 9,286 in 1918, compared with 5,337 in 1942 and 5,061 in 1943. In the two decades prior to our entry into the present war, notable progress was made in reducing railway accidents, and especially those resulting in casualties to passengers and employes. In 1932 and again in 1935 but a single passenger was reported as killed in a train accident, although 18 and 24 respectively in those years were killed in the train-service accidents, as in getting on and off cars."

Constipation is the cause of Much Suffering

Constipation may cause no symptoms for a long time, but unless corrected will finally impair the health. Symptoms associated with advancing constipation are loss of appetite, heavily coated tongue, tired feeling and mental depression. Headache, dizziness, anemia, and skin disturbances such as acne, are commonly experienced. In severe cases, neuralgia and joint pains occur. Indigestion, with gas formation and colic, and piles and fissures frequently add to the discomforts of severe chronic cases.

No matter how many other medicines you may have tried for constipation, we urge you to try B-L PREPARATION, with the understanding that B-L PREPARATION must bring you satisfactory results or your money back. Caution: Use only as directed.—Adv.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Local Citizen Writes On 7th War Loan Drive

The Mighty Seventh—

In writing about the Seventh War Loan to Chilton County citizens it isn't necessary to appeal to their patriotism, there are no people more patriotic. It isn't necessary to appeal to them to do their duty, no people have ever performed their duty in a more noble manner than have the people of Chilton County. It is well known that in World War No. 1, Chilton County met every quota, the first, the second, the third, the fourth and the Victory drives were over subscribed by Chilton County people. In World War No. 2, we have successfully met each quota in drives Nos. One through Six.

Now we have No. 7, the mighty Seventh. What will we do with it, The question is foolish, we will meet it of course. We do not know how to fail. We may wonder whether or not the world knows that Chilton County has made such a wonderful record. Please allow me to quote from a letter recently received from a Chilton County man now in the United States Navy:

"When my outfit was assigned to a squadron, I noted, with considerable interest, that the USS Chilton (APA 38) was our squadron flagship. Recently I had occasion to go aboard her in connection with my duties. In checking with the Ship's secretary I found that noted in the ships organization book is the fact that she is named for Chilton County, Alabama.

You can be sure that I was bursting with pride as I casually admitted to them that Chilton County was my home. I went through the ship and she is a beauty. Her spaces are large and clean and the general appearance of the officers and crew is that of efficiency. Along with the Captain of our ship and another Staff Officer, I visited the Captain of the Chilton and enjoyed a cup of coffee in his cabin. I found that one of their officers was from Gadsden, Alabama. On meeting this officer we talked for an hour and we parted with the idea of getting together again after the war. It is my understanding that the basis for naming ships after Counties is to afford recognition and honor to the people who have subscribed well to the War Bond Drives. I am sure that the people at home will be as proud as I am of the fact that our County is really represented in this war. The mission of the Chilton is one of attack. You may be sure that she will be doing much and eliminating many Japs. It is a coincident that I am sailing under the flag of the Chilton."

Well folks the good Ship Chilton is out there doing her bit and you will note that this Navy Man says "her mission is that of attack." That's our job, "attack". Let's attack this Seventh War Loan Drive with vim and vigor, let's accomplish the job in a thorough manner and keep old Chilton County's record untarnished.

The slogan as you know, is "The mighty Seventh. in Seven Days". We can do it and we will do it.

Mr Churchhill recently visited the front in Germa , and he said "One big heave by all of us and the war will be over". That's the situation with Chilton County in this Seventh Drive One big heave by all of us and the drive will be over.

Respectfully,
F. J. CALLEN.

P: S. The Navy mans letter is in my possession and anyone interested may read it.—F. J. C.

MORAL ECHOES

Rev. D. W. Haskew, D.D.

In India there is a bird that the natives call, "Pity-to-do-it". The bird won its name by the sound that it made day and night. It seemed to say, "Pity to do it". The story about this bird is that when it lies down at nite it lifts it's feet into the air to keep the sky from falling upon it. It is known as the champion pessimist in the country. By its pessimism it has made itself thin, scrawny and fussy. Well, some of us are pretty much like that bird. We make ourselves round-shouldered in carrying our loads and the loads of others. Tomorrow always has a big lion standing in our path. It is much better to be a Mocking bird with your throat filled with a song and your heart singing with joy.

We stacked the fodder high around the tall Poplar pole. That night a storm came up and the next morning the fodder stack was leaning badly. Another pole was secured and placed under the fodder stack, and upon it the fodder leaned. Later on when that pole was removed, down came the fodder. Many of us meet with testing times in life. When it seems that we are going to fall, some person or some influence gets beneath us and on that we lean. Many form the habit of being leaners, and when that support is removed, down we tumble. Wives lean on husbands, children lean on parents, the family leans on their money, the church leans on its pastor, and often when the support is removed, down tumbles the one who leans. The most of us depend too much upon somebody else. Leaners are losers. Form the habit to stand alone when [illegible] around you.

What kind of progress are you making? In the mountain home the father died and the oldest son took over. Ten years later another son who had prospered came back to the mountain home and thus addressed his brother. said he, "Sam, you were born here and living here you make no progress. Sell out this place and go to some war plant and make progress." "Progress" snarled his brother. "Who said I was not making progress here. Why, when my Pappy died he only had one dawg, and now I have ten dawgs." That was making progress of one dog a year, but it was not progress in things that were worth while. Suppose that you do have a few more dollars than ten years ago, is that progress?

When the coal miner comes up from his day of toil, his face may be ever so black and grimy with coal dust, but his eyes are clear and lustrous, because of the fountain of tears that keep them washed and clean. As the dust falls into his eyes the water glands pour in their stream of cleansing fluid that washes away the grime. Is that not the miracle of cleansing which our spirits need in such a world as this? And this is what our blessed Lord is prepared to do for us by His cleansing blood. When we trust Him every day and in every work of life, He will keep our soul washed and clean.

There are many ways of promoting Christian wakefulness. One is to be constantly talking to each other about the love and goodness of God. In the Pilgram Progress, Bunyan tells us that when Hopeful and Christian felt themselves becoming drowsy they fell into ardent discourse and talked much about what God had done for them along the way to the Celestial City. It is a fact that when Christian people isolate themselves and walk alone, they are likely to become drowsy and sleepy in a spiritual sense. Cherish Christian company, and speak often with your companions about God, and you will be kept refreshed and wakeful. In driving a car wakefulness is so necessary that all parties in the car may be safe. When you find yourself drifting toward drowsiness in your soul. you had better do something about it.

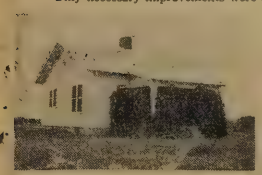
$8,500 Net Cash Balance In 6 Years From Farm-Size Experiment

Hogs were added to supplement cotton as an important source of cash income on this farm.

THIS IS NOT a story of quick riches from farming. It is another story of increased farm income which can result from information developed by the Agricultural Experiment Station of Alabama Polytechnic Institute in its farm-size experiments.

This is a statement of results obtained on a 96-acre farm owned and managed as a farm-size experiment by the Experiment Station. The farm, on which were used only those practices that can be followed by all farmers of the region, produced, in the six-year period of 1938-43 an average annual income about double that of Alabama farms of the same acreage and in the same period.

Soon after the Experiment Station began its management of the farm, soil improvement programs including proper fertilizing, cover crops, and crop rotation were begun. The farm did not buy into the hog business. Other than the thirty-seven weanling pigs bought to market the first year's corn crop, only foundation stock was purchased.



Average production in the six-year period was 21 bales of cotton and about 70 top hogs, totaling a little more than 15,000 pounds of live weight per year. Profitable hog production on this farm has been dependent largely upon the amounts of feed and grazing produced.

At the end of the second three-year period of the Experiment Station's management of this farm, the cash balance amounted to $8,521.20. This cash balance represents what a farmer would make operating a similar farm under a similar system. However, out of the total balance would have to come family cash expenses for clothing, education, doctor services, medicine and lights during the period of the farm's operation.

Assuming that a debt of $5,000 against his farm existed, the farmer in similar case could have paid off the entire debt in the second three-year period without handicapping his family. He would then be in a position successfully to weather seasons of lower yield and production, and periods of lower farm prices, because paying off the mortgage would eliminate interest charges during such periods.

Details of how these results were accomplished are given in Circular 91, just published by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station. A free copy may be obtained by writing M. J. Funchess, Director, Agricultural Experiment Station, Auburn, Alabama.

Only necessary improvements were made. A tenant house and barn were built, and the original house on the farm was reconditioned.

This advertisement published by Alabama Power Company in cooperation with the Agricultural Experiment Station of Alabama Polytechnic Institute to help bring about greater income for Alabama farms.

The Agricultural Experiment Station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute wants to, and can, help farmers improve farm income. It knows from experience what CAN be done. What WILL be done will depend largely on the realization of Alabama farmers themselves that something MUST be done to offset the expected postwar decline in the importance of cotton as a profitable crop.

SAILOR WRITES TO MOTHER OF LANDING BY YANKS ON CORREGIDOR—THE ROCK

March 30, 1945

Dear Mom:

Sometime ago we had ringside seats for one of the thrilling scenes of the war.

We gave naval support for the landing on Corregidor—and what a show it was. Watch for pictures of it in Life Magazine

The "Rock" was well plastered by our bombers early in the morning and then just at 0830 the paratroopers arrived.

Soon the air was full of parachutes of varying colors. They looked like lovely magnified raindrops in slow motion. It was a wonderful sight to watch the transport planes coming in one right after the other dropping their load of chutists. You could see them coming evenly spaced for miles, it was really quite a holiday in the skies.

Then the troops began to land in the water and the wood operation was beautifully coordinated, each element playing it's part perfectly, working together with the smoothness of a highly trained football team.

All this time the air was full of planes of all kinds—fighters, bombers, observation planes and our own float planes were up there too. While the transports were flying at one level, bombers were coming in at a different altitude and droping their bombs on a different part of the island.

After the paratroopers had landed, the plateau on top of Corregidor looked very much like a Philippine wash day, and the island was dotted with various color chutes. It looks like the Japs may be pretty well "washed up" on the Philippines.

It was an unforgettable sight, particularly because it meant the recapture of Corregidor, where our troops hung on so tenaciously about three years ago

We felt honored to have a part in this historic operation and was glad to have had the opportunity of seeing it from such a splendid vantage point —not from a news reel.

Another highly interested operation for the "Mighty-Monty."

Your son,

CHARLES.

SPECIAL ATTENTION SHOULD BE GIVEN TO TERRACING

Special attention should be given to terrace maintenance in the plowing and preparation of land this spring, advises M. R. Glasscock, County Agent, in pointing out the importance of having terraces large enough to take care of the heavy spring rains.

Methods of plowing terraces for proper terrace maintenance vary somewhat, depending upon the shape of the terraces before plowing starts, the agent says. One of the important things to strive for, however, is to have a broad channel and ridge that will permit easy operation of planting and cultivating machinery.

By using the one-land method of plowing it is possible to increase the size and water-carrying capacity of terraces without any plowing other than what would be done in plowing the land. This method of plowing is illustrated in Extension Circular 165, "Terracing and Related Soil Conservation Practices for Alabama." Farmers may get a copy of this circular at the County Agent's Office or by writing the Extension Service. Auburn, Ala.

SUGAR: Sugar Stamp No. 35—good for five pounds—expires June 2.

SHOES: Airplane Stamps No. 1 2 and 3 now good.

GASOLINE: A-15 coupons valid through June 21. Rationing rules now require that each car owner write his license number and state on each coupon in his possession as soon as it is issued to him by his local rationing board. Your mileage rationing record must be presented to the board when applying for supplemental B and C gasoline rations.

RENT CONTROL AREAS: Tenants must see the authority for the maximum rent on one copy of forms which are filed with the OPA Rent Office.

New Food Stamp Validation

District Rationing Executive Irby A. Jones called attention to the new OPA policy in issuing food stamps.

New red and blue food ration stamps now become good on the same date: The first of each calendar month, he pointed out.

Blue stamps and red stamps will be validated in blocks of five, making a total of 50 blue points for canned fruits and vegetables and 50 red points for meats and fats each month, he said.

Infant's Shoes

To meet the critical needs shoe rationing will be extended May 1 to include the entire size range of infant's leather shoes, Irby A. Jones, head of OPA district shoe rationing division said today.

He pointed out that infant's shoes, sizes 0 to 4, which are not rationed, may not be returned to a dealer after May 1 in exchange for other shoes without surrendering a shoe rationing stamp, and that a dealer may not give a special shoe stamp for the return of shoes which were purchased prior to May 1 as unrationed merchandise.

Filing Date MPR-580 Reports

OPA District Director, Dr. A. H. Collins, reminded all merchants dealing in wearing apparel and home furnishings of the April 20th deadline for filing reports under Maximum Price Regulation 580.

Every retailer dealing in commodities covered by this regulation must file two copies of his pricing chart with his OPA District Office by April 20th, he said.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the Title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages and judgments or other liens, affecting the Title, which an Abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an Abstract of Title be furnished. IT TAKES PLENTY OF WAR BONDS TO BUILD B-29s

THE WAR in the Pacific is the most costly war America has ever engaged in. It's simple arithmetic. A mountain of special, costly equipment is needed. A B-29 Superfortress used in the bombing of Japan costs $600,000 in War Bonds. And this is just one of the many extra costly implements of war needed to achieve final victory in the Pacific.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth, an M.P., was in charge of security. The Major set out to win the trust of the citizens and promised to replace the town bell stolen by the Nazis. General Marvin, chief of American forces in that section, became enraged at the carts on road leading into the city and ordered the Major to keep them out of the city. Hearing that the city could not get water without the carts, Major Joppolo told Captain Purvis to let them enter the city. Purvis, to protect himself, reported the matter to headquarters. The letter was held up in the office.

CHAPTER VIII

"Giuseppe," the Major said, "I want to see Tina's father because you said he was the most respected of all the fishermen. I want to start the fishermen going out again, so that Adano will have something besides pasta and tomatoes and eggplant to eat. That's all there is to it."

"Boss, you're a kid Giuseppe."

"Giuseppe, do you want me to get another interpreter?"

"Okay, a boss, you're not a kid Giuseppe."

"I do want to see the old man. Will you fix that for me?"

"That's what I'm a sorry, boss."

"What do you mean?"

"Tina's old a man Tomasino no want a see you, a boss."

"Why not? Did you say something about my wanting to go out with his daughter?"

"Oh no, a boss. Old a man Tomasino say he never been in a Palazzo di Citta in a life. He hate a Fascist a crooks. He don't know you're a different. He won't a come a here."

"That's easy, Giuseppe. We'll go see him." The Major looked at a pad of appointments he had begun to keep on his desk. "Be ready to go at three this afternoon, Giuseppe."

And so it happened that another precedent was broken in Adano. Never in the memory of anyone in the town had an official gone calling on a citizen on business. Either the citizen had come willingly to the Palazzo, or else the citizen had been arrested, and had come against his will.

Between the time of this conversation and three o'clock, Giuseppe told several people about this amazing flexibility on the part of the Major. And therefore when it came time for them to go down to the port looking for old Tomasino, quite a large crowd had gathered in front of the Palazzo, and the crowd followed the Major and Giuseppe as they walked.

"Where do these people think they're going?" the Major asked Giuseppe.

"Just a bunch a busybody," Giuseppe said.

The Major turned around. "Go home, you people," he said in Italian. "Don't you have anything better to do at three in the afternoon?"

But the people kept right on following Giuseppe and the Major.

Giuseppe led the Major, and therefore the crowd, down to the harbor and past the stone pier, past the sulphur loading jetties, past the patent slips, past the Molo Martino to the Molo di Ponente, where the fishing boats were tied up.

The Major sensed that he was going to have a tough time with old Tomasino, so he said to Giuseppe: "Interpreter, unless you keep this crowd well back, you will lose your job."

"What is an interpreter to us," people said, "when we have a chance to see something new in Adano? . . . This has never happened before . . . What is the unemployment of one man?" And they kept moving forward.

Giuseppe shouted: "The Major will be very angry if you do not stop right here." And then he added softly: "Let us make a deal. If you stop, I will listen to the conversation, and I will tell you what is said."

On this basis the crowd was willing to stop.

By this time, Major Joppolo had come to the boat of old Tomasino. He recognized the boat not only by the fact that there was a morose-looking man sitting on the afterdeck, but also by the illuminated inscription, with its letters trailing off into leaves and fruits, just under the eye-piece of the bow: Tina.

The Major jumped up onto the bow.

"All right, man of authority," said the morose man, "arrest me."

"I haven't come to arrest you, Tomasino," the Major said.

Giuseppe came running up to listen. He stayed on the mole, so that he could commute easily between actors and audience.

"Why are you wearing your pistol?" the morose man said. "Shoot me, go ahead, shoot me."

"I always wear my pistol, Tomasino," the Major said.

"You have come to arrest me because I refused to go and see the American Major," the morose man said.

"That is not true," the Major said. "Then why have you brought this informer, Ribaudo Giuseppe, who asked me to go see the American Major, and to whom I refused?"

"I am the American Major, Tomasino."

Tomasino did not bat an eye. "Why have you brought this crowd, if you were not planning to arrest me?"

"I didn't bring it, Tomasino, it just came. I don't want the crowd any more than you do. I just want to talk with you about fishing."

"I do not believe it," the morose man said. "All men of authority are alike. You came to arrest me, or perhaps to shoot me."

"I beg you to believe me," the Major said.

Giuseppe whistled to himself and ran back to the crowd. "It is amazing," he said impressively. "The Major said to Tomasino: 'I beg you to believe me.' "

" 'Beg,' " said the people in the front of the crowd. "Amazing."

"There has never been such a begging," others said. "The Mister Major is willing to be a beggar to this Tomasino."

"What did he say?" shouted people in the back of the crowd.

"He said: 'I beg you, Tomasi-

"The Major will be very angry if you do not stop right here."

no,' " shouted people in the front of the crowd.

"Amazing," shouted the ones in back.

Giuseppe ran back out onto the mole.

The Major was saying: "It is this, Tomasino: I want you and the others to start fishing again."

"Why?" said the morose Tomasino. "So we can line the pockets of the authorities?"

"No, Tomasino, so that you can line the stomachs of the people of Adano."

"Hah," said Tomasino bitterly, "a benevolent man of authority."

"Tomasino, you don't understand. The Americans are different from the Fascists."

"Hah," said Tomasino. "I have heard that before. The Mayor Crapa said he was going to be different from the Mayor Martoglio, and the Mayor Nasta after him said he was going to be different from the Mayor Crapa. The only difference was that the tribute and the protection money and the taxes got higher each time. How much protection money do you want, American?"

"You have the wrong idea, Tomasino."

"Hah," said the morose Tomasino. "I am an old man, American. I have seen men of authority come and go. I don't believe that you are any different from all the others."

Here Major Joppolo got angry. "Old fisherman," he said, "you will have to understand something. The people of Adano are hungry. They must have fish. Do you get that through your thick skull?"

Giuseppe ran back to the crowd. "It is wonderful," he said. "The Mister Major said: 'The people of Adano are hungry. They must have fish.' "

The people in front repeated this and then shouted at the top of their voices: "Live the Mister Major! Live the Mister Major!"

The people in back shouted: "What did he say?"

The people in front shouted: "He thinks we ought to have fish for our hunger."

The whole crowd shouted then: "Live the Mister Major!"

Tomasino on the boat heard this, and it made him suspicious. "Why have you hired these people to come and jeer at me? No, I will not go fishing."

Major Joppolo shouted to Giuseppe in English: "Make the people go away! They are ruining everything."

Giuseppe passed on the Major's request, but the people just laughed at him. "Now?" they said. "You are crazy, interpreter. Speaking two languages has made you crazy."

Giuseppe shouted to the Major: "I'm a can't a do nothing, a boss."

So the Major said to Tomasino: "Wait for me, Tomasino, I will show you that I mean well toward you." And he jumped down on the mole and went to the crowd.

"Do you want fish?" he asked the crowd.

"Yes!" the people shouted.

"Then you must go home," the Major said. "It is not easy to persuade Tomasino to go fishing. You must choose between this stupid gaping and having fish."

The crowd chose. Watching this unprecedented conversation and getting bulletins on it from Giuseppe was immediate, it was now. Eating fish was future and uncertain at best. The crowd chose staying to watch.

When he saw that he could not argue them into going home, Major Joppolo said to Giuseppe: "Where is the nearest telephone?"

Giuseppe said: "I guess she's in a Port a Captain's office, I show a you."

A thrill of curiosity ran through the crowd as the Major and Giuseppe went off. What had previously been the Italian Port Captain's office was now the office of the American Naval Lieutenant in charge of harbor facilities at Adano. This was Lieutenant Livingston, who had gone into the Navy's V-7 program early in the war, and had entered on his application blank as one of his main qualifications to be an officer and a gentleman: "Have had experience with small boats." This experience, as a matter of fact, consisted of rowing on the crew at Kent School and at Yale. At Yale, Crofts Livingston was known as a fellow who would do anything for you if he liked you, but he was rather choosy in his friends.

Lieutenant Livingston had not yet decided to like Major Joppolo. The Major had not gone to either Kent or Yale. There was a rumor around that he had once been some kind of clerk in the New York City government under Walker and O'Brien. Lieutenant Livingston was inclined to the opinion that it was too bad the Army had sent such a meatball to be administrator of a town like Adano. And besides, when the Major saw a Navy officer wearing two bars, which anyone ought to know stood for Lieutenant Senior Grade, Major Joppolo would address him as Captain. .

"Hello, Captain," the Major said when he walked into Lieutenant Livingston's office, "can I use your phone?"

"Good morning," the Lieutenant said, "what are you doing down here?" The tone of the Lieutenant's Kent-Yale voice indicated that he thought the Army ought to stay on Army ground, and let the Navy stay on Navy shore.

"Can I use your phone?" the Major said. The Major was a single-minded man.

"Sure, help yourself."

The Major called Rowboat Blue Forward.

While he was waiting, he said to the Lieutenant: "I'm trying to get these fishermen organized, got to get rid of a mob first."

The Lieutenant did not look particularly pleased with this summary of the Major's activities.

"Hello, this the M.P.'s? Purvis? Listen, I want you to come down here. I got a mob to break up. Bring your Colt along, think if you fire six into the air, that's all we'll need to send 'em home. . . . We're down at the port, over by the breakwater on the western side. Okay, hurry down."

The Major thanked Lieutenant Livingston for the use of the phone.

Lieutenant Livingston said: "Uh, Major, seems to me this fishing racket is more or less a Navy deal, isn't it?"

The Major said: "Yeah, I'll be back to see you, I'm in a hurry now. Thanks for the phone, Captain. See you later."

As the Major and Giuseppe passed the crowd on the way back to the Tina, Giuseppe said to the crowd: "As a friend, I advise you to go home."

People in the crowd, delighted with the mystery of the Major's hurried visit to the Port Captain's office, mocked Giuseppe. "Poor Ribaudo Giuseppe," they said, "speaking two languages has weakened his head."

"All right," Giuseppe said, "I have advised you as a friend."

At the Tina, Tomasino was sullen again. "I see you gave your hired crowd their instructions," he said. "Go ahead, take me, what have I to lose?"

Major Joppolo said: "They will all go home soon, Tomasino. I have given instructions for them to be sent home. Now, about the fishing. Do you think you could get together crews for five or six boats?"

Tomasino said: "Who is to be the protector of these crews? What criminal?"

"Protector?"

"To whom do the fishermen have to pay tribute this time?"

"Don't mock me, fisherman. What are you talking about?"

"Hah," said Tomasino, a man who could be amused with the most gruesomely sad face. "Hah, does the man of authority pretend he doesn't understand the system of protection?"

Major Joppolo spoke harshly: "What are you talking about, fisherman?"

Household Hints

If you thumb-tack waxed paper to the pastry board before rolling out the pastry, the dough won't stick.

Machine stitch the drawstring on pop's and junior's pajamas firmly at center back. Then it's less likely to become detached and get caught in the washer.

To curl a feather that has been damaged by water, sprinkle it liberally with salt and shake before a fire or over a hot radiator until dry.

Reinforce your heavy bath towels along each side with a binding of one-inch tape. Strengthens them for the hard pulling men and boys give them rubbing hard after shower baths.

When nuts need to be cracked with a hammer, hold them in place with an ordinary nutcracker. They crack more evenly, allowing less waste, and prevent many an injured finger.

If small bits of leftover foods are placed in small jars for the refrigerator, several of them may be placed in one pan of water and reheated for serving. This makes one pan do the trick instead of having several small ones to wash.

BEAT TWO REACHES WAR BOND QUOTA SECOND DAY

It took Beat Two less than two days to reach their Seventh War Bond quota of $18,300.00.

The Chilton County Committee adopted as the slogan, "The Mighty Seventh, In Seven Days", but it looks like Beat Two, under the leadership of A. C. Wells, chairman, couldn't wait around while the other Beats of the county made up their mind to go to work. Late Tuesday afternoon, the second day of the drive, they reported a sale of $18,525.75. That certainly gives the other Beats of the county something to shoot at.

In the Army's overseas tugboat fleet in Mediterranean waters it is not rare to find a sergeant who is captain of a boat and a private first class who is chief engineer.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before "your time", it should help relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

VOLUMN XXIII — CLANTON, ALABAMA, — THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1945 — NUMBER 16

CHILTON CITIZENS IT IS OUR RESPONSIBILITY

The Seventh War Loan Quota Is Only About Half Made. We Must All Work Together We Must All Buy Bonds Together

The State War Finance Committee advised the Chilton County Chairman that Chilton County purchases to date exceed any other county in the nation. This statement should be a personal compliment to every citizen of the county and inspire each to work a little harder to be the first to complete the quota.

It is not the job of a few, it is the job of everyone—man, woman, and child. Don't think that we are not being noticed in Washington either. We have drawn the attention from the Nation's Capitol by our good record in past drives and their eyes are on us in the "Mighty Seventh".

Here is the contents of a telegram received from Congressman Pete Jarman Saturday.

Chairman War Bond Committee,
Clanton, Alabama

Hearty congratulations on your ambition to exceed quota early, and best wishes for it's fullfilment. I know the good people of Chilton will carry on with renewed vigor and put this drive and all other war endeavors over even more magnificiently than would have otherwise occured. They and America will do so in memory and appreciation of our great departed leader. Kind regards to all.

IMPORTANT

Be sure to come to the High School gymnasium Friday night, April 20th, at 8 o'clock to see the Senior III Class play, "Sunbonnet Jane of Sycamore Lane." This will be the best play of the season with Edna Henley as Sunbonnet Jane and Jack Marcus as Toby Simpkins. Also in the cast we have Dalene King as Jane's aunt, Grace Jasper; Mary Jo McGowin as Jane's friend, Nola Miller; Norma Davenport as Miranda Jasper; Erchel Bean as Jason Gouch; Andrew Hickman as Douglas Smith; Fannie Jo Broadhead as Crystal Cluett from the city; Verga Nell Jones Walker as Ollie Dinkleberry, the old maid school teacher looking for a husband; Billy Bean as Schuyler Pell, the lover; and Bernice Foshee as Marion Marsh, Jane's mother.

Now that really sounds like a wonderful cast for such a wonderful play. You just can't afford to miss this play. The cast is well-known to all of you, and they are having the time of their lives rehearsing and preparing this play for your amusement. Just ask any of the above-mentioned group what they think of "Sunbonnet Jane Of Sycamore Lane," and you'll want to drop everything and rush right over to the High School Gym to get you a seat.

Don't miss this grand entertainment and bring as many of your friends with you as you can. It will be worth their while and yours. Tickets are 35c for all.

FFA AND FHA NEWS

The girls of the Future Homemakers of America took as their project the selling of Easter Seals. We are proud of the co-operation of all the students in helping us achieve our goal of one hundred per cent participation. We collected forty-six dollars and thirty-seven cents.

April 6th, the Clanton FHA and FFA enjoyed their joint spring picnic. Only members of the clubs attended with the sponsors, Mrs. Kinney and Mr. and Mrs. Tyler, guest teacher, Mr. Henry Adair.

This year the FHA is planning to set aside a certain amount of money for the Home-Economics Department. —Reporter, Ella Mae Johnson.

Joint Meeting Held At Methodist Church

The Board of Stewards and the Workers Council of the Methodist Church held a joint meeting at the church Monday night, April 16th.

Mr. D. C. Culp, chairman, opened the meeting by asking Reverend O. C. Lloyd to lead in prayer.

By a unanimous vote, those assembled, decided to open church school at 9:45. It was decided the entire adult department would assemble in the main auditorium of the church every fifty Sunday: the young people will join them.

Rev. Lloyd was authorized to join with other pastors of the town in taking a church census.

Assistance was promised the teachers of the Primary Department in securing proper equipment for use in teaching young people.

Mr. D. C. Culp and Mr. R. C. Williamson were appointed to plan the painting of the Primary Class rooms and to secure painters to paint them.

Mrs. Haywood, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Omar Reynolds were appointed to plan a Vacation Bible School.

It was decided to have a Workers Council meeting every first Monday night.—E. Haywood.

FIDELIS SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Fidelis Sunday School Class was held in the home of Mrs. Lawrence F. Gerald, Jr., Thursday evening, April 12th, with Miss Lois Black and Mrs. James Parrish serving as co-hostesses.

Miss Lois Black conducted the devotional which was followed by the Bible quiz by Mrs. Mullins.

A delightful salad plate was served by the hostesses to the following members:

Mollye Megginson, Flora Harris, Frances Bean, Katherine Gibson, Sybil Littlejohn, Elizabeth B. Barton, Merita Henley, Ethel Alexander, Marguerite Perry, Ann McCary, Mrs. J. R. Mullins, Lois Black, Nelle Parrish and Miriam Gerald.—Zora Guy Smith, Reporter.

HOMEMAKERS CLASS TO MEET FRIDAY, APRIL 20TH

The Homemakers Class of the First Baptist Church will meet Friday, April 20th, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs Evelyn Teel. There will be a guest speaker for the afternoon.

All members are urged to be present at this meeting.

FFA Fat Stock Show Will Be Held Here On May 3rd.

The Chilton County 4-H-FFA Fat Stock Show will be held in Clanton May 3rd, at 10:30 a.m. in front of the County Agent's Office. Dr. D. J. Meador, L & N Railroad Livestock Specialist, will be judge.

Chilton County boys and girls have fed out a nice group of animals this year that they are proud to exhibit in a County Show in Clanton. At this show everyone will have an opportunity to see the results of good breeding, feeding and management of beef cattle.

In a feeding period of approximately eight months many of these animals have doubled their weight. This is a very rapid rate of gain and can be gotten only by following a very good feeding program.

The Feeder Beef Calf Club was organized with definite objectives in mind namely to stimulate interest in better breeding, to encourage systematic well balanced feeding practices, to create in club boys and girls a keen desire for quality animals, and to arouse greater interest in better farming practices which will grow our beef and correlated club projects. Other than the invaluable knowledge gained from a project of this nature, boys and girls have been encouraged to follow practical feeding practices so that they may also receive a substantial cash return on their project work.

After the County Show, the club members will carry their animals to Birmingham, where they will compete against other club members from over the state. We believe that Chilton County boys and girls are going to offer a lot of stiff competition at the Birmingham Show and we feel that Chilton County will get their just share of honors and prize money.

Everyone is invited to attend the County Show and see one of the best groups of fat steers that has ever been exhibited in Chilton County.

CELEBRATES 8TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hamilton celebrated their 8th Wedding Anniversary Sunday, April 15th, with a dinner picnic at Log Cabin Beach.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Harris and children of Mobile; Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Butram of Selma; and Mr. and Mrs. Turner Giddens of Bessemer.

PIANO RECITAL

Mrs. Henry Jones is presenting her pupils in piano recital at the Baptist Church on April 25th, at 7:30 o'clock. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Officers Installed By Veterans

At the last meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of U.S. Post 3193 Clanton, Ala. Mr. John P Reynold Department Commander of Besemer Ala., was present and installed the following officers:

T. Horton Walker, Post Commander; James E. Rasberry, Quartermaster; Robert C. Williams, Sr., Vice-Commander; W. L. (Bill) Hampton, Jr., Vice Commander, and Reuben Bearden, Chaplain.

After these officers were installed Commander Walker appointed the various committees and James E Rasberry was appointed Post Adjutant, in addition to his duties as Post Quartermaster.

The next meeting is called for Monday night, April 23rd, at the courthouse at 8 o'clock. Several matters of importance is to be taken up and every eligible member is urged to attend.

Any veteran who has had service overseas in any war under the American Flag is urged to be present and affiliate.

Parents may get their sons on the charter list by contacting the Post Commander or Adjutant. The deadline for getting on the charter list is drawing near.

APRIL IS CANCER CONTROL MONTH

Designation of April as Cancer Control Month, by an act of Congress, has focused attention of the nation on this dread disease. Statistics reveal the startling fact that approximately 2,000 of this State's population of 2,646,000 will die of cancer during the coming year.

Haygood Paterson, state civilian defense director, has been named chairman of the campaign to raise Alabama's share of a $5,000,000 fund for research in cancer control. The appointment was made by Eric Johnston, president of the United Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the national campaign committee which will direct the fund-raising drive during April.

Paterson will work with Mrs. Ray Meade, of Birmingham, state commander of the American Cancer Society's Field Army, and with the organizations set up in every county in the State. Mrs. Sophia L. Jones is County Commander in Chilton. Enlist in this great army in an organized battle against cancer, a disease that killed 21 people in Chilton County last year. "Guard those you love," is the stirring slogan of the American Cancer Society. April is the month of opportunity.

Ex-Mayor J. W. Stanfield of Greenville, Ala., spent last Thursday and Friday here visiting his brother, S. S. Stanfield. He enjoyed several nice fishing trips while here on his visit.

Roosevelt's Death Alters Political Picture

FEW PRESIDENTS HAVE DOMINATED POLITICAL SCENE AS DID ROOSEVELT

The death of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt shocked the people of this country and of the world. His passing will completely alter the political situation and create confusion in the efforts of the Democratic nations to achieve an effective organization for world peace.

In the United States, Mr. Roosevelt personified the issues of his era to such an extent that he dominated the political scene as few Presidents have ever done. He captivated the vast majority of Americans during his first campaign for the Presidency in the summer of 1932 and, despite the inevitable vicissitudes of leadership, retained the trust and confidence of most of these supporters.

With Mr. Roosevelt in the White House for a fourth term, the affairs of the country, domestic and international were in the hands of an intelligent, courageous and experienced leader. It is no disparagement of President Truman to note this fact.

Insofar as the future of the Democratic Party is concerned, the passing of Mr. Roosevelt completely alters the political situation. There were many probabilities in line for consideration in 1948, but this is no longer true. The Party will have to stand on the record of President Truman, who is likely to secure a renomination in accordance with the almost invariable custom of the past.

Henry A. Wallace and other Democratic probabilities face an entirely different prospect. They can no longer reasonably expect to be [illegible] the ticket on their Party in 1948, unless there is a complete collapse of the Party under the leadership of President Truman and, in [illegible] event, the nomination would not [illegible] world-wide [illegible]

It is [illegible] that the [illegible] of Mr. Roosevelt's death [illegible] his familiarity with the problems involved and his personal [illegible] with the leaders of [illegible] would have been [illegible] in connection with the effort to eliminate difficulties and to effect a workable arrangement that would make possible the cooperation of [illegible]

Despite the admitted value of his personal leadership, it is possible, of course, that the United States will play its part in world affairs and that other leaders will be able to attain the objectives which now occupy the thoughts of the free peoples of the world.

Since 1932, the activities of Mr. Roosevelt may be divided into the following catagories:

(1) The economic emergency, in which the President had to act boldly and drastically to restore public confidence;

(2) The years of legislative reforms, in which the Presidency [illegible] ed the enactment of legislation which not only produced a social revolution in this country but won the approval in principle of his political opponents;

(3) The period of preparation, during which Mr. Roosevelt put aside his reform program in an effort to unite the people to meet the perilous problems of approaching war;

(4) The war period, marked by his amazing comprehension of the import and magnitude of the struggle and the miraculous mobilization of the resources and manpower of this country for the prosecution of successful warfare;

(5) Planning for a future epoch of peace, involving the difficult adjustment of conflicting national ambitions, the promotion of a practical program which could secure the cooperation of free nations, and the improvement of the standard of living of all peoples everywhere through the equitable development of world trade; and,

(6) Preparations for the reconversion of the nation to its normal peacetime status, which, undoubtedly, included plans to provide greater security for the people of this country.

He Gave His Life For The Country He Loved

End Came Suddenly

President Passes Two Hours After Being Stricken With Cerebral Hemorrhage At Warm Springs, Ga.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt who was spending a rest period at the Little White House at Warm Springs, Ga. died suddenly without pain of a cerebral hemorrhage, two hours after being stricken with a very heavy occipital headache from which he became unconscious. He did not regain consciousness and died at 3:35 p.m., central war time.

Com. Howard Bruenn, naval physician, made the announcement to reporters shortly after White House Secretary William D. Hassett called a hurried news conference to announce the death of the naiton's only fourth-term chief executive.

News of his death spread quickly and caused many a tear among the 125 infantile paralysis patients at the foundation here.

Present in the cottage were Com. Howard Bruenn, naval physician; Com. George Fox, White House pharmacist and long an attendant on the president Hassett, Miss Grace Tully, confidential secretary, and two cousins, Miss Laura Delano and Miss Margaret Suckley.

Dies Atop Pine Mountain

Mr. Roosevelt died in the bedroom in his little white bungalow atop Pine Mountain, where he had been coming for 20 years to take the after-treatments for infantile paralysis which he was stricken in 1921.

Mayor Frank W. Allcorn, of Warm Springs, was giving a barbecue at his mountain cabin that afternoon for the president and about 50 other guests. Allcorn was awaiting the president's arrival when reporters got word through the Army Signal Corps radio telephone and Summer White House telephone communication to rush to the foundation.

Mr. Roosevelt arrived at Warm Springs March 30. He had been underweight and his doctors wanted him to take it easy to see if he could not regain the poundage at which he felt comfortable.

Was Second Trip to Georgia

This was President Roosevelt's second stay at Warm Springs in four months. The president spent 19 days here only last November-December.

Rumors had been heard that the president was not picking up as much as his doctors would have liked.

The death announcement was made in the center of the 2,000-acre Warm Spring Foundation for polio treatment which the president helped found more than 20 years ago. That was before he began serving his first term as governor of New York.

The president, the nation's first chief executive to break the two-term tradition, had planned to stay at Warm Springs another week, then he was to return to Washington and spend one day before taking a train to San Francisco to open the April 25 United Nations conference to which he had given so much attention in recent months.

Long before his presidency, Mr. Roosevelt helped found the Warm Springs Foundation for polio victims. In recent months he had taken a deep interest in expending it for service men afflicted with the disease.

The president's wife was flown from Washington in an Army plane and was taken immediately to the Warm Springs Foundation, where Mr. Roosevelt died.

The Army supplied an airplane for the journey to Warm Springs but said that for reasons of personal safety the take-off time would not be announced.

Going with Mrs. Roosevelt on the trip were Adm. Ross McIntyre, the late president's personal physician, and his press secretary, Stephen Early.

Mrs. Roosevelt had received Vice President Truman in her second floor sitting room in the White House. There she made the remark about being grieved first for the people.

The funeral train left Warm Springs Friday, arriving at Washington Saturday for the funeral at 4 p.m. in the East Room of the White House. The room seats only 200 and only highest U. S. and foreign officials attended.

In Washington at 6:09 p.m., Vice President Harry S. Truman took the oath as the nation's 32nd chief executive.

Guards patrolled the third floor corridor all night. The neighborhood was quiet in contrast to the throngs which stood across from the White House for hours, far into the darkness.

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT—Thirty-first president of the United States died suddenly, April 12 at 3:35 p.m., central war time, of a massive cerebral hemorrhage at Warm Springs, Ga., at the Little White House on top of Pine Mountain where he came March 30th for a three weeks rest.

Mrs. Roosevelt Tells Truman

It was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who summoned Mr. Truman from his capitol office to the White House and told him her husband was dead.

While waiting she sent messages to the four Roosevelt sons in the armed forces—James, Elliott, Franklin, Jr., and John—telling them of their fathers' passing.

He slept away this afternoon, she told them. He did his job to the end, as he would want to do. Bless you all and all our love. She signed it Mother.

Sorry For The People

"I am more sorry for the people of the country and the world than I am for us," the president's widow said of his death.

She told Mr. Truman "The president has passed away."

Truman asked: "What can I do?"

"Tell us what we can do," Mrs. Roosevelt replied. "Is there any way we can help you?"

This exchange was made public by Early.

Mr. Roosevelt's last words were:

"I have a terrific headache."

He spoke them to Com. Harold Bruenn, naval physician.

Mr. Roosevelt, 63, was sitting in front of a fireplace in the little White House here atop Pine Mountain when the attack struck him.

Bruenn described it as a massive cerebral hemorrhage.

The president's Negro valet, Arthur Prettyman, and a Filipino messboy carried him to his bedroom. He was unconscious at the end.

Mr. Roosevelt, in the third month of his fourth term as president, came here three weeks ago to rest.

The death removed from world councils one of the Big Three—Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill—who worked together to win the war and laid joint plans for keeping the peace. Truman likewise has stressed the need for international cooperation.

Stilled As Peace Nears

The White House career of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, first President of the United States to be elected to a third term and later to a fourth term, embraced tumultuous, significant years at home and abroad.

They were years of gloomy economic depression and widespread unemployment in the nation — a backwash from a chaotic Europe exhausted by the first World War; yet hopeful years of an attempted new order, termed by him "The New Deal"; years of internecine strife in his own Democratic party; of quarrels with "big business"; of violent opposition to his startling attempted reorganization of the Supreme Court; years which saw totalitarian governments rise in Europe and democratic governments crushed and, finally, a new war in the Old World, the black clouds of which rolled ominously over American shores.

History has yet to record his niche in the halls of time. But certainly the period in which he headed the American government was one of the gravest in its modern history.

Possessed of a charming personality and a radio voice which entranced his hearers in his nationwide "Fireside Chats," he was idolized by millions of his countrymen and hated by others. As a vote getter he was without a peer. His popularity with the masses overlapped that of his famous, dynamic cousin, the late President Theodore Roosevelt.

Truman Becomes 32nd President

Oath Is Administered By Justice Stone Following Pres. Roosevelt's Death

Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, was sworn in as President by Chief Justice Stone who administered the oath of office at 7:09 p.m., central war time, April 12th.

Solemnly he repeated the oath of the nation's highest office and, immediately, became thirty-second president of the United States.

President Truman was born at Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884 and is sixty years of age. As a youth he was a typical American boy. He served as Captain in World War I, he attended

HARRY S. TRUMAN becomes 32nd President of United States April 12th at 6:09 p.m., central war time.

Law School at Kansas City, Mo. after which he served as a Missouri County Judge. He was elected to the U. S. Senate in 1934 and became Vice-President under President Roosevelt's fourth term.

Sworn in two hours and 34 minutes after Mr. Roosevelt's death in Warm Springs, Ga., as a shocked capital sought to weigh the import of the sudden change, Truman announced in quick succession:

1. He will try to carry on as he believes President Roosevelt would have done.

2. The San Francisco United Nations Conference will go on as scheduled April 25.

3. He has asked the Roosevelt cabinet to stay on with him.

4. The war will be pressed to a "successful conclusion."

Makes First Statement

The new chief executive, following induction into office made the following statement:

"The world may be sure that we will prosecute the war on both fronts, East and West, with all the vigor we possess, to a successful conclusion."

Harry S. Truman entered the White House Thursday night as president in one of the most critical periods in his nation's history with humble confidence that he is big enough to meet the burdens of a wartime presidency.

He entered it with a determination to call upon the best brains of the country to help guide him through the perils of war, peace negotiations and reconversion.

American Engineer Plans Great Dams for Asia

Dr. Savage of U. S. Dept. of Interior Proposes Extensive Flood Control and Irrigation Systems for China, India, Palestine.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

Recently I sat with a group of my colleagues at a table and listened to a shy, elderly man, who might have been a professor of Greek, talk about dams. Just a moment before I had been in the newsroom reading of the terrible destruction which had levelled the cities of Europe. I couldn't help thinking of the paradox of civilization as this quiet man, who is the designing engineer for the greatest dams in the world, Grande Coulee, Boulder, Shasta, the Norris dam in the Tennessee valley and scores of others all over the world, outlined construction projects for Asia. His program is the exact antithesis of what is going on in Europe.

John Lucian Savage is chief designing engineer of the bureau of reclamation of the department of the interior. He has just returned from 14 months in the Far East where he has conferred with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China and with officials in India and Palestine on construction projects which dwarf the world's greatest efforts in this direction.

Dr. Savage discussed these undertakings as if they were some beautiful little works of art which had, perhaps, a utilitarian value, but which after all were creations of the imagination, important in themselves. In the course of a half hour or so he outlined projects which would affect the life of literally millions of people for untold generations and might well change the course, not only of their history, but the world's.

He went to the Far East representing the U. S. government, loaned by the department of the interior to the state department as a specialist under its cultural program. Much has been said (with eyebrows slightly raised) about Uncle Sam's effort to spread American culture and help import some of that product from other nations. Most people do not realize that cultural matters include 10,500,000-kilowatt-waterpower plants.

"We went down the (Yangtze) river from Chungking," said Dr. Savage as if he were describing a moonlight ride on the Potomac, "by steamboat and launch to within 15 kilometers (about nine miles) of Ichang." (Later it was explained that he had to stop because it happened that a war was going on in that vicinity.) "I had with me all the topographical data I could find and I had spotted three possible dam sites from these maps. I stayed with General —— (name omitted for security reasons). I asked him if he had any topographic maps that might be helpful to me. He replied that he had captured an aerial map from the Japanese."

Studies Map, Selects Five Sites for Dams

The map proved to be excellent and one could almost see the engineer's mouth water as he examined it, picking out sights simply crying to be dammed. Then, still as if it were all a great lark, he said that he went on down the river to within three miles of the battle lines (perhaps the genial general-host had called off the war for the afternoon). Anyhow, Dr. Savage said, smiling, that he had selected five possible dam sites.

The dam in the Yangtze gorge, he told us, will probably be about 750 feet high and there will be 20 tunnels of about 50 feet diameter to divert the river flow. Boulder dam on the Colorado, he told us for comparison, was 730 feet high and had only four such tunnels.

There will be 24 generating plants, each generating 110,000 kilowatts of electricity. They will equal five times the ultimate capacity of the Grande Coulee dam and ten times its present development of 10,560,000 kilowatts. The average total output of electrical energy for one year on the Yangtze will be 71,300,000,000 kilowatt-hours.

Within the present range of distribution live more Chinese than the entire population of the United States —140 millions.
